Thirty cent cotton has saved the day. We are not going to have that panic after all. It takes more than an army of boll weevils to knock old Chilton off the rail.

There is so much adulterated booze being sold these days that the Coosa County moonshiners are talking of adopting a trade mark for their product.

If we had possessed $1000 October 1st we would have now $20,000. We would have put it all in cotton and fattened up with the balance of the gamblers.

You havn't any kick coming. If you didn't get all your cotton picked during the late [illegible] say a word. Just take your medicine like a man and resolve to do better next time.

There is one line of endeavor in which "evolution" or progress is traveling at a merry clip. That is in the development of fools. An aviator at Mitchell Field flew at the rate of 5 miles per minute last Friday.

According to the "grade system" it takes 20 years to give a boy a finished education. That's a fat snap for young America to look forward to if his dad can dig up the kale. To the vast majority that is a prohibitive proposition.

Some fool syndicate offered Ex-governor Walton, of Oklahoma, $3000 per week to lecture for six weeks. If he don't accept that offer by wire he is a bigger fool than even his enemies think he is.

If the street department will patch that hole in the pavement on the north side of Second Avenue, between the Sartor and Tom Kemp stores it will be our treat. Either do it or have it done. (Coosa county corn barred.)

Some of the female social queens "down east" have gone the men one better in indecent dress. They now go out in public in full dress pajamas—in common parlance known as "undies."

Ex-governor Walton of Oklahoma [illegible] to carry his impeachment troubles to the United States court. Upon what grounds, pray? Oklahoma is a free American state and is supposed to be able to exercise her constitutional right of self-government.

The efficient whitewash squad at Montgomery is working over-time now trying to cover up the black spots in the management of Banner mines. Deputy wardens and doctors are being swapped about like shuffling cards, but the Jefferson county grand jury is still on the trail. Whoop 'em up, Davis.

THE PROBATE ELECTION CONTEST

We have so very many inquiries in regard to the status of the election contest that we deem it wise to give out the facts that all may know.

The contest has been duly filed and docketed. A demand has been sent to the polling lists and the cash put up to pay for same.

Each legal step is being taken promptly in order and the contest will reach its final stage just as soon as all of these preliminary requirements can be disposed of. To the ordinary citizen the progress, no doubt, seems slow, but the law must be complied with to a nicety in matters of this kind.

There is an old saying that tells us, "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding fine." This applies especially to a law case involving the issues of a contest.

Don't worry, the contest is moving along all right.

BUSINESS HOLDING UP GOOD

One of the best barometers to indicate business conditions is the wholesale trade.

For several days we have been sounding out the sentiment of some of the traveling salesmen who make this territory regularly, month after month, and, without exception, they have reported very favorably indeed as to their sales and collections and say they do not see the slightest indication of panicy conditions nor hard times ahead.

Monday we visited our local wholesale firms and were not only gratified, but also surprised, to find them very optimistic as to the future and also doing a greater amount of business than ever before.

This sounds mighty good to us and we hope it will have the same effect on our readers. The thing to do is brace up, look on the bright side and go right ahead with your business, whether it is farming, mercandising or laboring. Get up a pride put some pep in your line, whatever it be and let's go. The past is gone. The future is what we make it.

GERMANY SHOULD PAY

Germany planned and put over the most cruel and inhuman war that the world has ever known.

They took plenty of time to work out every hellish detail and laid their plans with all of the evil gusto of demons. They gloated over the pure vandalism of their armies and set a pace for brutal and inhuman beastality that must have caused a blush of shame even in hell.

Thwarted in their vicious designs against civilization, they begged for mercy before the victors ever invaded their country and wantonly destroyed their towns and industrie homes and people in a righteous retaliation.

They signed a treaty of peace agreeing to pay for their wanton destruction and also to pay an indemnity for forcing these peaceful nations into war.

In keeping with their many other acts of rascality and vandalism, they have evaded, even to this good day, the payment of these just obligations. They have even gone to the extent of flooding their own country with paper money that is [illegible] worthless and have now even repudiated that.

The conference of Nations that is going to pass on the ability of Germany to pay have an easy task. None of her vast industrial sources of wealth have been impaired and Germany is as potentially able to pay these righteous claims as she was to finance a war that wrote its demands in billions.

Make her pay the last red cent, or back up France and Belgium and tell them to go get theirs. Germany deserves neither sympathy nor leinency.

If you want to be popular and prosperous you have to tickle the gang and make excuses for the grafters. If you want to be honest and in poverty, turn on the light, expose the frauds and call the hand of the parasites. Gallop with the gang and share the spoils. Line up for honest policies and die in the poor house.

Mr. J. W. Thornton of Cooper was here Monday. Mr. Thornton is one of the worthy and true citizens of Beat 10.

LOOKS LIKE COLLUSION

A great deal of surprise and dissatisfaction was rife all over the cotton belt when the Federal Government put out their 11,000,000 bale estimate on the cotton crop October 1.

Everyone who was at all acquainted with the real condition of the crop at that time was thunderstruck. There was no visible basis for such a report. It is true that a large acreage was planted but the weather and the weevils had long ago eliminated the possibility of predicting anything like a report based on acreage and, it seems, that everybody else knew it except the Federal estimators.

The report was absolutely the most farcial of any of the numerous inaccuracies dealt in by that pernicious branch of our Federal government and cost the farmers of the cotton belt untold millions, while it made millionaires out of stock gamblers and multi-millionaires out of the Ferterlizer barons.

Of course it would not do to charge direct that there existed an understanding between the Federal Department of agriculture and the Fertilizer Trust, but when we remember that this same Fertilizer octupus contributed $3,000,000 to the Republican slush fund during the last campaign, the surprising October cotton estimate looks a little suspicious, to say the least of it.

Shakespear said, when you found the heifer lying on the ground with her throat cut and the butcher standing over her with a bloody knife in his hand, there was at least room to suspect who done the deed. The idea conveyed is especially applicalble in this case.

Fertilizer notes fall due Oct. 15. A 11,000,000 bale estimate on Oct. 1 broke the market, of course, and sent the price of cotton tumbling. The farmer had to settle at this low figure and take the consequences. The cotton changed hands and the Fertilizer Trust was ready to take its profits. Then, pat comes the November report and the market goes skyrocketing to 30 cents and better, so the Trust can unload and not only amass millions in money at the expense of the innocent cotton farmers, but recoup, with compound interest, the $3,000,000 contribution to the slush fund.

It is a much simpler game than playing seven up, for in this game one party holds all of the cards and does all of the dealing, and long years of manipulating the game has eliminated every element of chance and made the swindle an absolute certainty.

It looks to us very much like that "Report" service is a most objectionable feature of expense that can not possibly be of service to any one except the stock gambler, and the wonder is that a united farmer vote of the entire nation does not demand its abolishment. They would do it if they only had time to figure out the pernicious uses that this palpable stock gamblers friend is put to.

GET UP A LOBBY

If the people living along the B. & M. Highway ever expect to get any road building service it is an evident fact that they will have to organize and go after it.

We have suggested before, and we reiterate that suggestion now, that every town and community along the line of this very important road select delegates to go before the Highway Commissioners and put forward our rights and our claims personally to them and insist that, at least, a meed of justice be meted out to us, even at this late day.

We also insist that this movement take shape immediately. We can not afford to delay. Time is passing and the available money is going out in streams and if we procrastinate much longer it may be everlastingly too late.

As a starter in this movement, we suggest, as Clanton is about centrally located on this road, that each town and community along the line write to, or get in touch with Dr. V. J. Gragg, Mayor of our town and through him have a definate understanding, arrange for a hearing before the commission and then go down in force and in earnest and demand what they should have given us long ago.

It is possible, that under the old commisison, a little political soreness may have been in our way heretofore, but that is entirely eliminated now and NOW is the time to strike, not next month or next year.

If our country was allowed to function according to the original plans and specifications we would all get rich. Even the way it is butchered up by fool laws and consciousless grafters it is the only country we know where a dollar of its money is worth 100 cents.

Messrs. J. M. Baker and Calvin Payton, two prosperous farmers and good citizens on Route 3, were in town Monday looking after business affairs.

Messs. E. L. and W. L. Lenoir of Beat 2 were jurors here last week. This week Mr. C. B. Lenoir of Beat 3 is serving on the jury. This is a splendid trio and any man is safe whose justice rests with jurors of this type.

Mrs. T. R. Williams of Maplesville was among the out-of-town visitors here Sunday.

Mr. R. T. Robinson of Jemison was here the first of the week looking after some important business affairs. Mr. Robinson is a prosperous merhcant who has reared a large and successful family several miles east of Jemison.

Mr. R. C. McDavid made a brief business trip over to the Gate City in Georgia the early part of the week.

THE MUSCLE SHOALS SITUATION EXPLAINED

The action of the Secretary of War in selling to the Alabama Power Company, as reported in the Manufacturers Record last week, the Gorgas plant, about which there has been so much discussion, for $3,472,487.25 cash after due notice to Mr. Henry Ford had been given by the Secretary, should close to the credit of the Government an issue which has been entirely too much confused.

From the very first discussion of Mr. Ford's offer in regard to Muscle Shoals, which included the Gorgas plant the Manufacturers Record took the position that whatever legal or moral rights might exist under any contract with the Government should be rigidly observed by the Government. This Government cannot afford even for any imaginary benefit, however great it might be, to dishonor its own contracts or to do anything which legally and ethically would not be upheld in the highest courts of justice.

The Government and the Alabama Power Company entered into a contract during the war; the terms of that contract were plain. At that time the contract was considered to be of very great value to the Government. Mr. Henry Ford, in endeavoring to secure at an absurdly low price the control of the Muscle Shoals situation on a 100 year contract, sought to include in the purchase the Gorgas Steam Plant which neither legally nor morally could the Government have granted except with the permission of the second party to the contract, the Alabama Power Company.

In closing the contract with the Alabama Power Company the Secretary of War has stood for integrity of contracts, and that is worth infinitely more to the people of this country than would have been the purchase of the entire Muscle Shoals situation by Mr. Henry Ford. With all due respect to Mr. Ford's phenomenal industrial development operations, and to his amazing genius as a business man, the Manufacturers Record would far prefer that he should never come into the South for the establishment of a plant than that his coming should be based on the violation by the Government of legal and moral obligations. Maintenance of honor in the observance of a contract by the Government, as by individuals, is worth far more to national honor, and ultimately national wealth than a "short cut" to supposed wealth by violating contracts.

The original cost of the Gorgas plant, built during the high prices of war times, was as reported by the Government about $4,750,000. Based on the advice of experts from the Ordnance Depatment and the Federal Power Commission in determining a fair value of the properties as they stand, the Alabama Power Company and the Government agreed to a selling price of $3,472,487.25, an exceptionally small loss to the Government on the sale of a war plant in contrast with the tremendous losses made in the sale of other plants.

In connection with the small loss on the sale of this plant it is of interest to study a report recently issued by the Government showing the original cost and the sale price of many war properties. In a great many cases this report shows that the cost of properties was unknown when sales were effected.

Some of the losses reported are staggering in amount. For instance, there was one property in North Carolina which cost $221,618 which sold for $740; one property in Otisville, N. Y., costing $1,650,723 sold for $67,300; one property in Georgia costing $1,563,000 sold for $2600; A Michigan property costing $12,330,000 sold for $584,000. An Iowa property costing $5,867,000 sold for $251,000. Camp Upton, in New York, sold for $281,000, while Camp Lee, in Virginia, costing $12,000,000 sold for $241,948, and Camp Dodge $2,832,000 sold for $35,808.

The Nitro, W. Va., plant costing $60,000,000 sold for $8,851,000 and a Tennessee plant costing $86,000,000 sold for $3,455,000.

In the light of such figures as these the price secured by the Government for the Gorgas plant is remarkably high, and it is to the credit of the purchasing company that it was willing to abide by the judgment of Government experts in taking it at that price.

MOVING TO MT. CREEK

Mr. Connell, of the firm of Connell & Kendrick, has bought out the store of Mr. G. W. Cobern, at Mt. Creek, and is moving his store from Clanton to that place this week.

Clanton is sorry to lose good citizens like Mr. Connell, but our very best wishes go with him to his new home. He wil find some mighty good people down there.

"J. B." WILL FIX IT

The recent heavy rains have done considerable damage to the embankments to make the approach to the new railroad bridge on fourth avenue. A considerable amount of caving in resulted and the approach from the west side was especially damaged.

But there is no cause for worry for Col. J. B. Atkinson, who has charge of the street department, will have it properly attended to.

NEW STAND.

The big mercantile establishment of J. H. McDonald has moved from the former stand near the railroad, into the building recently vacated by the Variety Store, up near the Marion Gore corner.

Mr. McDonald is carrying a splendid line of brand new high class merchandise and his prices are made with an eye to getting the business. Call on him when in town.

Girls, Do You Want Little "Miss Alabama"?

The Cutest Ma-Ma Doll In the World—The Birmingham News to Give Away 1,000 of These Wonderful Dolls

Little Miss Alabama is twenty inches tall, she walks, talks, sleeps, winks and blinks, and she is for you—all the way from the tips of her patent leather slippers and pink silk stockings to the top of her organdie and lace bonnet. She has the prettiest bobbed brown hair and big blue eyes that shut when you put her to bed.

The pink organdie dress, trimmed with lace, just matches the bonnet and comes off and so does the petticoat and undies so you can make more clothes.

Everything Little "Miss Alabama" does will delight you. Take her by the hand and she can WALK with you. Lay her down and off she goes to SLEEP like a good dolly. Take her up, and open come the big blue eyes wide awake and she will call you "MA-MA" right out loud. That will win your heart for sure. She can WINK, too. Oh, she's just full of fun and longing to come and live with you.

You can get little "Miss Alabama" without cost by securing five new subscribers to the daily and Sunday Birmingham News.

Here are two working plans for securing subscriptions: FIRST—COLLECT NO MONEY on subscriptions secured in towns where we have regular carrier delivery service. Simply have the new subscribers agree to take the daily and Sunday News for a period of SIX MONTHS and pay our regular agent at the rate of 20c per week or 85c per month. Write the name and address of the NEW SUBSCRIBER on a sheet of paper and mail to The News office. SECOND—COLLECT IN ADVANCE on subscriptions secured in all towns where we have no regular carrier delivery service, or on R. F. D. routes. Subscriptions must be paid in advance for six months at regular mail rate as follows: Daily and Sunday in small towns where we have no agent, $4.00. Daily and Sunday on R. F. D. routes in Alabama, $3.25. Under this plan you collect the money and send to The News office with the correct names and addresses of the FIVE NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

ONLY NEW SUBSCRIBERS COUNT. A new subscriber is a person not at present a reader of the daily and Sunday Birmingham News, and who has not been a subscriber in the past thirty days.

The Birmingham News reserves the right to verify orders, subscriber's responsibility and newness of subscriptions.

MOTHERS, ATTENTION! Christmas is coming. It is not too early to get your gifts together. This doll will not only please your own daughter, but will also make an excellent gift for the children of your friends and relatives. Why not keep this in mind and take advantage of our offer?

IS IMPROVING

The latest news from the bedside of State Highway Engineer W. S. Kellar, who has been desperately low at a hospital in Minnesota: is to the effect that he is slowly recovering.

Mr. Kellar has many friends in Alabama who will be glad to get this pleasing news.

Mr. Marion Foshee, formerly clerk of the Chilton County Circuit Court, but now one of the owners and publishers of the DeKalb County Republican, was in the city this week greeting his old friends and attending to some personal business. He is looking fine and says times are prosperous up in his section.

NEW FIRM

Messrs. Jesse Baker and Roland ... have formed a partnership and gone into the general mercantile business at the stand just vacated by Conwell and Kendrick.

Business property in Clanton never finds an opportunity to rest. When one moves out another is already waiting for the place.

Mr. A. E. Bearden and wife of Birmingham were here Sunday. Mr. Bearden was reared in Maplesville, but has since cast his lot in the Imeprial County of Jefferson and found his better half there and is now making good with the Parisian Clothing Firm.

AS TO HIGHWAY BUILDING

In view of the fact that such a large percent of the Road Bond money has already been spent on high grade finished up road projects, we think it would be wise for the new Board of Commissioners to consider other methods of road construction, that would not be so terribly expensive, with the end in view of allowing a larger percent of the citizens an opportunity of reaping some of the beenfits of the tax money they have saddled themselves with.

We see from the reports given out by the Commissioners that the projects already projected and built are costing from $35,000 to $40,000 per mile.

At that rate of expenditure it does not take a very brilliant feat in figuring to show, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that, relatively speaking, only a very small area of the state will be able to obtain any of the benefits of the Bond issue.

We are in favor of good, substantial roads, capable of caring for all of the traffic offered, but we do not see why such a road should cost as much, or more, as the building and laying with rails, of a first grade railroad.

To our way of thinking, this is an absurd proposition. It does not appeal to us as being reasonable.

Why would it not be wise to let all of the future projects out on a different basis? Why undertake to build a paved, or an asphalt finished road, on a foundation more massive than the road bed that carries successfully the very heaviest of railroad traffic?

It seems to us that the part of wisdom would be to discard a part of this high class technique and call into play a little more good, hard common sense. Why not build us some real roads, with good, substantial and well drained foundations and finished up with clay and gravel? That will cut the cost down at least 65 percent and enable more people to get some of the benefits of the bond money.

Experience has already shown us conclusively that the present system of construction will exhaust all of the money before even an appreciable percent of the people get any service.

Now is a good time for some of these great big broad minded "constructive" citizens to show us their "faith by their works" by taking up the cudgels in behalf of the dear pee-pul and evolving a system that will give the State of Alabama at least a semblance of a road system that she can exhibit as a return for her $50,000,000 investment.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY AT HIGH SCHOOL

On Wednesday night, October 31, the Lanerian Literary Society of the Chilton County High School delightfully entertained the Tutwiler Society and Faculty at the high school building. A gala sight greeted the guests as they entered for Hallowe'en ideas were carried on in the decorations. Jack O' Lanterns grinned gruesomely and occasionally a ghost slid noiselessly about.

A number of booths were arranged which caused much merriment. Famous among them were "The Only Living Creature possessing a Head and Heart and no Body," "The Green Goose," "The Dwarf," "For Women Only" and "For Men Only." "The Fish Pond" was a source of much hilarity when the articles were taken from the end of the fishing rod. But perhaps the most popular booth was the fortune teller's tent, for every boy and girl at old Chilton High was deeply anxious to hear what the future held in store for him or her. A neat little sum was realized from the booths which was turned over to the Athletic Association to use in purchasing equipment for the school's ever increasing athletic activities.

After everybody had had an opportunity to view all the wonders the booths had to offer, the refreshment committee invited the merry crowd into the auditorium where a most delightful plate consisting of fruit salad served in orangne cups, and punch was served.

At the end of the happy evening everyone was loud in his praise of the Lanerian Society as hostess.

Railroad are the most regulated business in the United States. The all of 99 state and national L created by law to tell the railroads they must and must not do. But business is individual initiative in its efforts by such a control.

Notwithstanding the legislative restrictions, the Railroads, most efficient private management, have been making rapid progress in rehabilitating the transportation plant after the well-nigh disastrous period of Government operation and control, and are successfully handling the peak traffic load.

In spite of the fact that net earnings have been small, the railroads of the country are spending this year a billion and a half dollars in the purchase of new locomotives, freight and passenger cars, better tracks, bridges and terminal facilities, in order that the nation's business may move unhampered and the public may be adequately served.

A Buick for Business

With its roadsters for 1924, Buick has again created a new standard of roadster utility and attractiveness. Nor can the appearance of this four-cylinder two-passenger model convey in full its story. The famous Buick valve-in-head engine provides even greater flexibility and acceleration than before. The proved Buick four-wheel brakes assure more than ample safety for any emergency.

Business of today demands a sturdy, powerful, safe and dependable car—one that remains constantly in service. This new two-passenger, four-cylinder Roadster is one of Buick's contributions and answers to this demand.

When You Catch Cold Rub on Musterole

Musterole is easy to apply and it gets in its good work right away. Often it prevents a cold from turning into "flu" or pneumonia. Just apply Musterole with the fingers. It does all the good work of grandmother's mustard plaster without the blister.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made of oil of mustard and other home simples. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Try Musterole for sore throat, cold on the chest, rheumatism, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of all sorts.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Black-Draught Proves Valuable Remedy for Liver and Stomach Troubles, Says North Carolina Parents.

Leland, N. C.—"I will write in regard to Black-Draught liver medicine, as I have been using it more than eighteen years," says a letter written from this place by Mr. S. F. Mintz, of R. F. D. 2. "I keep it in my home all the time, for it is mostly our family medicine. When we begin to feel feverish or sluggish, with trouble from the liver or stomach, we take a dose of Thedford's Black-Draught and the trouble is soon over. I mostly buy a dollar package at a time, and it has saved me many a bill."

Mrs. Mintz says she takes Black-Draught for colds and billousness. "It is a low country where we live," she says, "and in the spring when I get up feeling sluggish, and ache, nothing I eat tastes good. I know my liver needs to act and I use Black-Draught, and very soon I am feeling just fine . . . I have eight children and we make tea from Black-Draught for them when they have colds."

For more than 80 years, Thedford's Black-Draught has been a popular, standard remedy for simple liver, stomach and bowel troubles. More than nine million packages are now sold per annum, as a result of its proven merit.

Means of Transportation Should All Be Unified

How improved highways are expanding the business and life of the nation, and why all means of transportation should be unified into one integral unit, was outlined in two recent speeches by Roy D. Chapin, chairman of the highways committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. In both addresses Mr. Chapin was chosen as spokesman on good roads for the automobile industry.

One occasion was the dedication of the Zero Milestone monument in Washington, D. C. Speaking in behalf of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Chapin said, in part:

"Time was when all roads led to Rome. The world moves westward—civilization follows the same pathway and today we dedicate this visible mark of a new era—when all roads lead to Washington. From this Zero Milestone will radiate to the homes in America—improved highways over which will pass daily tens of millions of our people and a vast proportion of our commerce.

"Billions will be expended on our roads in our lifetime, that highway transport may adequately serve us. Partly from economic, but more largely from human reasons, we must all give pause and study this newly powerful agent of marching civilization."

Just previously Mr. Chapin advocated a unification of air, rail and water transportation, in a speech to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. He said in part:

"We of America stand in the transition stage of the greatest development of transportation in all of the history of the world.

"In the past it has been said that transportation has been the pawn of kings in shaping the course of empires.

"Today it has become the tool of the individual in working out the problem of the family.

"Turning then to the immediate question of co-ordination of all our facilities of transportation, it seems to me the dominant theme must be service. The form or type of carrier used is secondary to the demand for efficient and completed transportation. Even cost is secondary, because efficient service is always the least costly in the long run."

Highway Leads to Long Extinct Mexican Volcano

Of the many spiral roads built for ascending steep mountain summits one of the most interesting is that which has recently been completed to the crater of the extinct volcano Macuntepec in the vicinity of Jalapa, a city of the State of Vera Cruz, Mex., 70 miles by rail from the port of Vera Cruz, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Jalapa is picturesquely situated on the slope of the sierra which separates the central plateau of Mexico from the Gulf coast, at an elevation of 4,300 feet. To the south of it the peak of Cofre de Perote rises to a height of 13,419 feet, and still farther south that of Orizaba, 18,700 feet, the highest peak in Mexico and the second highest in North America.

The new road starts at a point on the national highway to Mexico City that is about a mile and a quarter from the center of Jalapa. For a distance of about half a mile to a gate at the entrance of the hill the road is on private property, and here it is about thirteen feet wide with a 6 per cent grade. From the hill entrance to its summit the road is 11½ feet wide, with a maximum grade of 4 per cent, excepting in a few spots where an increased grade of 6 per cent was necessary. This part of the road is all on sidehill cuts, excepting a short stretch of about 328 feet at the end of the first complete circuit of the hill, where it was possible to build the road on the surface without any cutting.

For reasons of safety it was decided to make two one-way roads, one for ascending and the other for descending.

The descending road starts with a grade of 8 per cent and nearly parallels the last part of the ascending road until it strikes the crater, the edge of which it follows until it reaches the point where the ascending road enters the crater, the whole being a distance of 1,950 feet, the last 280 of which is in the crater with a 10 per cent grade.

Deposit of Asphalt Is Discovered in Alabama

A deposit of asphalt is reported to have been discovered in one of the Tennessee valley counties. If the report is true and the deposit is of any value it adds another item to the wonderful resources of this state and incidentally means great things for road building in the state.—Fort Payne Journal.

Highway Bridge Construction.

Since 1916 more than thirty miles of bridges have been built under the federal-aid highway program. One of the largest of these bridges, that from Mandan to Bismarck, N. D., is more than three and one-half miles long and cost $1,428,000.

THREE STANDARD SALAD DRESSINGS

Use Mayonnaise Dressing for This Tempting Pear Salad.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The advantages of making one's own salad dressing are that the ingredients may be slightly varied to suit the individual taste, a greater quantity may be obtained for the same amount of money, and the dressing may be made fresh as often as desired. The following standard recipes, tested by the United States Department of Agriculture, will meet most requirements. French or oil and vinegar dressing is preferred on dinner salads by many people, while boiled or mayonnaise dressing is more suitable on salads that form the main dish of a meal, or for use in sandwiches. An excellent "cold slaw" can be made by pouring hot boiled dressing over drained raw cabbage which has been shaved thin and soaked in cold water for an hour. The slaw should be pressed down in a bowl with a weighted plate and chilled before using.

Oil and Vinegar Dressing.

½ teaspoonful salt	6 tablespoonfuls oil (olive, cottonseed, peanut, or other table oil).
2 tablespoonfuls cider vinegar
Few grains cayenne

Mix the ingredients and beat them until they are well mixed.

Cooked Salad Dressing.

2 egg yolks	1 teaspoonful fat
¾ cupful milk	¾ tablespoonful flour
¼ cupful vinegar	1 teaspoonful mustard
2½ tablespoonfuls butter or other fat

Mix all the dry ingredients with the egg yolks, beat until light, and add the melted fat, cold milk and hot vinegar. Cook in double boiler until the mixture coats the spoon. If it curdles, place the boiler at once into a pan containing cold water and beat until smooth. One whole egg may be used in place of two yolks.

Mayonnaise Dressing.

1 egg yolk	1 cupful salad oil (olive, cottonseed, peanut, or other table oil)
1 teaspoonful salt
½ teaspoonful mustard
½ teaspoonful cayenne	2 tablespoonfuls lemon juice and vinegar
1 tablespoonful sugar

Put the egg yolks into a cold bowl; add the seasonings and mix until smooth; then add the oil, at first only a few drops at a time, then in larger amounts, stirring constantly. As it thickens, thin with vinegar and lemon juice.

CHICKEN GUMBO MADE IN SOUTHERN STATES

Good Plan to Reduce Number of Unproductive Fowls.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Fowls which are no longer expected to lay well should be culled out of the flock in the fall to save feeding them. Roosters, and even young cockerels, are better eliminated to reduce the number of unproductive birds. The family may well profit by this process and enjoy chicken frequently. One of the most appetizing ways of serving it is to have chicken gumbo, which is neither a soup nor a stew, but which is hearty enough for a main luncheon or supper dish and needs no additional vegetables except rice.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following standard recipe to girls' clubs in the Southern states, where chicken gumbo is often canned as one of the well-known 4-H products:

Chicken Gumbo.

1 chicken weighing four or five pounds (old fowl may be used)	A few peppercorns
6 good-sized onions	2 red pepper pods
2 No. 3 cans tomatoes (or a corresponding amount of fresh tomatoes)	½ teaspoonful thyme
3 tablespoonfuls butter	2 tablespoonfuls salt (or salt to taste)
2 tablespoonfuls lard	4 quarts boiling water
6 whole cloves	2 No. 2 cans chopped or sliced okra (or a corresponding amount of fresh sliced okra)
2 bay leaves	Parsley and celery to taste

Clean the chicken and cut into pieces. Melt the lard and butter in a frying pan. When hot, put in the chicken and fry until brown. Take out the chicken and place in a stewpan. Peel the onions and chop fine; put them into the hot grease in which the chicken was browned and fry brown. Add this, with what grease is left in the pan, to the chicken. To this add the tomatoes, cloves, bay leaves, peppercorns, pepper pods, thyme and boiling water. Let the whole mixture simmer until meat slips from the bones. Take out the bones, mince the meat, return it to the soup mixture, add the salt, some chopped parsley and celery, and the canned okra. (If fresh okra is used, it should be added with the tomatoes.)

CLEANLINESS IS IMPORTANT

Provision Should Be Made at School for Washing Hands of Those Handling Food.

Cleanliness is as important in those who eat as in those who prepare the food, and whenever lunches are served in the school, provision should be made for washing the hands before the meal, the United States Department of Agriculture reminds us. No child who shows signs of a cold should prepare or serve food for others, and the dishes he uses should be kept separate from the rest.

HOW TO WASH REFRIGERATOR

So Far as Possible Receptacles Should Be Kept Clean by Little Preventive Measures.

The refrigerator should be thoroughly cleaned about once a week, at a time when it contains only a little ice, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Remove the ice and all the food. Take out the racks, wash them in hot water containing soap or soda, rinse, and wipe dry. If possible, remove the drainpipe, scrub inside with a long-handled spiral brush or swab, and scald. If the pipe is not removable, it should nevertheless be thoroughly cleaned out, for it many contain not only solid matter from the melting ice, but also slime formed by the organisms that thrive in such a dark, cool, moist situation. The small trap in the drainpipe should also be cleaned, and the drain pan washed and scalded. Wash the inside of the refrigerator with hot water containing soap or soda, rinse, and dry thoroughly. A small pointed stick like a skewer may be used to clean the corners and seams.

So-called "iceless" refrigerators should be cleaned as regularly as those of the ice-box type—the shelves washed and sunned, and, if possible, two sets of curtains provided, so that each can be washed and sunned every other week. Food safes, bread boxes, and other receptacles for food should likewise be washed, scalded, and aired regularly to prevent mold and decay.

So far as possible, refrigerators should be kept clean by preventive care. Wash the ice before it is put into the ice compartment and keep all food in clean and usually covered dishes. Never put food away hot. It is advisable to inspect the contents of the refrigerator frequently for spoiled food. Anything spilled should be wiped up immediately.

SUGAR HAS A USEFUL PLACE

Allowance of Two Ounces of Sweets Per Day Is Not Too Much for Growing Child.

Sugar has a useful place in children's diet as a fuel food and as a flavoring material, the United States Department of Agriculture believes. For a child eight to ten years old an allowance of two ounces of sugar a day to be used in cooking or eaten on cereals, fruits, and in other ways, is not too much. The point to remember about sugar and sweets in a child's diet is that they should be served chiefly at the end of the meal. If eaten between meals or at the beginning of a meal, they take away the appetite for more important foods.

The same man was scheduled to speak there again the following month, and when he came the boys were prepared for him; an empty purse lay hidden in every pair of trousers. And sure enough at the end of his speech he called another boy to him. "Have you a purse, little man?" he asked.

"Yes, sir."

"I'm glad of that," said the speaker. "If you hadn't I should have given you half a dollar to buy one."—Boston Transcript.

The Compensation.

A popular clergyman says that if his sermon ever stretches beyond the 20 minutes to which he intends to limit it, the words of his little daughter ring in his ears, and he reflects that some of his congregation doubtless share her feelings.

The occasion was the little girl's sixth birthday, which chanced to come on Thanksgiving day.

She went to church with her mother and sat quietly through the service. The sermon was unusually good, the minister could not help thinking; he had plenty to say, and he said it fluently.

"How did you like my sermon?" he asked his young critic as they walked home together, her small hand in his big one.

"You preached awful long, father," said the little girl, "but I stood it because I love you and I knew I'd have a nice dinner when I got home and forget what I'd been through."—Harper's Magazine.

DAIRY TALK

Concrete Highways Are Help in Marketing Milk

Milk is an everyday commodity. The most important feature in marketing milk is to be able to deliver it as soon as possible after it is produced. On that item depends the success or failure of the dairying industry. It is a well-known fact that in the locations where the dairying industry is most successful, the community is served by a network of permanent highways, usable every day in the year.

Such a location is found in western Washington where nature has provided vast areas of green pasture land and man has built hundreds of miles of broad concrete highways, thus producing the combination which makes possible the production and the transportation of this vital, everyday necessity.

About twenty years ago a large milk products company constructed a small condensery at Kent, in western Washington. From this small beginning the enterprise grew until at the present time eight large condenseries are established, and these are located in communities where paved highways furnish quick and reliable transportation facilities from the farm to the condensery. Every day, winter or summer, rain or shine, hundreds of trucks are seen carrying milk from the farms to the plants.

Before the concrete highways were constructed, milk was hauled to the condensery by teams. By relaying teams it was possible to haul milk every day but the difficulties encountered and the time consumed by this method were great. The load was hauled part way by one team, which when exhausted was replaced by a fresh team for the remainder of the trip. Only small loads were possible, 2,500 pounds or 40 cans being considered a big load on unimproved roads.

As the condition of the roads improved and paved highways were built, trucks supplanted teams and routes were extended, until at the present time approximately 75 per cent of the milk received is transported by truck. Some trucks cover two or three routes, each of which formerly required a team. They bring in the milk in less time and haul larger loads. A comparison of two routes serving the Chehalis plant demonstrates the value of paved highways. One is an eight-mile route over poor roads and covered by a team; the other is a 25-mile route over concrete roads and is covered by a truck. Both routes start on their journey at the same time. The truck, covering 25 miles and delivering 100 cans of milk arrives at the condensery about 8:30 a. m. The team, covering only eight miles and delivering 50 cans, arrives about ten o'clock.

To market his milk the farmer needs only to set out his cans on a platform by the roadside. Along comes the truck over its established daily route, picks up the milk at the farmer's gate, delivers it to the plant and returns the empty cans on the return trip. By this system alone is it possible for many farmers to market their milk. Most farmers do not produce enough milk daily to warrant the trip to town with the milk, and for these farmers it would be unprofitable to bother with milk production if the milk routes were not established.

The hauling cost to the farmer varies with the distance his milk is hauled and with the condition of the road over which it is transported. Over paved highways the rate per hundredweight is noticeably less than over unimproved roads.

Among the most important items in milk hauling is the length of time the milk is on the road. Especially is this true in the summer time. Milk delivered by truck is always in better shape when it arrives at the condensery than milk delivered by wagon.

Milk for Young Calf.

After a calf is five weeks old it needs no whole milk unless very delicate. Increase the feed until 18 or 20 pounds are being fed daily. Wean at six months of age and if good hay and grain have been provided, weaning may be done earlier.

Give Dairy Cows Rest.

Give the dairy cows six or eight weeks rest between drying and freshening. It gives them an opportunity to put on some flesh and to get in good physical condition.

Secretary of Agriculture Takes Interest in Boys' and Girls' Work

A Quartet of Red Heads—Secretary Wallace and Three Club Members From One Family.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The fact that there are more than 500,000 members of boys' and girls' agricultural clubs in the United States does not prevent Secretary of Agriculture Wallace from taking a keen personal interest in what many of these youngsters are doing with their calves, pigs, chickens, gardens, and in canning and other home work. The secretary writes many letters to club members who have done particularly good work, and in return he receives many letters with details of the work they are doing and invitations to "come on out and look over our stock."

Secretary Receives a Letter.

Recently the secretary wrote a congratulatory letter to two Iowa club boys who had been successful with their cattle at the state fair. In reply he received the following letter signed "Cook Bros, per Cecil Cook":

"Dear Mr. Wallace: We were very glad to receive your letter of congratulation in regard to the calf club work. After showing at Des Moines we came back to Hardin county fair and were first in Hereford class and grand champion baby beef on the calf you mentioned. We also got first, second and third on Shorthorns. We also showed at the Central Iowa fair at Marshalltown last week, getting third on Hereford, showing against Yost and Cassady; and first, second and third on Shorthorns. The Hereford was within about top of the sale at Marshall. Two of our Shorthorns brought $14 per hundred, being the high selling Shorthorns of the sale.

"You are heartily invited to come out to see us whenever you are in Iowa or out this way."

All Four Red Heads.

In the picture Secretary Wallace is shown with three club girls, sisters members of a party that visited the Department of Agriculture. All in the group, including the secretary, are red heads.

Greenhouse Products in Increasing Demand

Glass Farming Has Become Important Industry.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Glass farming, or the growing of flowers and vegetables in greenhouses, has become an important industry in the United States, and according to the United States Department of Agriculture, the industry is constantly increasing because of the demand for vegetable and floral products of the quality that can be produced in the modern greenhouse. There are now more than 17,000 establishments employing some type of forcing structure for the production of plants, flowers, or vegetables, the glass area covering nearly 3,800 acres.

High-quality greenhouse products are finding an increased demand, and the industry offers special inducements to those having a knowledge of and a liking for the work. Success in this industry will depend much on the suitability and adequacy of the equipment. The fact that the quantity of coal used to maintain an acre of space inclosed in greenhouses at the required temperatures varies from 250 to 500 tons a season, indicates the need for the practice of every possible economy. According to Farmers' Bulletin No. 1318, Greenhouse Construction and Heating, just published by the United States Department of Agriculture, fuel losses in greenhouse heating are sustained because of poorly constructed houses, a faulty heating system, or the lack of repair of the house or the heating plant.

This bulletin discusses the construction and heating of greenhouses, giving such information as will be useful to those contemplating engaging in the business, and may be secured free of charge from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Profitable Stock Gains Made by Using Protein

Economical gains on cattle require a certain amount of protein. If clover or alfalfa hay is used as the entire roughage, additional protein need not be fed unless one ton of such protein rich feed as cottonseed meal or linseed meal, costs less than the value of three tons of alfalfa or clover. If alfalfa or clover is available, or is available as only a part of the roughage ration, more economical gains can be made by using a limited amount of cottonseed meal.

Control Fall Army Worm by Using Poisoned Bait

Garden and field crops, grasses and alfalfa are all prone to injury by the fall army worm. The pest may be controlled by using poison bait made by mixing an ounce of white arsenite with a pound of bran moistened with a pint and one-half of water to which have been added three ounces of molasses and the juice and chopped rinds of one-half dozen lemons.

Proper Sowing of Wheat Will Kill Hessian Fly

Wheat sown too soon serves as fall pasture for the Hessian fly, one of the crop's worst enemies, and enables the pest to live over and cut down the wheat crop of the following season. On the other hand, by delaying sowing until after the "fly free" dates, announced locally by county agricultural agents, farmers can break the life cycle of Hessian fly and rid their wheat crop of the pest the year following.

This is because the fly has two life cycles a year. Each cycle, if completed, has four stages. To cut into the succession at any point breaks up the whole business. From eggs laid on the leaves maggots hatch. These maggots feed on wheat stalks near the base of the leaves, sucking juice that should go to make grain, and damaging the stalk so that it breaks and lodges easily. This done, the maggots go into a puparia or flaxseed form that lives on in the soil.

Thus, by concerted late sowing of this crop a county can smash by starvation that fall brood of fly. And without a fall brood there can be no spring brood. But one or two fields of early-seeded wheat can infect a whole locality.

Utilizing Waste Roughage for Bedding Material

On every farm there is a large amount of roughage which is not fit to feed live stock. Sometimes this is in the form of weeds or broom sage; sometimes it is damaged hay or straw. Frequently this material is ignored or thrown in some place where it can never be made use of.

This sort of material makes excellent bedding for all classes of live stock, says Prof. L. V. Sarkey, chief of the animal husbandry division, in discussing the best usages of waste roughages. It absorbs the liquid manure and, when hauled on the fields, adds to the organic matter in the soil. When we take into consideration the fact that more than half the value of manure is in the liquid form, we can easily see how important it is to save the liquid and thus increase the fertility of the soil.

Feeding More Roughage Than Animals Consume

Some make a practice of feeding more roughage than the animals will consume and using what is refused for bedding. This is an extravagant and wasteful practice where good, clean hay is fed. The most successful feeders feed just what roughage the animals will clean up and use for bedding only that roughage which is too inferior to be consumed by the animals.

Satisfactory Hen Coop Made at Small Expense

How a satisfactory poultry house can be made at small expense by placing two piano boxes back to back and covering them with tar roofing paper is told in Farmers' Bulletin 1331, on Back Yard Poultry Keeping, which may be had free on application to the Department of Agriculture at Washington.

126,000 Miles of Cloth for Cement Sacks

To keep cement moving from the mills to the many building jobs always under way, cement manufacturers require an astonishing quantity of sacks.

This year the industry has considerably more than 225,000,000 sacks. These represent enough cotton cloth to make a skirt for every woman and girl in the United States—126,000 miles of 30-inch fabric. Even a moderate sized mill which ships say 1,000,000 barrels a year must have 2,000,000 or so sacks.

When a customer returns a sack he gets credit for it, if it is usable or repairable. The convenient returnable sack means that each plant has to have large departments where men and women sew, sort, clean and count sacks continuously. This work alone costs the industry nearly $1,250,000 a year.

And cement manufacturers keep increasing their sack inventories so that they can ship promptly. Last year they purchased a total of more than 100,000,000 new cotton sacks. For replacements alone over 50,000,000 were needed; for increased supplies over 30,000,000. In addition over 18,000,000 paper bags were used representing 7,000,000 pounds of paper.

This problem of containers causes a large and steadily growing investment by the portland cement industry.

VERBENA WINS OVER PIKE ROAD

Friday afternoon the Verbena High School boys dedicated their home grounds by a clean cut victory over Pike Road's eleven before an enthusiastic crowd who had gathered to witness their home boys in action for their first time. The Verbena boys, after the first few minutes of play, caught their stride and but for fumbles when fumbling meant the loss of a touchdown would have piled up a much higher score. The boys from Pike Road were somewhat lighter than the home boys, but had had one year of football and were more seasoned in the game. The game was hard fought and clean all the way through, only one penalty for off-side, being inflicted. Ed Hammell suffered an injury to his knee in the third quarter which forced him from the game, but the other members tightened up individually and put across two touhdowns, one in the third and one in the fourth despite the loss of Verbena's dependable fullback.

The game opened with Verbena kicking off. The ball was quickly put within striking distance of Verbena's goal by a series of end runs and line plunges. Mumma, Smilie and Reynolds doing excellent work for the Pikers. Verbena recovered the ball on a fumble and went prancing down the field by plain old time football, only to lose the ball by fumbling. This was repeated twice, when more than sixty yards had been made by line plunges, forward pass and end runs. The end of the first half saved the Pike Road crowd being scored on, the whistle of the time keeper stopping Verbena on the fifteen yard line. Patterson, F., Bill DeRamus and Norris carried the ball for gains nearly every time it was snapped or passed to them. Norris shown brilliantly in a 30-yard end run and a catch of a twenty yard pass from DeRamus. He was also good in breaking up the offense of the visitors. Danshy played excellent defense on the line. The others on Verbena's line, Williams, C. Patterson, D. Patterson, Hopper, Messer and Lett all played well, holding the other team for downs and breaking the defense of the visitors for first down after first down, allowing the ball to be carried through by the backfield men.

In the third quarter with the ball in Verbena's possession and sixty yards or more to go the rooters on the side lines began crying for a touchdown, and the home boys then showed what a driving force the line had. From the twenty yard line DeRamus carried the ball for a touchdown by straight line bucks, the boys from the consolidated high school of Pike Road seeming unable to get enough men on him to hold him. Just after the first scoring the visitors lost their best man, Mumma, from quarter, by an injury.

Rutland replaced Hammell at full during the third quarter but never had opportunity to show his stuff until the last few minutes of the game, when he caught a beautiful forward pass from DeRamus and leaped across the line for the second touchdown. Verbena failed to kick goal each time.

Verbena's team has hit its stride now. The next game is with her arch enemy, Marbury, Friday, Nov. 9, when she hopes to avenge her previous defeat. The Marbury team is not discounted, for it has won consistently this season, and has a nucleus of seasoned men about which their team has been built, while this is Verbena's first season. The next game on the home grounds will be against the fast Cloverdale aggregation and then on Turkey Day Verbena goes to Clanton to lock horns with Chilton Hi, which is the game of the season—the classic of this section.

The line-up was as follows:

Pike Road	Position	Verbena

LAYING CORNER STONE OF METHODIST CHURCH

A Lovely Day, A Large Crowd and A Beautiful Ceremony Were The Features Monday When The Laying of the Corner Stone at the Methodist Church took Place.

If a day could have been made to order, a more perfect one could not have been turned out than was last Monday, when an immense throng assembled at the magnificent new Methodist church building to participate in the exercises of layi g the corner stone.

The actual work was in charge of the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Alabama, A. F. & A. M. and was beautifully carried out with all the symbolic services that mean so much to those who know the mysterious meanings that go with each act of the work.

Grand Master Spearman of Anniston was in charge personally, and was ably and efficiently aided by the local lodge, as well as by numerous members from other Lodges in the adjacent territory. The local Past Master, Col. J. B. Atkinson, with his corps of officers delivered the work over to the State Grand Master Spearman and, from the opening prayer, by Chaplain Wilkerson, to the final acceptance of the stone as a piece of perfect Masonic art, there was not a hitch and the solemn and impressive ceremony held the closest attention of the waiting throng.

After these Masonic feautres were completed, Dr. Wilkerson, the honored pastor of the church that is building this massive temple of worship announced that a few five minute talks by home folks would conclude the exercises, and proceeded to introduce Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the Baptist church here.

Dr. Ezell spoke for about five minutes and was most happy and impressive in his beautiful eulogy of the liberality and vision of the movers in this great work and its testimony to the common Savior of mankind.

Senator Sam M. Adams came next, and in the few minutes allotted him, he said a great deal. He also commended the builders and rejoiced that posterity would have such a magnificent monument passed on down to them as a testimonial to the fact that their fathers and mothers loved and served the Most High.

Col. J. O. Middleton was the third and concluding speaker and, as a member of that church and a co-laborer in the work and sacrifice it has cost, he spoke feelingly of the help and cooperation they had been given by the community at large and extended the thanks of himself and brethren to the public for this aid. He was proud that it had been his privilege to aid in the construction of this lovely work for the Master.

Prof. Martin of the City School, brought his 300 or more students down in marching order and they made a beautiful and appropriate addition to the crowd. They were quiet and orderly and seemed to realize the proper amenities of the occasion.

A large contigent of the High School were also present but not in massed formation.

The ladies of the church had splendid dinners on the ground and served all you could take care of for 50 cents. They seemed to be doing a land office business and we hope they sold out, for to their tireless efforts much of the success of that work is indebted.

Dr. Wilkerson made a concise business statement of the financial situation at the conclusion of the exercises and gave all of those present an opportunity to contribute to the good cause and get their names enrolled on the scroll that will be encased in the corner stone. From the appearance of the greenbacks fluttering around we think his appeal was successful in a large degree.

In conclusion we want to say that we rejoice with those good people in this grand work they have successfully put over thus far and hope that not a cloud will arise nor a single doubt mar the future progress of the work to completion.

The building of this magnificent church marks a new era and sets the pace for a better, a larger and a more prosperous and enterprising spirit in Clanton and in Central Alabama.

MR. J. WASH FOSHEE DIES THURSDAY

On Thursday, Nov. 8, at the home of his son, Mr. R. M. Foshee, the spirit of Mr. J. Wash Foshee passed peacefully over to the other side.

The deceased was 80 years of age.

The remains were buried from the Baptist church here, in the Clanton cemetery on the following day, Rev. R. M. Honeycutt, assisted by Dr. S. J. Ezell, officiated.

The burial was in charge of Undertaker Martin.

A GOOD REASON

If you happen to meet Raymond Duffy, one of the clever rural route men at Mt. Creek, and he looks like he had the "big head" don't pay any attention to it. He has a reason.

The stork visited his home the other day and left a little 8½ visitor there and Raymond is naturally in high now.

Both the liftle cherub and the mother are doing nicely.

Rev. J. T. Nelson, route four, was here Monday enjoying the laying of the Corner Stone at the Methodist church by the Grand Lodge of Ala.

TO MOTHERS

Do you ever sit and wonder where your daughter is and what she is doing as the hands of the clock crawl around towards the midnight hour and she is still out "having a good time?"

Did you ever wonder why so many "joy rides" occur by starlight instead of daylight?

Did you ever wonder if your daughter was one of the passengers that belonged in the lonely car parked by the roadside miles out in the country and always where the timber is thick?

Did you ever wonder if your girl had really gone to prayer meeting, or evening services with her "fellow" when she jumps in his car about dark and goes out into the night with an "engagement for church?" Did you ever make inquiries to find out whether she really went to church or not?

Do you ever read the daily papers and see the reports of girls murdered in some lonely spot or burned in a negro church, or abandoned, a shamed and ruined thing at some haunt of hell and wonder if your girl could not be likewise trapped?

Do you ever seriously ponder over the fact that the only young man you can afford to trust your daughter with is the one who comes to the house like a gentleman and pays his attentions openly, and not the one who always tries to slip in like a thief and decoy your girl out for a secluded joy ride in his flivver?

Do you ever take your daughter into your confidence and tell her, in plain words, what all of this secretive joy riding means? Do you ever tell her that her only safety lies in the sacred admonition to "avoid the appearance of evil?"

Do you ever impress upon her that decency demands of her that she keep her life and her lips pure for the sake of a husband, and not make of her charms the common and idle plaything of every loafer who can rent or borrow a Ford car?

If you do not do these things do you feel like you can face the almost certain ruin of your daughter with a "conscience void of offense?"

A PITIFUL SIGHT

[illegible] young men who are frittering away your life and laughing to scorn the admontions and advise of father and mother, and older people who would love to point you into right paths and see you traveling the road to a sober, worthy and respectable manhood, can have no conception of how our older hearts are saddened and how deeply we sorrow for you as you go onward to a destiny that we know is just ahead on the pathway you are traveling.

A few evenings ago there was a sight at the depot here in Clanton that seemed to sear our very soul with pity.

Three young men, who had barely crossed the threshold of manhood were all manacled together and were on their way to put up time in the penitentiary for violating the law and trying to eke out a dishonest and disgraceful living.

The clanking of those handcuffs was whitening the hair and stooping the aged shoulders of some father and plunging a firey sword through some fond mother's heart. These young men had passed beyond the pale where the love of a father or the adoring sacrificial love of a mother could reach them, and, in that very thought came half of the agony of these parental hearts.

Boys, young men, wont you heed the warning and turn from the errors of your ways before you too wear the terrible bracelets of the law?

Would that we could burn this sad [illegible] picture on your soul in characters of living fire.

My crop of pecans is not very large this year. All of the local people who care to procure any of this crop please send in your order right away as I am going to ship to Birmingham in a few days.

Miss Madelyn Orr returned from a few days visit to friends and relatives in Selma. Miss Orr is quite a talented musician and is often called on to render services along this line.

HEFLIN-DUKE

At the home of the bride [illegible] dolph, last Wednesday evening, Mr. Grady Heflin of Canton and Miss Mary Duke of Randolph were happily united in marriage, Rev. Buford Lawrence, of Jemison, performing the ceremony.

Mr. Heflin is a very popular young man of Clanton, being connected with the old reliable Peoples Savings Bank here, and has a large circle of warm friends and acquaintances who rejoice with him in this attainment of life's happiest dream, and wish for him and his fair bride many happy years of connubial bliss.

Miss Duke was one of the most popular and accomplished members of the younger set at Randolph, and was a valuable assistant in all religious and civic endeavors. She has many warm friends over there who give her up with sadness, but follow her to her new home with many sincere wishes for her happiness.

This splendid young couple will make their future home in Clanton, where all doors will be open to them and where a warm welcome will always greet them.

FOOTBALL FRIDAY

The many football fans of Clanton and vicinity will have one more opportunity of seeing the pig skin pounded on the home field tomorrow, (Friday) Nov. 16 at 3 p. m.

Elmore County Hi is [illegible] over and try to w[illegible] cently captured by the home boys when they cruelly romped on the aviation bunch to the tune of 53 to 0.

This is going to be a very hard fought contest and the winner is going to say when all is over: "We almost got licked." It is to be hoped that the weather will be propitious and that a record audience of rooters will be on hand to help put the Chilton Hi hustlers over the top.

Don't fail to attend for the season is drawing to a close now and you cannot afford to miss one of the hottest contests that has been on the schedule this year.

MORE BUSINESS HOUSES NEEDED

Not long [illegible] one of the prominent down town property owners had in mind the building up of some very valuable and centrally located down town business property.

As soon as he let his intentions be known the lease on the prospective building was spoken for.

A little later on the rains continued to pour down and the boll weevils swarmed to the fray and the general outlook was gloomy indeed. This gentleman got "cold feet" at the unfavorable prospect and decided not to build, saying "there would be plenty of vacant store houses in Clanton by Christmas.

There was color to his ominous prediction at the time, but look at the facts. One or two merchants and other business concerns have moved away could vacate in every instance another renter was unloading his stock in the house.

There are several places now where two business concerns are sandwiched together in one building for the lack of room, and other inquiries come in for a place to locate every day or so.

The fact is, we have not got enough business houses now to accommodate the expansion and if this gentleman had gone forward with his projected building he would have been perfectly safe.

Money invested in business property in Clanton will always be an income builder.

PAVEMENT CONTRACT LET TO C. B. COX

As advertised by the city council, bids were opened Tuesday for building several blocks of sidewalks in the city and the bid of Mr. C. B. Cox was found to be the best and cheapest, so he was awarded the contract.

As we understand, the work will commence at once and will be pushed to completion.

These sidewalks will be put down to a uniform grade, as established by the city engineers, and will be the first ever put down in Clanton on a systematic regard for the future building and expansion of the city. This feature is especially to be commended.

The Value of Land Abstracts

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortagages, judgements, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title, be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Eptiomized Form.

Citation of considerable interest throughout the state, naming as respondents all Alabama steam railroads, has been issued by the Alabama Public Service commission. The citation, which will be formally heard on Dec. 17, call upon the railroads to show cause why they should not revise all commodity rates, both for short line and joint line movements, that now exceed the class rates to which such commodities belong, to a basis not higher than said class rates, and all through rates that exceed the lowest combination to a basis not higher than the combination.

The Daphne Normal school opened for instruction as a Grade A institution for the first time Nov. 5, thus marking the victorious close of the long campaign to have this school made of the first rank. Because of the delays incident to reorganization it was said that the school president has not yet been named, but that he will probably be appointed shortly. The school offers work, including the first year of college this year, and will include the second year next fall, thus bringing it up to full Grade A status.

Probability that north Alabama asphalt soon may make its appearance in large quantities on north Alabama streets and roads looms as a result of a conference of engineers in Florence when the visitors were the guests of C. W. Ashcraft. The engineers and Mr. Ashcraft examined the asphalt, which has been found in various parts of the valley, and special attention was given to the rock now being mined near Florence, which in its prepared form, is being used on the streets of Florence.

Award of a contract for 40,700 tons of steel rails to the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company has been announced by the Southern railway. The rails will be rolled at the T. C. I. plant at Ensley and are for delivery during the first six months of 1924. The contract was placed in line with the Southern's policy to purchase materials in the south to the greatest extent possible. This is the second large order obtained by the T. C. I. recently, the Louisville and Nashville having ordered 50,000 tons last month.

The new state board of agriculture at its first openin session at Montgomery reorganized the department as provided for in the agricultural code, which provided for an additional division known as the division of plant industry which in turn embraces a subdivision known as the division of [illegible] industry. This organization will give the department for the first time full time workers for [illegible] citrus fruit and other interests of the plant industry.

About six months ago Whit Torbert, a negro employe of the Clement Hotel at Opelika, decided to make his home in the north. Accordingly he journeyed thither one bright and pleasant summer day. Recently E. O. Pearson, manager of the Clement Hotel, received the following urgent request from the said Whit Torbert: "Please send me $24 to come home on. It looks like it was going to snow up here, and snow quick."

The federal bureau of public roads does not approve the idea of the state of Alabama auctioning off surplus road building material furnished this state by the federal government from war time supplies. A telegram was received at the state highway department in Montgomery from Thomas McDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, in response to a query on the subject.

Harry Clayton Howze, postmaster at Marion, has sent his resignation to the post office department to take effect November 15th. Mr. Howze was appointed post master at Marion in February 1916, by President Wilson, and was reappointed by him in 1920. His term of appointment would have expired next February.

Fire of undetermined origin completely destroyed the plant of the Atmore Crystal Ice company, including the ice cream factory.

The fall session of the United States district court will begin in Opelika Monday, November 26, with Judge Henry D. Clayton, presiding.

Ten organizations of the Alabama National Guard, including infantry, cavalry, artillery and air forces, participated in the special military maneuvers which featured the Armistice Day celebration in Greenville.

The city commissioners of Sheffield have sold more public improvement bonds, to the amount of approximately $22,000, and have let the contract for the construction of sidewalks along the Jackson highway from Second street to the [illegible] and Tuscumbia there will be a five foot sidewalk. Those [illegible] trate plant No. 2, a distance of four and one half miles."

The Sheffield company is arranging [illegible] Tennessee Valley Golf and Country club house, [illegible] current will pass through the fair grounds, Spring park and on to the [illegible] have been spent by the directors of the club for the improvement of the grounds and the beautiful club house, the former home of Governor Lindsay of Alabama.

The number of persons sentenced to the penitentiary for violating the prohibition law, although it had reached a figure of 31 per cent of total receipts of new inmates in the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30, 1922, has continued to climb, and in the 1923 fiscal year which has just closed, a total of 37 per cent of the commitments to the penitentiary were for violating the bone-dry law of Alabama.

Cash fines assessed during October resulting from activities of the state law enforcement department totaled $10,225.65, according to an official report of the month's work, submitted to Gov. W. W. Brandon by Walter K. McAdory, chief of the department. These fines compare with expenses for the same period of $4,864.06, leaving a favorable balance of $5,361.19.

Officers for the department of journalism at Birmingham-Southern were recently elected by the students of that department at a combined meeting of the classes in that division of the college work. C. C. King was chosen as president, with Charles W. West vice president; Miss Louise Averyt, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Sarah Lathem, librarian.

State Fire Marshal C. E. Johnson has been appointed on two committees of the Fire Marshals' Association of North America, according to information received by him. They are the committee on cooperation with the national government and the committee on publicity and education.

Establishment of a bureau of plant industry, under provisions of the new agricultural code of Alabama, was made by the state board of agriculture. Otto Brown of Auburn, was appointed chief of the bureau and John W. Pace of Mobile, chief of the sub division.

Gary Coleman, Mobile county convict, who lost his eyesight since his commitment to prison, has been granted a parole by Gov. W. W. Brandon. Coleman was sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary, following his conviction in the Mobile circuit court, on May 8, 1920, of murder.

Mobile has sent the director of the county's health department to Birmingham to make a complete survey of the dairy business in and around Birmingham, with the idea of adopting for the use of Mobile dairies and other milk supply concerns law and rules and modes in use in Birmingham.

Nellie Bestor, Bibb county negro woman, convicted of the muder of her husband, and who was to have died on the scaffold Monday, Nov. 12, will instead spend the remainder of her natural life in the penitentiary. Gov. W. W. Brandon having commuted the sentence of death to life imprisonment.

Appointment of Victor H. Hanson publisher of the Birmingham News and the Montgomery Advertiser, as a trustee of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, to succeed W. K. Terry, resigned, has been announced by Governor Brandon.

Complete revision of Birmingham's laws covering electrical wiring of buildings to bring an ordinance now in course of preparation into line with the national code adopted by the government and many metropolitan and smaller cities has been authorized by the city commission.

Authority to establish increased freight rates on kainit shipped into Montgomery from Mobile, and on fertilizer shipped out of Montgomery, is requested in petitions filed by the L. & N. Railroad company, with the Alabama Public Service commission.

Reappointment of W. S. Keller as state highway engineer was announced by the State Highway Commission. Following the commission's action, Mr. Keller who underwent a serious operation at Rochester, Minn., recently, was advised by telegram.

Plans to consolidate the fire departments of Phenix City and Girard, were taken at the regular session of the city commissioners at the Phenix council chamber, while auditors reports on the financial condition of the city were read.

An act of the Alabama legislature requires that every public school building shall fly the American flag.

The secretary of state's office has completed the mailing of bills passed by the recent session of the legislature. The acts will likely be published in bound form about Dec. 1.

It has been officially announced by President C. E. James that the Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia railroad will be ready to begin an extension toward Birmingham from Gadsden within 30 days.

MANIA FOR SPEED

French Drive Autos at Reckless Rate Down Mountains.

Writer Says Passengers Touring the Alps Sit Helpless and Trust to Luck and Skill.

"The motor coach accidents which have occurred recently in the south of France do not surprise me in the least," writes a correspondent. "Having just returned from motoring over a number of mountain passes, I have had enough thrills to last me for a while.

"It was risky enough dodging the taxicabs in Paris, where apparently the speed limit is unknown, but on the steep gradients and zig-zags of the French Alps the danger becomes much more acute.

"The pedestrian in Paris can, with some agility, escape with a whole skin, but a passenger in one of the motor coaches which make a feature of climbing several Alpine passes in the day can only sit helpless and trust to luck. The surprising thing is that accidents are not more frequent.

"French motor drivers have a passion for speed, and when two cars meet on a hairpin bend, with a very narrow road surface and a precipitous drop of some hundreds of feet on the one side, the situation is rather unpleasant for the car on the outside edge, and decidedly thrilling for the passengers. When taking such a curve at speed, as is often the case, it is simply a matter of nerve and steady steering that pulls one through, as a sudden application of the brakes might send the car skidding into space.

"French drivers take risks that would appall an English motorist. They rush down steep mountain roads, following each other in a dense cloud of dust, or dash out of brilliant sunshine into dark tunnels at a pace that makes one gasp.

"It all seems so reckless, and yet it is really perhaps the most expert driving in Europe. One's feelings of thankfulness at being landed whole at one's hotel door are mixed with a profound admiration of French skill in meeting road emergencies, but also with a distinct preference for the slower but safer driving to which we are accustomed at home."

His Position.

"If we listen we can hear the murmurings of disgust that will presently burst into a storm of protest against the centralization of bureaucratic power," recently declared Maj. Ira K. Widenfuller, chief speedometer inspector. "In talking with hundreds of the plain people I have learned that they are steadily growing more angry at the hordes of superfluous supervisors of this, that and the other, who are continually thrusting their snouts into the affairs of busy people—bedsheet inspectors, house paint testers, barber inspectors, throat examiners, hymn-book checkers, tenor inspectors, dog pelters, and all the rest of the useless officials who are continually cluttering around."

"But,—ah-h'm!—Major," said a hearer. "Doesn't that include yourself?"

"Oh, no!" was the reply. "The inspection of speedometers is absolutely essential."—Kansas City Star.

CHINESE EAT FRIED WORMS

Beetles, Spiders, Moths and Locusts Esteemed by Some People as Table Delicacies.

The French eat frogs and snails and find them very appetizing. But neither of these creatures has ever been appreciated by the average Briton. It is purely a matter of prejudice.

Foreigners are far less "faddy" than we are in this respect. In Mexico many of the natives eat clay. When making pottery they take frequent mouthfuls of the material with which they are working, and after a heavy shower there is quite a rush of children to see which will be the first to get a mouthful of moist earth.

Earthworms do not sound specially delicious, but they appear to be succulent enough. The Arabs are fond of them, as are the native inhabitants of some parts of India.

Some South African natives, notably Hottentots, welcome a swarm of locusts; it saves them the trouble of finding food elsewhere. They enjoy the insect raw, eating several hundreds at a meal. Arabs and Moors, though, prefer the locusts cooked in butter.

How would you like a dish of fried chrysalids? After the silkworms have spun their cocoons and turned into chrysalids, the Chinese cook and which are not wanted for breeding purposes.

Moths are eaten in many parts of the world, chiefly in Australia, Africa and China. In the West Indies there is a demand for big, juicy caterpillars, which are considered a great delicacy.

Spiders are plentiful enough in this country, but we never think of them as an article of diet. Yet they are edible. In New Caledonia the islands of the south seas a spider is a regular dish at banquets.

Cockroaches and beetles [illegible] something like nuts in flavor, it is said they are a favorite fish among the natives of the West Indies, and some parts of America, where a dish of [illegible] is considered a delicacy.—London Tit-Bits.

PARADISE FOR DEAD HEROES

Spirits of Scandinavian Warriors Fight and Mutilated Bodies Are Reunited at Banquet.

The way in which the departed Scandinavian heroes passed their time in Valhalla, or in the palace of Odin, is described in several places in the Edda.

They have every day the pleasure of arming themselves, marshaling themselves in military order, engaging in battle and being all cut to pieces; but when the stated hour of repast arrives their bodies are reunited and they return on horseback safe to the hall of banquet, where they feed heartily on the flesh of a boar and drink beer out of the skulls of their enemies until they are in a state of intoxication.

Odin sits by himself at a particular table. The heroes are served by the beautiful virgins named Valkirie, who officiate as their cupbearers. But the pleasures of love do not enter at all into the joys of this extraordinary paradise.—Pearson's Weekly.

"The wind is capital—although making English turn we shall have to pull-haul, doubtless. But who can pursue save one of the steamboats—and by the time the uproar goes that far—Bien!—what of it?"

"A shot from an eighteen-pounder and the teakettle will hesitate," growled Gorgio. "All is ready—waiting Monsieur de Almonaster's word for the river signal."

The swarthy-skinned marketmen laughed; their roving glances went from the idle croons at the stalls to the lond of cabbages under which there protruded one rusty cutlass hilt which Gorgio now frowningly pushed back. Then he was on with his droning cry about the dark streets of the Vieux Carre.

Meantime, at the Ball d'Orleans, the fun was rising fast. The door, the deep-set windows, the low galleries about the hall, were filled with onlookers; while to the strains of a waltz from Les Amours du Diable sensuous women and fiery-tempered men whirled in giddy mazes. Frowned on by the aristocracy, and taboo with the haughty ladies of the Vieux Carre, yet few there were of the young fashionables who would not steal, now and then, to the revel. There arose the quarrels that led to the duellos out under the Oaks; there, on an instant, the scene might change from laughing, and men rush together in affray; or two of the hot-tempered dons of the old Spanish or French regime, or some restless Kentuckians, down-river, would exhange the cards that meant rapiers or pistols at sunrise.

The young Count de Almonaster was in a chatting coterie at the vestibule. The town had been agog with this story about him today.

"Ho, Raoul!" cried De Marigny, "where is your new house guest?"

"Yes—Raoul, the proud, entertaining this gallant Saz-a-rac! Better you had counted the family silver ere you put him to bed! They say Lafitte put out from your hospitality to the Barataria swamps—and at once a lady disappears from her hotel!"

"I am just back from a search myself. It was a shabby trick, but—"

The laughing gallants crowded nearer. "Lafitte turns up, and at once Louisiana is in an uproar! The British consul fumes, and Colonel Carr denounces. His lady may well be in the tropics within a week!"

"Bah!" shouted the Chevelier de Montrieul, "here is Alderman Dominique, who was once buccaneer himself! I say, we are unworthy gallants! Under the Spanish governors we would all be out seeking to rescue the lady ourselves, rather than leave such romance to the authorities."

De Marigny twigged Raoul's laced cuff: "Come, we have a new beauty. I shall introduce you for one of the new contre-danses Anglais."

"I," retorted Raoul reservedly, "do not dance here, as you know."

"Why so haughty? A round, and we are all off to the Seraphine."

Raoul started. This would never do; the conspirators must seize the clipper before the party assembled on her decks. He was relieved to see Captain Bossiere—already chosen to command—coming on smiling, waving a hand to the merrymakers.

"Messieurs! Is it not enough here? We shall make a long night on the Seraphine and discuss affairs. Ah, Monsieur Dominique, I am glad you are with us! And Monsieur de Almonaster, who has been won over at last to support the Napoleon expedition!"

Many curious and admiring eyes, indeed, were leveled on the tall, bronzed young man who followed to the bar. Old Dominique winked again at him. A buzz of talk ran around concerning these two who surely must know something about Lafitte which they chose not to disclose to the authorities.

De Marigny shouted good-humoredly to Raoul:

"We are discussing the flag, Monsieur! A flag for the Seraphine! La Barre insists it will not be good taste to fly the American colors now, with England and the United States at peace. Under what flag, Captain Bossiere, do we put to sea?"

Good Captain Bossiere pulled his whiskers and beamed on the laughing gallants. "That is to be settled. Also, tonight, who is to be second in command."

"And third!"

"And fourth!"

"And," bawled another youth, "I trust to be at least a midshipman!"

The flushed and merry Creole blades gathered closer. The costliest champagnes were spilling over bar and tables. Under the glitter of the crystal lamps, where the press was deepest, Captain Bossiere perspired and tried, in vain, to address them. From this laughing melee Dominique, the alderman, velvet-clad and rotund, found way and came to De Almonaster's side.

"And tonight," he muttered, "I wander about, a respectable official of the city—and the sea is calling. As to Jean," he said with pointed abruptness, "what do you know, Monsieur?"

The young aristocrat could not be sure of how much the city conspirators had imparted to the complacent Dominique. He therefore shrugged indifferently: "The old fox is on familiar trails, Monsieur Dominique—do you know of any reason for absenting yourself tonight?"

"Eh?" queried the alderman darkly. Then, a hand on his shoulder. Jarvis, the portrait painter of the Vieux Carre, for once cleanly arrayed in velvet, beruffled stock and a high hat! Jarvis, incredibly sober. Nodding to Alderman Dominique, he drew Raoul aside.

"The fools found I was right, eh? A lady stolen from our streets—and this Sazarac of the packets is my old captain." He smiled with some twitching pathos about his nervous lips. "Jean—and my lady. Ah, one might have guessed!" He stopped abruptly.

"What is it, Jarvis?" Raoul stared at him. Plainly, he knew nothing of Mademoiselle Lestron's disappearance upon the English bark, tonight slowly beating a way out of the Belize pass to the open Gulf.

"Sober," muttered the jester. "That is it. I have vowed to keep sober for her sake from half-past eleven to quite one o'clock . . . it was about the hour of the camellia. Ah—to a staircase fellow in the moonlight!"

His friend laughed curiously, but without understanding. "Every night"—continued Jarvis—"half-past eleven to one. It is a disastrous intermission, however. I have to arrange all my hours, both at the studio and the grog shops. Romance should keep better hours." He sighed: "Love has come like a flame to my darkness, Monsieur! I—who would have laid my dull head as a stone among the other cobbles for her footstep—and asked nothing! She has gone . . . they whisper, willingly, perhaps, with him. Ah, to play the part of Sazarac—one hour!"

"What are you driving at?" queried Raoul.

"This Sazarac—" muttered Jarvis. "I regret he was not himself. I would have had an affair at the Oaks. Can you imagine me, sober, well-arrayed and speared through the stomach because of a woman? I cannot. On second thought, of course not. The time, Monsieur—"

Many Curious and Admiring Eyes, Indeed, Were Leveled on the Tall, Bronzed Young Man Who Followed to the Bar.

"The time—" De Almonaster started, shot a suspicious glance at the town's jester. But Jarvis was not, apparently, in the conspiracy.

"To put aside my romance and ensure my bottle. D—n!—not yet midnight!" He turned impatiently and gnawed his cuff. "Jean has taken my lady— Eh, well! One's friend is one's friend!"

Raoul watched the mountebank's drawn, hungry face at the end of the crowded bar. Then he wandered to the street vestibule. The time for the attack must be approaching. Somewhere along the west bank of the Mississippi, but a few miles above, the Barataarians must be gathered for the embarkation and the silent drift downstream. Now that he had time to think soberly of it, Raoul's mind stumbled over the uncertainties of the mad venture. He knew that, about the city, two score of adventurers had armed and awaited secretly to aid the men of Johannes and Nez Coupe from the deep swamp. Seizing the unguarded ship at her moorings, even with the revel about her, would not be difficult. It was the next step when an unfavoring wind might leave the Seraphine helpless and adrift in the lower reaches of the river.

De Almonaster watched the faces of his familiars about the ballroom. He had been chaffed enough for his entertainment of the mysterious Sazarac out of the West. But even now the heedless youth were forgetting it. The affair Lafitte was being left to the authorities. The British Colonel Carr had already been courteously rejected from the gentlemen's company; the gentry, while most of them had but the merest hearsay about what the missing gamester, Sazarac, might have intended concerning Mademoiselle Lestron, could not endure Carr's infamous jest at Maspero's gaming-room. They believed, indeed, that the lady had fled of her own accord with the adventurer of the river packet, whom rumor said was Jean Lafitte. Eh, bien! It was not the first affair of women for Lafitte . . . there was the old story of the governor's lady when the Grand Terre chieftain was at his power.

Raoul saw, in the barroom, a score of tossing glasses upraised to some speech that Bossiere had concluded.

"The Seraphine," a dozen voices shouted, "and to the unknown flag she flies!"

The goblets clinked and broke; the air was a spray of crystal and champagne bubbles; then the laughing groups scattered. But about Captain Bossiere flushed youths clamored on.

"Devil take the dances! Monsieur Girod's banquet awaits us on the Seraphine. Let's finish the night there."

And a score of young men took up the cry. De Marigny came crowding to Raoul's side. "Come, there! You—Felix, La Barre—all of you! You can dance on the decks—but no women, mind! This is a secret session of the Napoleon plot!"

"Yes, and you with us, De Almonaster! You are a third backer of the enterprise since you took over the baroness' interests."

De Almonaster started as the jesting groups closed about him. It was but eleven o'clock! The conspirators across the river would never dream that the gentlemen-adventurers would quit the ball so early! He began to protest as the youth streamed to the street. But one glance at the gold-laced hat of the Seraphine's commander now leading the way, and Raoul whirled back and to the courtyard where the servants awaited.

At his low hail his groom came watchfully. "Tetom, the ball is breaking up! With all speed the word to the market!"

The octoroon vanished silently. Raoul turned back through the ballroom, his heart beating wildly. He wondered if any saw his perturbation. It was too late to warn the Barataarians that the plans had changed. Already, far across the rue Royale past the cathedral to the Place d'Armes, the aristocrats were trooping, unarmed, save for their swords of fashion, to encounter unsuspectingly the desperate renegades of Lafitte summoned again from their deep swamp refuges.

"Madness!" the young man muttered. "They are ascending the gangway! The plot is lost! Sazarac will not dare lead his swamp bandits to face the gentlemen of the city already at their banquet seats!"

He lingered irresolutely and then went to the Plaza. If he could find one of the spies who had been all evening watching the course of events at the revel and passing the word, mouth to mouth, out to the upper levee so that the Barataarians across the river might be apprised, he could, even yet, ward off a disastrous failure.

But nowhere did he find one whom he could trust as being in the conspiracy. The groups of idling market men had scattered from the stalls.

The crowd on the rue de la Levee, gathered to watch this outdoor revel of the gentlemen-adventurers of the Napoleon ship, was thickening. Along the roped path between these onlookers the gold hat of Captain Bossiere moved with the gallants cheering in his wake. The gay rosettes and lanterns festooning the ship's rigging reflected upon the yellow flood murmuring along her side.

"I must be seen with them," murmured De Almonaster. "It is a sorry joke. Sazarac dare not face this revel to seize a ship—no, not for all his loves!"

He found his place to the right of Commander Bossiere. De Marigny had started a song of the day among the flushed youths near him:

"Mo l'aimin vous
Comme cochon aimin la boue!"

"Ah!" shouted one, catching sight of De Almonaster; and he translated the doggerel for a young American ensign: "I love you as a little pig loves the mud!" It must be Raoul, seeing that he loves the Barataria swamps."

Raoul smiled; but his glance was out from the quarter-deck awnings to the yellow, silent flood of the mighty river. Big honest Commander Bossiere, a real seaman oddly out of place among the laughing youths, was unsteady from the toasts he had drunk.

"And there," cried La Barre, "comes another guest who must love the mud, seeing that he frequently rolls in it!"

The guests shouted as another belated one came unsteadily down the carpeted gangway to the deck. Jarvis, it was, the town's profligate, whose hour's tribute to his lady had turned to Bacchus promptly with the clock. The first bohemian of the French quarter raised his hand. In it was a staff with folded colors. And behind him marched six grim fellows in tarpaulin hats, red shirts and the new tight pants of the period, cutlassed and pistoled, who, without word, took position along the rail, and came to a salute as Jarvis bawled a mocking order.

The flushed aristocrats stared, then cheered, when the mummer pirates broke to hoarse song, a Creole air of the day:

"Di tems M'sieu Lafitte,
Ye te menin monde a la baguette—"

The guests seized it in glee. Another gibe at the smiling Count de Almonaster.

Boots.

Father bought a pair of hip boots, in anticipation of the coming fishing season. The boots greatly interested Ann, his three-year-old daughter, so one day when mother and father were preparing for a journey downtown, and mother was putting on her Russian boots, Ann turned to father and said:

"Daddy, why don't you wear you boots, too?"

DAIRY POINTS

Considerable Reduction in Calf Raising Costs

The high cost of raising calves can be considerably reduced by supplementing their expensive ration of milk with other food, says Prof. S. W. Mead, New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

"The supplemental food method of raising calves has been used with considerable success, and while the calves so raised will not be quite as fat and sleek as calves which are raised on the maximum amount of milk, they will, nevertheless, develop into healthy, normal animals.

"Allow the calf to remain with the dam for 48 hours. The first milk or colostrum is laxative in its action and insures the proper action of the bowels for the first few days.

"Take the calf from the cow at the end of 48 hours and feed it from a pail. The amount to be fed depends on the size and vigor of the calf. On the average, three feedings a day, totaling six to eight pounds, are given during the first few days.

"This amount should be increased gradually as long as the calf's appetite remains good and as long as scours do not set in. If the calf does scour, the milk should be taken away for one or two feedings and a dose of castor oil administered.

"By the time the calf is three or four weeks old it should be given all the alfalfa and clover hay it will eat and a good grain mixture. The following has been used with success:

400 pounds of corn meal	200 pounds of oil meal, old process
400 pounds of wheat bran	100 pounds ground oats

"The more grain and hay the calf eats the less milk will be required. In parts of the country where skim milk is available the calf should be changed gradually at two or three weeks of age from whole milk to skim milk. The amount of skim milk fed, however, should not exceed what would usually be given of whole milk.

"By the time the calf is four months old the milk feeding may be discontinued and the calf raised on grain and hay. But remember, the calves will not look as fat and sleek as those fed milk to a later age, though their ultimate development will be the same."

New Publication Gives Practical Information

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The raising of dairy calves, beginning with the cow before the calf is born and carrying the young stock along to two years of age, is the subject of a recent Farmers' Bulletin, No. 1336, Feeding and Management of Dairy Calves and Young Dairy Stock now ready for distribution by the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington D. C.

The new bulletin is full of practical information covering all the essentials in the production of good dairy animals for breeding and milk production. It includes chapters on feeding before birth, weaning the calf, teaching to drink, cleanliness, pasteurization of milk for feeding, quantity and quality of milk fed, frequency of feeding, roughage for calves, grain feed, milk substitutes, quarters, stanchions, prevention of horns, water and salt, marking calves for identification, diseases, and several chapters on the feeding and management of young stock beyond the calf age.

The bulletin may be had free of charge by writing to the department as long as the supply lasts.

Calves to Develop Well Must Have Sanitary Pens

If calves are to remain healthy and develop perfectly they must not only be correctly fed but must have sanitary quarters when in the stable. Recent investigations have shown that lack of sunlight is a powerful contributory cause of rickets in all young animals. Direct sunshine kills germs and, therefore, lessens the liability to scours and other calfhood ailments. Calf pens are too often dark, damp, dirty and badly ventilated.

Foul bedding is even more common and is equally detrimental.

Dairyman Should Know Every Cow in His Herd

No dairy cow has ever produced her maximum unless her feeder knew her. Knowing her means more than simply calling her by name and reciting the names of her ancestors. It means understanding her every need, desire and condition. By means of a pair of scales, a Babcock testing outfit and a little work, every dairyman could know what each cow in his herd produces, and thus have a sound basis on which to feed and judge the individual merits of each cow in his herd.

Best Milk for Calves.

For the first few days give the calf eight to twelve pounds of milk from its dam in three feeds a day, making the intervals between feedings as nearly eight hours as possible. Milk containing not more than 4 per cent butterfat is considered best for calves.

Meat From Dairy Herd.

Bulls that are no longer desired in the herd for various reasons make up a part of the meat from dairy cattle. They are seldom suitable for dressed beef.

A great many people in the world pull off a $50 suit of clothes and go to bed hungry.

A great many cars are overloaded from the start. Many of them carry a house and lot or a good farm on their back.

Cotton goes up two cents and cotton goods 10. Wheat falls off 80 cents and flour sets right on the peg. Now how come that?

There are a few more political plums in Gov. Brandon's orchard yet but they seem to be rather backward about coming.

Sidewalk building is going to start up in earnest in Clanton this week. The fellow who has to walk is coming into his own at last.

Paste this on your plow stock: A little crop of cotton and a big price pays better than a big crop of cotton and a little price.

Everybody will see the joke in Henry Ford and Muscle Shoals and Henry Ford and the presidency after awhile. He is a hound for publicity.

It looks like Gov. Walton will finally have to take his medicine according to directions. The United States District court turned him down.

We don't hear any talk about an extra session of the legislature. Maybe the floods got so unruly that Gov. Brandon don't want to be bothered with them any more.

The greatest national issue that is confronting the farmers and the laboring class now is the tariff. Give us an open market for our products and this country will be all right.

We notice that some of the trouser wearing females are adopting leather leggins also. That's a mistake. It destroys one of the principal attractions of the advertisement.

A dispute is rife now in regard to who did discover America. That matter is immaterial to us. The fact remains that whoever the discoverer was, he located the greatest country on earth.

When you rich folks are ordering your dressed turkey for Thanksgiving you better have his serial numbers attached so you will know what vintage you are using.

It costs the average traveling man $6.00 per day to stay first class in Montgomery. If our legislators break even they either have to "knock down" an extra $2 or eat one meal per day and sleep double in a hall bedroom.

It is stated by the market report that nearly 2,000,000 pounds of turkey is already in cold storage, some of them having been there for six years. How do you fancy feasting on a turkey that died in 1918?

We notice that the effort to disrupt the K. K. K. organization through the courts in Atlanta, Ga., fell down. Now and then our national bird of freedom has had its flaps her wings and the messenger boys had hunt a roosting place.

Now and then you see a real handsome girl yet, notwithstanding they may be butchered up with bobbed hair, painted faces and pantaloons They haven't succeeded in defacing all of their charms so far.

Don't cheat yourself into the idea that cold weather will dispose of the boll weevil. He can hibernate all the winter with the polar bears at the north pole and then come out in the spring and eat up your cottor He is a case hardened cuss.

A preacher last week in Montgomery made what is to us, a rather unique plea in behalf of the church he represented. A kind of bargain sale proposition. He told what the average cost to each member amounts to in the several leading denominations and then showed where his church had cut the price and gave the cheapest transportation of any. "O tempora. O mores.

POLITICS AND COUNTY ROAD BUILDING

The Chilton County News wishes to anonunce emphatically that partisan politics has no influence whatever with it when it comes to a discussion of public road building.

As we have frequently announced before, we are intensely interested in seeing the rural communities, the farmers, get a share in the tax money that is put on roads. We want to see them get some real road service, for they not only need and deserve it, but a large percent of the road money comes out of their pockets.

We want to tell you now that we are democratic to the core in our principles. We believe in democracy heart and soul, but we would (and do) criticize democratic mismanagement just as severely, if not more so, than we do the opposite party. We expect more of them and know that the principles of democracy are fundamentally founded on real service to all people alike and we demand of our own party that service.

On the other hand the republican party is, and has always been, the party that panders to the classes and not the masses. The party that was brought into being to take care of the capitalist and help him to amass his wealth at the expense of the working class and they have always lived up to their ancestry. Consequently we do not expect any more service out of them for the common people than they can possibly avoid. In the language of one of their famous leaders, who flourished a few years ago, "The people be damned" is the secret pass word of their order.

Now lets leave out politics and talk road building man to man. At a meeting of the Chilton County Commissioners in the early fall, or perhaps, in the late summer, the question of this gasolene tax was brought up and fully and fairly discussed. It was unanimously decided to put ALL of this particular fund on the rural roads.

We were present at that meeting and had the pleasure of heartily endorsing that movement, and we are still squarely behind that proposition Four tractors and road machines were to be purchased and four road crews were to go to work on these rural roads in different sections of the county.

We also enthusiastically endorsed that feature of a county road working system and do yet, but have these machines been put to work? Have they even been bought? Is there any evidence anywhere that this wise and commendable service has been, or is being arranged for? We are asking for real information.

Now a word to that class of people whose vision and understanding is so juandiced with prejudice that every thing done or said by a democrat is called "politics." We want to tell you right here that when good public service is rendered the Chilton County News is always glad to give its commendation and assistance, no matter who, or what "party" is responsible for it. And the reverse is equally true. When the service is rotten and culpable and deserves censure and criticism, you will find the Chilton County News equally prompt and vigorous in saying so, no matter who or what "party" is responsible for it.

We stand first, last and all the time, for a fair and square deal for the masses no matter who is holding the cards. Our past record has proven that. We hope to live and die so far above the sphere of the common little prejudiced county peanut politician that even a radio message could not span the chasm.

When you come down to real facts, there can be no real political dividing line, so far as county matters are concerned, except an imaginary one built up and fostered for personal reasons by some faction or other that plays up to the prejudices of a class who never stop to think for themselves.

It is the most ridiculous folly in the world to talk about the fundamental differences between the democratic and republican national organizations having a thing in the world to do with the local conditions in a little county way down here in Central Alabama. It is the very last word in absurdity. We all have to live under the same local conditions and the dominance of neither party in Washington will not build you a road nor help to keep up the one you have.

When you come down to the facts in the case, you may vote as you please in Chilton county, but you will live right on under a democratic rule and be protected in your social privileges by a democratic sentiment that you really are thankful for but too prejudiced to say so.

SAME HERE, BROTHER

The following item by Frank Nunnallee, taken from the Advertiser, speaks our sentiments to a dot. If you can't stop these auto criminals any other way, give the police a few high-powered rifles and tell them to shoot to kill.

Frank Nunnallee says something ought to be done to close the season in Montgomery on pedestrians. He thinks the reckless autoists ought to be curbed in some manner and makes the suggestion that certain colored tags be placed on the front of cars, a white tag to indicate an autoist who drives carefully and has had no accidents, a green tag for one offense, a yellow tag for two offenses, and a flaming red tag for the third offense.

I wish we could find a way to mark the dangerous and reckless drivers," said Mr. Nunnallee. "If we could adopt a tag system so that the pedestrian could begin to run when the dangerous fellow came into view, we might save a few lives. It is not the tail lightless autoist who kills people. They don't back over folks in Montgomery, they run over them head on. Reckless driving, wrong corner cutting, passing standing street cars, passing another car on a street intersection and other dangerous practices should be stopped if half of the autoists in town are arrested. I feel satisfied our city fathers will work out a plan which will save lives here. We are too reckless as it is."

THANKSGIVING DAY

President Coolidge has at length broken his sphinx-like silence long enough to issue his Thanksgiving Proclamations. He has named Thursday Nov. 29, as the day for the nation to stop, think and return thanks for the many blessings poured out upon us during 1923.

It is now time to catch the old gouty rooster, whose best days are gone, and put him up to fatten, so he can play the role of turkey on the dinner table that day. If the proverbial cranberries are out of reach you might gather some 'possum haws or holly berries as a substitute.

If you belong to the "rich and well-to do" class and are going to have a real cold storage "turkey" on the table, it might be well to ask for his Bertillion measurements and pedigree so you can trace up his record and see if you have a real Simon-pure turkey, or an old gouty rooster in disguise.

No matter who you are nor where you live, put a little extra feed on the table that day and set down and be thankful. If you are living in hard luck and don't feel very thankful, look around you a little and you will find so many people worse off than you are that you will be thankful in spite of yourself.

HOW ABOUT THAT HIGHWAY LOBBY

Are the two papers here in Clanton the only people in this section who are interested in securing a highway through Chilton county?

It looks that way. Both the News and the Union-Banner have been constantly urging the communities along the projected line to organize and go after this road, but, so far, there dont seem to be anybody else interested.

One of the members of the old Highway Commission has said that we would have got this road long ago if we had gone after it. He said there were always so many others on hand urging their claims that it was next to impossible to call up an outside project and run it over them.

That is perfectly reasonable and the proposition holds good in every walk of life that the man who succeeds and wins out is the fellow who goes after what he wants in earnest.

We are willing to do our part in this work but we are about up with our begging now. We can do without the road as long as anybody can for we have no car and never travel.

A recent investigation in Chicago showed that 86 per cent of the people in 6,772 cases were using methods of healing other than medicine; 14 per cent only went to the medical doctors. —See Literary Digest, Sept. 22, 1923.

READ YOUR PAPER

People who take the News regularly very often ask us about some event that, perhaps, was printed in the paper two or three weeks previously.

Why don't you get the habit of reading your paper and keeping abreast with local affairs? You would frequently learn more from your home paper that would be to your own interest than you get out of your daily in a week.

Your home paper has the interest of every local citizen at heart and is doing its best to help them, while the daily don't even know you are living unless you steal something or get killed.

NEW EQUIPMENT

Since last week the new magazine and parts for our linotype have arrived and been installed .This adds wonderfully to the scope of our service, especially in advertising.

We can handle now full page ads and price currents in any size or quantity. Before this addition we could not do that class of work satisfactorily to either ourselves or the customer.

Come on now and try us out. The holiday season is near at hand and now is the time to let the people know what you have.

You can not sell goods if people do not know you have them. Let us tell 'em for you.

OUR SCHOOLS

Both the High School and the City School went under the management of new faculties this year and the patrons wondered whether the change would be for the better or worse.

They have been operating under the new management long enough to catch their stride and it is a source of a great deal of satisfaction to say that neither of the schools have taken a buckward stept.

Prof. Ira Pegues, as principal of the High School, has been wonderfully successful in organizing and conducting a school that is not only a hit with the pupils, but is likewise well pleasing to the patrons. Everything down there seems to move like clock work and the pupils have seemed to absorb some of the pep and industry of the principal in their studies.

Prof. Martin, principal of the City School, has been equally fortunate in his organization and the splendid progress of his pupils. Prof. Martin, like Prof. Pegues, is an indefatigable worker and a perfect mine of energy. Patrons and pupils alike are lund in their praise of him.

In our opinion we were exceedingly fortunate in securing these active and thoroughly competent young men at the head of our educational interests and the Chilton County News assures them both of its hearty cooperation in every possible way in the good work they are doing.

CALERA INKLINGS

Mr. Robert Creel died at the South Highland Infirmary on Tuesday, Nov. 6, of high blood pressure, and was buried at Providence.

IT PAYS NOT TO MAKE IT

A farmer who is a renter out on Route 7 planted this year for 12 bales of cotton. He owed, when he gathered his crop, $309.00. He made only 3 bales of cotton but he sold it for 30 cents, paid up his debts and had money left

If it had been a good crop year and he and the other farmers had made what they planted for, we would have had, at least, a 14,000,000 bale crop and not more than an eight cent price.

By the time he had gathered his 12 bales and went to pay up he would not have had enough money to meet his indebtedness.

Moral: Don't plant for more than 5 bales to the plow and keep the price up

REVIVAL MEETING

A revival will be opened at the Court House today, Nov. 15, at 7 p. m. and continue 10 days.

Everyone cordially invited to attend. Mrs. M. Ford Dixon, union mission worker.

HOSPITAL NOTES

Mr. Joe Ben Downs, Mr. D. Apperson, Mrs. M. J. Parrish and Mrs. Annie Mullins were in the Hospital last week.

Miss Aldridge, one of the nurses, is on the sick list.

Mrs. H. F. Downs was in hospital a few days last week

Mrs. James Cleckler went home Sunday.

Mrs. Annie Huckabee will soon be out again.

Mr. M. F. Wagner who was operated for appendicitis and intestinal obstruc- is now doing well.

Susie Rutland (col) is in hospital.

FOOTBALL GAME

The football game here last Friday between the Aviation Corps of Montgomery and the local aggregation was a rather one sided affair. To our surprise the visiting team was an easy victim for the home team. Judging from the way they played they were not well coached. The final score was 53 to 0 in favor of the home team.

Prof. Pegues has proven to be one of the best coaches that has been at the high school in recent years. He has a team that thoroughly understands the game and not one of them has a streak of yellow in him. The team has won several games and held some exceptionally strong teams to a

HOW FOOTBALL IS PLAYED

There are a number of people who say they would enjoy the football games if they knew all about it. In as few words as I can I will give some of the main features of the game.

The object is to carry the ball to the end of the field. The line at the end is the goal line. When one carries the ball across or passes it across the goal line, it scores six points called a touchdown. (This article is not for those people who know the game so do not get excited.) The team scoring a touchdown can bring the ball back inside the goal line five yards and try for point. The ball may be passed, carried (commonly called bucked) across the line or kicked over the goal upright bar. If either is done, one point more is scored. If a team carries the ball across the line and fumbles before the whistle blows and the other side gets the ball, it is called a touchback. The ball is then brought back to the twenty yard line and given to the opposing team.

The field is 300 feet long by 160 feet wide. It is lined off in distance of five or ten yards as the team may choose. The team with the ball has four attempts to gain ten yards. If it fails to gain ten yards in the four trials, the ball goes to the other side. This is commonly called "The ball goes over."

The main idea in football is to use formations or ways of lining up so as to deceive the opposing team as to the way the ball is to be carried. The team with the ball is called the offensive team; the other the defensive. Come and learn.

IRA PEGUES,
Coach.

Mrs. Lodic Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Tyrone, Pa.—"A friend told my husband how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped his wife, so my husband bought me a bottle because I was so run-down, had a nervous weakness, no strength in my body and pains in my left side so bad that I could hardly do my work. Before I was married I used to work in the factory, and I had pains just the same then as I have had since. I have done my housework. I would not be without a bottle in the house now. It has stopped the pains all right and I have found out that it is a wonderful body builder, as it has made me well and strong. Watch for Eelworm Damage to Alfalfa

Farmers Are Urged to Observe Fields and Eradicate Pest.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Alfalfa growers in America are urged by the United States Department of Agriculture to watch their fields of alfalfa for the appearance of "sick spots" which may be caused by the presence of a parasitic eelworm and to take prompt and aggressive measures for eradicating the pest whenever found. The eelworm disease is caused by the alfalfa stem nematode which is proving to be an extremely dangerous pest.

The disease is manifested by a thinning out of the alfalfa in spots in the field, due to the dying of some of the plants. This leaves a poor stand of dwarfed plants, with a reduced number of stems, some of which may be more or less yellowed and distorted. A close examination shows that the disease is localized in the crown of the plant. Stems are swollen at the base and brown in color. They are often brittle and easily broken off; in fact, this brittleness is one of the means of easy diagnosis.

Examining "Sick Spots."

When examining a "sick spot" in a field for the possible presence of the disease, one should take into consideration more than one of the symptoms listed, say department workers. A thin spot may be caused by a variety of other factors, such as a poor initial stand, too little or much water, the presence of alkali in the soil, or to some other disease. The surest symptoms by which the eelworm disease may be recognized are the swollen buds and sprouts and the enlarged browned stems already mentioned. Badly diseased plants show a distinct rotting of the stem bases and crown, with some or all of the stems completely killed.

The disease has not been located in America in a great many places as yet and it has not been under observation for a long enough time to determine just how damaging it might be in this country. But in view of the fact that it causes serious losses in all other countries where it occurs and because it is very readily spread, the department is anxious that all places of infestation be located as soon as possible and methods of eradication put into effect. Specimens of suspected material should be sent in promptly to the department at Washington for identification, together with an account of the extent to which the disease occurs.

Prevent Spread of Disease.

Because the disease is easily spread by irrigation water, infested hay, farm implements, wind, and birds, it follows that the wise practice is to prevent it becoming established. Eradication can be brought about by plowing up the alfalfa fields and putting the land in other crops for three years. A further reason for prompt action against the disease is that it may under favorable conditions pass over to and affect other crops, such as clover, buckwheat, rye, turnips, and even potatoes.

Bran and High Protein Feeds Quite Expensive

Bran and high protein feeds are so relatively expensive that the dairyman who mixes his own ration will do well to make full use of corn, oats and barley, say the feeding specialists at the New York state agricultural college at Ithaca in suggesting a good dairy ration for the fall season.

As reasonable a mixture as can be made, they say, will consist of 500 pounds of corn and oats ground together, 300 pounds of oil meal and 200 pounds of gluten feed.

"If there ever was a time when the value of alfalfa hay shows up it is this fall," say the men at the college who are studying the situation. "Alfalfa in the roughage will make it possible to use 70 per cent of feeds like corn, oats, barley and wheat in the ration.

"Many letters have come in on the feeding of wheat. Wheat is very valuable in feeding. We are not used to it, that is all. It is like corn and should be ground and used like corn. It is practically as valuable, pound for pound, as corn.

"Do not use so much as to make the mixture too sticky when wet. Fifteen per cent is usually the limit, though perhaps 20 may be used."

Suckers on Apple Trees Not Good for Grafting

Suckers on apple trees are not suitable for grafting purposes, as they are not usually well enough matured. Woods for grafting should be well matured; that is, they should have a good deal of food material stored in their growth and in stable forms, and should also be cut when this food is in a dormant condition. The suckers are usually tender wood and inclined to be "sappy." Roots of the proper size may be taken off old trees when in a dormant condition and be used for winter or dormant grafting.

Wilt Disease of Tomato Is No Serious Menace

The wilt disease of tomato is becoming a serious menace to tomato production. This disease is partially spread by diseased vines. All tomato vines should be burned. Do not plant tomatoes in the same field the following year, since the disease carries over in the soil.

Mutton and Lamb Most Healthful

More Attention to Sheep Is Urged.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The production of sheep for wool alone is rapidly on the wane in the United States. More and more emphasis is being placed on the production of lamb and mutton for the table, although only 3.7 per cent of the meat consumed by the average American for the last five years was lamb or mutton. This proportion should be much larger, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, as mutton and lamb are among the most healthful, nutritious and palatable of meats.

The reason for the limited use of lamb and mutton throughout the central section of the United States probably had its origin in the days of the development of the great corn belt region west of the Appalachian mountains, department workers say. At that time the sheep owned by the settlers of that region came largely from the North Atlantic states and had been developed almost without exception for wool production, regardless of the inherent flavor of the meat. The flesh of these animals was no doubt tough, not so palatable as other meats, and possibly, owing to the crude methods of caring for it, much of it was unfit for use.

There is a characteristic taste in cooked mutton and lamb, due to the chemical contents of the meat fat, that makes it easy to distinguish from other kinds of meat. The same is true of beef, chicken, venison, or rabbit. In order to prove that this taste was not unwholesome and that the meat was palatable, experiments were made by the bureau of animal industry of the department, in co-operation with the office of home economics, which proved that lamb and mutton are wholesome, appetizing and economical meats for family use, ranking well up with other meats in food value per pound. The fact that only a small proportion of sheep carcasses are condemned under government meat inspection furthers the opinion of department workers that mutton and lamb should be used more generally.

Control Currant Pests During Dormant Period

San Jose scale, well known to nearly every orchardist, is a serious pest on currants and somewhat less on gooseberries, but it can readily be controlled. A good spraying with lime-sulphur solution during the dormant period will clean this off. If not familiar with this disease, it can be recognized by the small white specks that grow in the bark, looking as if it had been dusted with white or gray powder.

There are several other pests. The imported currant worm is about three-fourths of an inch long, green with yellow tips. They appear first in early spring as soon as the leaves are out, and there is one other brood, and sometimes a third later in the season. They devour the foliage. These are readily destroyed by an arsenical poison. By catching the first brood there will be little trouble later in the season.

The currant aphis, a form of plant louse, sucks the sap and curls the leaves. It is easily controlled by spraying with an oil emulsion spray or a nicotine solution. The insect is found clustered on the lower surface of the leaves.

The currant borer works up and down inside of the stems of the old wood, not being visible but showing evidence of the presence by the weakened, sickly condition of the stem. The way to control it is to cut out the weak, sickly stems each fall or spring, which should be done anyway, whether there is borer present or not.

Whitewash Cow Stables Before Winter Sets In

It is a good time, before the herd goes into winter quarters, to give the interior of the cow stables a coat of whitewash. Whitewash makes the stable light, it gives it a clean appearance and above all it cleanses the walls and ceiling which so often become grimy and dusty, and make it more difficult to produce clean milk.

Here is a good formula for a whitewash that will stick well, recommended by the dairy department of the state agricultural college: Slake half a bushel of unslaked lime with boiling water. Cover during the process to keep in the steam. Strain the liquid through a fine sieve and add a peck of salt previously dissolved in warm water. Then add 3 pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stirred in while hot. Next add 1 pound of clear glue dissolved in cold water hung over a fire. A half-pound of whiting will give it a lustre. To the above mixture add 5 gallons of hot water and leave standing for a few days, covered to keep out dirt. Applied hot, a pint of this wash will cover a square yard.

Economical Gains Made by Feeding Beef Calves

Feeding calves into baby beef should be given thoughtful consideration in planning feeding operations. They require 25 per cent less feed to make a given amount of gain than do aged steers, and do not get off feed as easily as older cattle. They will continue to make economical gains for several months after reaching a marketable finish, thus giving the feeder a longer period in which to choose a market than in the case of older cattle.

ROAD BUILDING

Surplus War Explosive for Highway Building

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Eighteen million pounds of sodatol, a surplus war explosive, is to be distributed by the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture for road building and land clearing purposes. The new supply of explosive is very similar to dynamite and picric acid, 12,000,000 pounds of the latter having already been distributed to road builders and farmers. The only charge made will be for cartridging and freight.

Sodatol is a high explosive made by mixing TNT and nitrate of soda. The cartridges are packed in wooden boxes each containing 50 pounds of sodatol. Sodatol is a comparatively safe explosive. While it is more sensitive than TNT or picric acid, there is no danger whatever in handling it provided the ordinary care used in handling dynamite or other explosive is exercised. It will burn without exploding, at least in small quantities, and should not be exposed to fire or flame.

It can be used in any open-air blasting operations and will not cause headaches, stain the hands, or cause other ill effects. A cartridge of sodatol, as it has been prepared for distribution, weighs about seven ounces and is equal in strength for agricultural blasting to the usual cartridge of dynamite which weighs eight ounces. That is, in a 50-pound box of dynamite there are 100 cartridges while in a 50-pound box of sodatol there are about 120 cartridges, each one of which is equal in strength to a cartridge of 40 per cent dynamite.

Sodatol will not freeze and will give good results at all ordinary temperatures. It should be stored in a dry place. The cartridges, as prepared for distribution, can be left in wet holes for several hours without being damaged by the moisture. In such wet holes the opening in the cartridge shell which is made to admit a primer should be covered with soft soap, axle grease, or other water-proofing material, after the primer has been put in place.

Sodatol can be completely exploded by a No. 6 cap of either the electric or the fuse type. The department will furnish No. 6 blasting caps at the rate of approximately one cap for each pound of sodatol so long as the supply lasts. These will be furnished without cost except for the freight charges.

On account of the high freight charges on explosives in small lots, shipments of sodatol cannot be made by the department in less than carload lots. To prevent this material from falling into the hands of speculators, no individual landowner is permitted to secure more than 1,000 pounds. In each state, where there is sufficient demand to warrant it, some state agency—usually the state agricultural college—handles the distribution within the state. The same agency handles the distributing of the blasting caps. Information as to what agency is handling the distribution in any state can be obtained from county agricultural agents or from the state agricultural college. The Department of Agriculture cannot accept individual orders for either sodatol or caps.

Sodatol is made from surplus war materials which have been made available by congress for distribution to the farmers of the country. There is no charge for the explosive itself but the cost of preparation and the freight charges must be paid by the consumer. These costs are necessarily different in various parts of the country, but, in general, they amount to about one-third the cost of an equivalent amount of dynamite. Full information as to the costs in any state may be secured from the state distributing agency. For road building purposes distribution will be made through the various state highway departments.

For stump and rock blasting, sodatol can be used in exactly the same way as dynamite is used. The charges should be placed in the same manner and the same number of cartridges should be used in the charges as in the case of dynamite. For blasting ditches, the electric method of firing must be used.

Detailed instructions as to the use of explosives in stump blasting are contained in Department Circular 191, "The Use of Explosives in Blasting Stumps," which can be secured by application to the office of publications, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

THAT COUGH IS ONE CAUSE FOR ALARM

Get Rid of It by Taking Cheney's Before It Turns Into Something Worse

Does that hacking cough worry you because it hangs on so? Really it is a cause for worry, for if you don't get rid of it you may find yourself the victim of a far more serious malady.

Thus it would be worse than foolish to let it go on, getting worse and worse, without taking the easiest and quickest method of putting an end to the trouble and so save yourself from what might turn out to be a very serious complication.

Suppose you go to the drug store and get a bottle of Cheney's Expectorant and begin taking a teaspoonful every two hours. Keep it up and you'll find that by tomorrow the cough will have almost entirely disappeared and in a few days will be completely gone.

The time to get the best of a cough is right at the beginning—when you first notice it. Each day you neglect it only makes it more difficult to pry loose its hold on you. The sooner you begin treatment the sooner you will get over the trouble. Begin now.

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 18

OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST A MISSIONARY

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 9:35-38; Luke 8:1-3; John 3:16-17.

GOLDEN TEXT "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Preaching in City and Country.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus a Missionary.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Missionary Activity of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Missionary Zeal.

I. The Missionary Motive (Matt. 9:35-38.

As Jesus saw the multitude His compassion was aroused. Their pitiful condition moved Him to take steps to provide missionaries. The result of this was the sending forth of the Twelve. Jesus saw the multitude as:

1. Shepherdless Sheep (v. 36). The people were in need of a protector, provider and guide, just as sheep are of a shepherd. They were faint and scattered—distressed, cast down and hopeless. What a picture of the needy world today! The world is hungry, but knows not how to have this hunger satisfied. They know not which way to turn in their confusion and perplexity. They are in need of that which alone the Good Shepherd can supply.

2. Grain Ready for Harvest (v. 37). He told the disciples that the grain was ripe, ready for the harvest, and that unless laborers were secured the harvest would be lost. This is still a picture of the world. The laborers are still few. It is the Lord's harvest that is ready to be gathered. No wonder He was moved with compassion! Those who have eyes to see and hearts to feel are still moved with compassion as they see the world ready to be gathered into Christ's fold but no one to perform the labor. The means for securing laborers for the harvest is prayer. He urged the disciples to pray that the Lord would send forth laborers.

II. Classes of Missionaries (Luke 8:1-3).

Three classes are here enumerated:

1. Jesus Himself (v. 1). He is the grand and supreme missionary. All receive their example and power from Him. He left all and gave all in this great enterprise.

2. The Twelve (v. 1). Christ called them and sent them forth. They were His representatives and were clothed with His power. Missionaries should be chosen and commissioned by the Lord himself. In the evangelization of the world there will always be need of the group of men and women devoted exclusively to that work.

3. Certain Women (vv. 2, 3). Christian women can most effectively do their part in preaching the gospel by ministering to the workers. All who have experienced the saving grace of God desire to have a part in sending the gospel to others that they too might be saved. The church is greatly indebted to the work of consecrated women.

III. The Missionary Message (John 3:16, 17).

The salvation which is offered to the lost world was accomplished through the sacrificial death of Christ. Out of a heart of love God gave His own son to die. The figure portraying the method of the Cross and salvation is that of the brazen serpent. The outstanding teaching as suggested by Dr. Charles R. Erdman is as follows:

"1. That men are, like the Israelites of old, serpent-bitten; but the deadly poison is the sting of sin.

"2. God has provided a remedy in the person of His Son; in His crucifixion we see sin vanquished, as the uplifted serpent pictured the death of the destroyer; yet as the uplifted serpent was not real but one of brass, so Christ was not really a partaker of sin but only made in the likeness of sinful flesh.

"3. As it was necessary for the dying Israelites to accept God's provision, and with submission and faith to look upon the brazen serpent, so it is necessary for us to look in repentance and faith to the crucified Savior and to commit ourselves to God as He is graciously revealed in Jesus Christ. If we refuse to accept Christ we perish, but faith results in eternal life.

"4. This provision is made by the love of God and is freely offered to everyone who believes. 'For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.'"

His Presence.

When we have broken our god of tradition, and ceased from our god of rhetoric, then may God fire the heart with His presence.—Emerson.

God's Way.

God's way of forgiving is thorough and hearty—both to forgive and to forget; and if thine be not so, thou hast no portion of His.—Leighton.

RECIPE FOR MAKING DILL PICKLES

Preparing the Brine for Dill Pickles.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Dill pickles are made from fresh or salted cucumbers (the former are choicer, says the United States Department of Agriculture, but the latter have better keeping qualities). Employ pickled dill seed or herb and "dill spice," composed of allspice, black pepper, coriander seed and bay leaves, in addition to the brine.

Soak 100 cucumbers in a 30-degree brine (about 15 ounces of salt to 6 quarts of water) until the brine will give an acid test, i. e., turns red when tested with litmus paper (which may be bought at a drug store). Drain and arrange in layers in a crock, putting in a layer of cherry or grape leaves first, then the cucumbers, then a few cloves, the dill, a few small pieces of red pepper and then the leaves. Continue until the crock is full. Cover with the brine which was drained off and to which has been added one-half cupful of mustard seed, one-half cupful of horseradish and one-half cupful of salt. Cover with a light weight and seal airtight with paraffin for winter use.

APPLE PECTIN SIRUP MAKES GOOD JELLIES

Concentrated Product Useful at Any Time of Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The up-to-date home jelly maker knows that fruit juices must contain acid, sugar, and pectin in the right proportions in order to make good jellies. Lemon or other sour fruit juice, she has found, can be added to give acid if needed, and the right proportion of sugar is fairly easy to determine, but how to supply pectin is often a serious difficulty. Yet it is frequently the case that failures in jelly making are the result of too low a proportion of pectin in the fruit juice.

Some fruits and vegetables are very rich in pectin, particularly when slightly underripe, while others contain only a trace or none at all. Yet some of the juices lacking in pectin, such as strawberry, cherry, rhubarb, and peach, are otherwise ideal for jelly making. Apples and currants are among the pectin-rich fruits, and housekeepers discovered long ago that the juice of various other fruits would make good jelly if combined with either of these. But for several reasons this practice is not always desirable. The United States Department of Agriculture has therefore perfected a home method of making concentrated pectin sirups that can be kept on hand for use at any time and added in small quantities to many kinds of fruit juices to insure success in jelly making.

Cooking Jelly.

Firm, hard, tart apples, underripe rather than overripe, have been found excellent for making this pectin sirup. Even apples of insipid flavor such as Ben Davis, may be used, and the fruits need not be perfect if sound and untainted.

Wash and scrub the apples thoroughly, and without paring or coring them, cut them in thin slices.

Recipe for Apple Pectin Sirup.

4 pounds of apples 4½ pints of water

Slice the apples thin; this is better than passing them through a meat grinder, since finely ground apples darken very quickly, and impart an unattractive color to the pectin extract. Place in a granite saucepan large enough so that the whole mass can be brought quickly to boiling. Cover the pan and boil the mixture rapidly for twenty minutes. Rapid boiling is recommended because it seems to preserve color and flavor better than long, slow boiling, and extracts the pectin with less danger of decomposing it through overheating.

When the boiling is finished, strain the mass through four thicknesses of cheesecloth until the juice ceases to drip. It is not advisable to squeeze the bag; but the pomace, or pulp, may be lightly pressed with a spoon toward the end of the dripping period, to force the flow of the last drops of the juice.

When dripping is complete, remove the pomace from the bag, weigh or measure it, return it to the saucepan, and add an equal quantity of water. Boil again for twenty minutes, and strain. The first two extractions should together amount to about three quarts. Mix them together in a wide granite pan, such as a dish pan, large enough so that the liquid will not be more than two inches deep. Heat rapidly until the liquid is reduced to one-fourth of its original volume, or to about 1½ pints; this usually requires from 30 to 45 minutes. The concentration should be carried, on rapidly, since it is easy to injure the pectin if the boiling process continues for several hours.

The concentrated juice is a thick sirupy liquid which usually has a strong apple flavor; its color varies from dark to light reddish brown according to the kind of apples used, the color of their skins, and the promptness with which the material has been handled. When cold, there is a heavy sediment, which contains considerable pectin.

Pectin sirup rightly used improves the quality of jelly. It should therefore be used with rich full-flavored juices that lack pectin and could not otherwise be made into jelly successfully. Pectin sirup should never be used to conceal the inferiority of watered juices.

Jellies of excellent texture can be made from the juice of strawberries, black or red raspberries, ripe grapes, sweet non-acid plums, ripe quinces, rhubarb, and other fruits, by combining this pectin sirup in the proportion of four tablespoonfuls to one cupful of the fruit juice. The jelly is made in the usual way, except that the pectin sirup is added to the hot strained juice after the sugar has been dissolved in it and just as it begins to boil.

GOOD IDEA FOR PIN MONEY

Texas Home Demonstration Agent Reports Much Work in Tinting Flowers and Cones.

Dried winter bouquets have been more and more used within the past few years, and from Bee county, Texas, the home demonstration agent reports to the United States Department of Agriculture that a great deal of work has been done in tinting wild flowers, pine cones and grasses for this purpose. Here is an idea for pin money and also for the skillful-fingered woman to brighten up her home when fresh cut flowers are not available. From Mississippi come large flowers resembling dahlias, made of parts of pine cones, tinted deep red, lavender, and other dahlia colors, with enamel paint. These are combined with dried sprays of bamboo leaves, to make an effective filling for a table vase or hall bowl.

CHEVROLET

Every Farm Needs Two

EVERY farm needs two automobiles, one of which should be a closed model Chevrolet.

The open touring car is best for general farm use, carrying passengers or perhaps miscellaneous bulky produce or merchandise, but for cold or rainy weather, and for church or social use the family needs a closed car, either a 2-passenger Utility Coupé as illustrated, or the 5-passenger Sedan. The extra large rear compartment is a feature of the Coupé.

These closed cars are very finely made, furnished, upholstered and trimmed. The windows are of plate glass and can be lowered, providing as much air as an open car, yet affording full protection against wind, rain, snow or cold when raised.

With a second car on a farm, one is always available for those at home when the other car is out.

The low prices of Chevrolet make the ownership of two cars feasible for most farm families.

FEDERAL LAW ON HUNTING

Prohibits Shooting of Migratory Fowl After Sunset—South Dakota Hunters Face Arrest.

Hunting migratory game birds is permitted under federal regulations each day during the open season from half an hour before sunrise to sunset. Persons found hunting between sunset and half an hour before sunrise are liable to prosecution in federal court under the provisions of Regulations 4 of the migratory-bird treaty-act regulations. A state law recently passed by the legislature of South Dakota provides that waterfowl may be shot half an hour after sunset. The biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture points out that state legislatures may pass laws to give further protection to migratory birds, if such laws or regulations do not extend the open seasons for such birds beyond the time prescribed by the migratory-bird treaty-act regulations. Although the state law permits shooting from sunrise to half an hour after sunset, a person so doing may be arrested and prosecuted under the federal law, administered by the Department of Agriculture.

Three Objections.

The old Scottish minister was tireless in looking up members of his flock and was never so happy as when he was visiting them in their houses.

He had noticed that for some time one hitherto regular church-goer had become very slack in his attendance at the service and he resolved to go and find out the reason for this neglect.

"Donald," he said, as soon as he was seated in the parlor, "I havena seen ye at the kirk for some time."

"No, sir," replied the man.

"And I wad like to know the reason."

"Weel, sir," replied Donald, "I hae three decided objections. Firstly, I dinna believe in sae muckle singin'; secondly, I dinna believe in bein' wheur ye dae a' the talkin', an', thirdly, an' in conclusion, 'twas there I got me wife."

The minister asked no more questions.

STATEMENT

Of the Ownership, Management, Circulation, etc., required by the Act of Congress of August 24, 1912, of Chilton County News published weekly at Calnton, Alabama for Oct. 1st, 1923.

State of Alabama.
County of Chilton.

Before me, a Notary Public in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared W. B. Corley, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the editor of the Chilton County News and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are:

Publisher, C. B. Cox, Clanton, Ala.
Editor, W. B. Corley, Clanton, Ala.
Managing Editor, none.
Business Manager, W. B. Corley, Clanton, Ala.

2. That the owner is: C. B. Cox, Clanton, Ala.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: Mergenthaler Linotype Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holders appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

W. B. CORLEY.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this, 7th day of Nov. 1923.

LAWRENCE F. GERALD,
Notary Public.

My commission expires Sept. 9th, 1926.

NON-STOP RECORD IS ESTABLISHED BY A STUDEBAKER CAR

Year's Mileage Crowded into a Week's Running—5504 Miles Covered by Light-Six In Seven-Day Run Conducted at Syracuse, N. Y.

Running continuously for seven days for a distance of 5504 miles at an average speed of 33-9-16 miles per hour, a Studebaker Light-Six has just completed another remarkable performance record at Syracuse, N. Y.

The run was undertaken by Gere & Willis, Studebaker dealers in Syracuse, to demontrate the merit of Studebaker Light-Six cars for performance, endurance and economy.

In seven days' time, the Light-Six delivered more than the average mileage for a whole year and did it so decisively that it is causing wide comment among motorists in that section of the country.

Outstanding features of the long run were the fact that the highest average for any one hour during the run was 48 miles; the highest speed, 67 miles an hour; the use of but three gallons of water for the whole run and the further fact that no air was put into the tires during the entire seven days.

The best gasoline average for a six-hour period the trip was 23 miles, and for the whole trip, the average was 18.1 miles to the gallon.

Thirteen man took turn-about driving and at all times an observer of the Syracuse "Post-Standard" accompanied the car.

Exculsive mechanical features of the Light-Six motor account largely for this remarkable record in the opinion of Geo. C. Polk, local Studebaker dealer.

"For example," said he, "Studebaker machines all surfaces of the crankshaft and conencting rods of the Light-Six engine instead of the usual practice of machining only the bearing surfaces. This insures exact balance and uniform weight of reciprocating parts.

"Vibration is, therefore, practically eliminated, a feature that is responsible in part, for unusual records of performance such as the run at Syracuse."

ARCHITECT W. S. PRICE

As the beautiful Methodist church gradually assumes form and symetry under the hands of the skilled architect and builder, Mr. W. S. Price, we feel ike it is a courtesy due to efficiency, to extend to him our highest congratuations on the chaste and lovely dream of his that is becoming more and more a reality, as the saws, hammers and trowels of the workmen form the ideas if his brain into real massive loveliness and stability each day.

When he has finished, he will leave in Clanton a lasting monument and testemonial to his worth and ability as a dreamer of splendid architectural dreams and the absolute ability to make them come true.

Four-Cylinder, Five-Passenger Sedan
The Standard of Comparison

A Fine Sedan Anyone Can Own

How capably Buick provides the maximum of closed car comfort, power and utility is well expressed in this new 1924 four-cylinder, five-passenger Sedan. Everything that could be asked for is here. There is the well-proportioned, attractive body, Fisher-built. There is the famous Buick-valve-in-head engine. There are the proved Buick four-wheel brakes.

Yet with all of its splendid qualities and mechanical superiorities, the price of this sedan is modest—within the means of the majority of motor car buyers.

WHAT WE SHOULD HAVE HAD NOW

A Few of the Important Things That We Have Allowed to go by Because We Did Not Go After Them.

In a few brief and busy weeks now and we will have told the good year of 1923 farewell.

Thanksgiving is right now on our hands and the hurly burly of Christmas is just in the offing. Almost before you know it, we will ring out the old and ring in the new and 1924 will be dealing out to us the joys and the sorrows, the opportunities and the disappointments that are awaiting us just around the corner.

It is a propitious time now to take stock of ourselves. Rejoice over our successes and grieve over our failures with an eye to profit by experience and take more advantage of our opportunities as they present themselves hereafter.

At one time this year a drainage project, worth thousands of dollars to all of this section, was almost an assured fact. All of the work of organization was put over and everything was ready to congeal into a reality when, for lack of a coordinated support and a spirit of progressive energy, the matter was allowed to go to sleep and is still sleeping.

The failure of this valuable and essential project to go through was not owing to financial troubles, but was due to the fact that it takes a compact and a live business organization to put these kind of enterprises over and this most important of assets in promoting thrift and prosperity, we did not have.

Some time in the future this drainage project will become a reality because it will not only bring wonderful financial gains but for the reason that we will be compelled to have more room, and this waste land lies right where we are going to have to spread out with industries and dwellings.

Another thing. Last spring northern cotton mills were falling down over each other seeking locations in the south and Alabama was the favorite with them because of our unlimited power.

Here we are sitting right in the front yard of the greatest commercial power company in the world; with an ideal climate and plenty of local labor, and we did not so much as extend to any of them an invitation to come and see us. A local capitalist here expressed a willingness to half up the investment in a $200,000 cotton mill here and we never even gave that fact out to investors as an inducement to draw them here.

We did not coordinate our efforts and go after a cotton mill in a business way and we failed to get one, while other less favorable locations in Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina gathered them fore and aft.

Another thing. For two years now the State and Federal governments have been spending millions of dollars of tax money in building public roads. About every county in the state has had from one to four projects given them. Here we are, located midway on what is, by far, the most important road in the state, still, we have not had one shovel full of dirt moved in our county and no prosect of any, even in the distant future.

Here is where our lack of a live, coordinated body, which would always be alive to our interests, has caused us to lose another most important asset. It has been said by those who know, that if we had gone after this road like the other counties did, that we would have had it long ago. Even yet we are doing nothing on this line and every few days we see where some county is given another 10 or 15 mile "settlement road" while we, located in the center of the state, right where two of the main highways cross, are getting exactly what we ask for—nothing.

These are a few of the big thing we have thrown away in 1923. Are we going to do any better next year? Can't we organize some kind of a business organization, a Booster Club, a Civitan Club or some kind of a club that will have for its sole purpose the building up of Clanton and Chilton county? Make it county-wide and keep it utterly and everlastingly aloof from local commercial affairs.

JAW INJURED, CHILD DIES OF POISONING

TROY, Ala., Nov 19—Mary Nenn English died Sunday at the Pike county Masonic hospital in Troy. She was brought to Troy from Elba, November 5, and had an operation for the removal of her jaw bone and later blood poison developed, from which she died.

The little girl was drinking water from a dipper and some one in passing knocked her elbow, causing the dipper to strike with such force against her mouth that her jaw bone was broken and several teeth knocked out. She was nine years old.

WOULD MANIPULATE ALA. DEATH CHAIR

Of all the forms of employment even the least desirable, that of official executioner in states where the courts impose the death penalty is probably least sought after. Some one must do these things, to be sure. Sentences of the law must be carried out, but an application for the post of official executioner, or electrocutioner, as the case may be, is so rare as to be almost unique.

Yet on Monday, there was received at the capitol at Montgomery, from a western state, such an application. The writer stated he had seen in the press that Alabama has substituted electrocution for hanging in the execution of persons condemned to death in the courts of the state. He said he did not know whether the state of Alabama was able to employ a man here qualified to carry out such sentences, adding that he is an electrician, and that he would take the position either on a salary or a per capita basis.

ON VACATION

Miss Hattie Jones, one of Clanton's most popular young ladies, who has been, for a year or more the private secretary and typist for Senator J. Thos. Heflin, is at home now for a ten day vacation.

Miss Hattie is leaving in a day or so for Washington to resume her duties.

You all remember how highly Senator Heflin spoke of her efficiency in his recent speech here, all of which we know was well merited praise for we know something of her splendid work ourselves.

The Chilton County News follows her always with its very best wishes for her success and happiness.

HIGHWAYS CREATE MORE PATRIOTISM

Need of National Roads Seen in New Memorial

The George Washington Masonic Memorial, being erected to Washington the Mason, by the Master Masons of the United States, on Shooter's Hill, just outside the city of Alexandria, in Virginia, and half way between the city which bears the First President's name and the tomb in which his remains lie at rest, is not upon a national road.

The home and tomb of Washington at Mt. Vernon is not reached from anywhere by a national road.

There must inevitably come a time when this nation will rise in revolt against a penurious policy which leaves to a patriotic order of devoted women the care and preservation of the priceless relics of Washington, which are in his estate, and make of Mt Vernon what it ought to be, a Government charge and care. The Masonic fraternity has aready provided for a monumental resting place for the Masonic relics of George Washington. But will we always have to Virginia the making, the repairing, and the preservation of the roads which connect these three—home, Temple, and city?

Virginia, has not, so far, been able to list herself among those States prominently identified with the good-roads movement, although she has made vast strides in recent years. The road from Washington to the Temple, and from Alexandria to Mt. Vernon is a good road, but it should be the work of the United States Government to see that so important a road is perfect. In this is seen another among many arguments, as to why this great nation should itself build and forever maintain the backbone roads which, as National Highways, will serve all the people all the time.

BACK FROM DETROIT

Mr. R. C. McDavid, the clever and enterprising Ford distributor for this section and one of our most valuable citizens, has just returned from a trip to the great Ford headquarters at Detroit.

They had an agent and salesman convention and the Ford business family from all over the United States was represented.

Mr. McDavid says that language cannot convey to any one even a half way realization of the immensity and the perfect coordination of the Ford industries.

They not only make the Ford cars, tractors, trucks, with millions or parts to supply the needs of all of these after they are sold into service, but they likewise build the splendid, high class Lincoln cars that are so very popular in the west and northwest.

Mr. McDavid was greatly pleased with his trip and with the many wonderful sights he saw and came home a more enthusiastic booster for the Ford and the Ford products than even before he went.

There was nothing to indicate at headquarters that the Ford organization was looking for any hard times ahead, for they are increasing their output every day.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Next Thursday has been officially proclaimed as Thanksgiving Day.

You have one week now in which to make all of your arrangements to camouflage the dinner table, likewise all of your grouches and grumblings and work yourself up to a proper spirit of thankfulness.

In the old Puritan days this feast meant something and was kept in spirit and in truth, but in our day, we doubt if any serious thought is ever given to it, more than the added effort of trying to have just a little bigger dinner than our neighbor.

Even in our day the various churches used to hold special services on that day and return thanks for the many blessings of the year, but that is out of fashion now and we don't have time to attend no how.

In keeping with the time honored custom, the president has named the day and the opportunity is before us.

Here's hoping that every reader of the News will have a glorious good dinner and a continued pouring out of the manifold blessings that have followed us all through another season. There is one blessing we can all be thankful for and that is that God has not called us before his judgement bar.

CHILTON HI VS. ECLECTIC HI

The Football Game Last Friday Skillful Playing and Phenominal Team Work Won for Chilton

Last Friday afternoon was an ideal day for a football game. A nippy breeze out of the northwest had just enough tinge of winter in it to put pep in the system, while the bright slanting sunbeams took the keen edge off and made of the afternoon a typical autumn day in the southland.

A goodly number of fans assembled at Polks Park as the hour of 3 p. m. drew nigh and promptly to the hour, the Eclectic warriors and the Chilton Tigers took their line up on the battlefield and the fight was on.

When we first saw the two teams, our heart went down in our boots, for that lusty bunch from Eclectic stacked up mighty fine, having quite the odds on the Chilton team in weight, but after we saw the first rush or two we regained our normal confidence, for the featherweight Chiltonians held the ball every time almost to a yard of the start. We soon realized that there was something else in football more important than brute force and ponderous adipose tissue.

Although the game was a thriller from start to finish it was terribly one-sided at every stage. The Chiltonian trick plays and wonderfully executed forward passes, would carry them across the field to a goal before you could hardly realize that they had the spheroid at all. They scored 26 points in the first half and 36 in the last half. At no period of the game did they ever allow their hard fighting opponents to even threaten to score.

Good order, good behavior and good humor prevailed during the entire game and it must be said, to the credit of Eclectic, that they are true sportsmen and game and genteel losers.

Coach Pegues has simply made of his team a perfect machine that functions absolutely under every contingency of a game. The team work is a marvel and the accuracy with which they pull off some really brilliant and startling plays was the subject of much comment by the fans.

The girls of Chilton Hi were also largely in evidence and during the half way period they marched over on the gridiron and circled their boys with an incantation of victory in song and and then gave them the official yell of the school to cheer them on with their loyalty. They marched around the Eclectic hosts and invoked the fates to tangle them and make them lose.

The Verbena clan that are going to storm the lair of the Chilton tigers on Thanksgiving day will find a mighty tricky bunch of cats to handle and they better bring all of their bag of tricks along with a good bevy of school girl backers, if they expect to carry any Tiger scalps back to their wigwam.

There were so many fancy players on the Chilton squad that we can hardly specialize but Jack Hayes and Crit Jones deserve special mention for their spectacular end running.

The Eclectic team all played good ball but sadly lacked the team work that made Chilton an easy winner.

Following is the line-up:

Clanton	Position	Eclectic
Kuffin	le	Adkins
Roberts	lt	Smith
Parrish	lg	O'Daniel

HAPPY TOURISTS

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. M. Ross of Lawsatha, Kan., who are a splendid young couple of newspaper folks and get out a paper in their home town, made us a pleasant call last Saturday.

They are traveling by auto and are leisurely making a tour of the South, heading towards Florida ahead of the blizzards.

They are pleased with our southland and are contemplating buying a home and running away from the ice and snow of Kansas.

PLEASANT GROVE—JEMISON

There will be a box supper at this place Saturday night, November 24, for the benefit of the hurch. Everybody is invited.

INEZ WRIGHT.

NEW BOARD OF REGISTRARS

A new board of registrars was appointed for Chitlon county last Saturday.

Squire J. W. E. Gulledge is the only member of the old board that was reappointed.

The board now is: J. W. E. Gulledge, chairman; J. L. Johnson and Enoch Adams, the latter two taking the places of J. R. Parnell of Thorsby and H. B. Oliver of Verbena.

This new board will be in charge of the next registration and will, no doubt, sweep the county pretty clean before their books close.

WAGE INCREASE AND FARMING

Artificial and abnormal wage increases stimulate increase of labor-saving mahinery in business, industries and on the farms.

George E. Roberts, in the National City Bank bulletin, says:

"As between the farmers and wage-earners, a rise of wages without a corresponding rise in the prices of farm products means that to the extent that the wage-earners consume each other's products they pay for the rise themselves, while in the case of the farmer as a normal consumer, his purchases will be reduced and the falling off will affect the industries unfavorably. The same is true of all classes except the particular wage-earners whose wages have been increased. Moreover, in the long run if the compensation of the farmer remains below the level of that in the other industries, there will be a shift of labor from the farms to the industries until higher prices for farm products or lower compensation in the other industries restores the equilibrium. Meanwhile, however, a geenral rise of wages, which has the effect of diminishing the compensation of the farmer, can be neither justified in morals nor made permanent. And of course the same would be true of any arbitrary effort to force wages below the normal level of compensation, cost of living considered."

McADOO TO RUN

The formal entry of William Gibbs McAdoo into the race for presidential nominee of the Democratic party was made last Thursday.

As the situation now stands the real race will develop bewteen Underwood and McAdoo. Both of these gentlemen are able statesmen and fully competent to give a splendid account of themselves as president of this great country.

Our opinion is that Mr. McAdoo will have an immense labor following, especially in the west, the northwest and the south, and his known position as one of the "dryest" men in public life will pull largely for him with the dry wing of the party.

On the other hand the recognized soundness and ability of Underwood as a thorough international statesman and safe and careful thinker will give him a large following in the business and commercial field all over the country.

Now, the question is, which is the most valuable vote in a try out before the whole people of the United States.

Mr. B. W. Tyus was among those we had the pleasure of greeting on the streets here Saturday.

PRATTVILLE WOULD ALTAR ROAD PLANS

Ask State Highway Commission to Divert Montgomery Birmingham Thoroughfare.

Proposals for alteration of present plans so as to provide that the Montgomery-Birmingham highway would pass through Prattville, in a northwesterly direction, was presented to the state highway commission Monday by a delegation of Autauga county citizens, headed by Claud Smith, member of the board of revenue.

Present plans are for the highway to pass about two miles east of Prattville. Members of the Autauga delegation maintained that if the route were changed as suggested by them the communities which would be served if the road were built in accordance with present plans, will be served anyhow by the Roy Bridge road, which the state will improve. The commission wil linvestigate the proposal.

NOBODY GETS TO HELL IN A SINGLE JUMP

"Nobody goes to hell in one jump," Rev. George R. Stuart of the First Methodist church Birmingham declared Sunday night in the first of a series of lectures on "First Steps in Sin." "We go by a gradual process of yielding to one sin after another until our powers of resistance are broken."

Standing room was at a premium before the preaching hour rolled around.

Keeping bad company was given as one of the main causes for so much sin in the world. The story of man's fall in the Garden of Eden was drawn upon for a moral, which was found in the careless manner in which Eve made friends with the devil represented by the serpent. Young people were warned to be careful of their companions, and a word of caution spoken against hasty marriages, which, Dr. Stuart pointed out, often lead to unhappiness.

"It is the idle man or woman who usually gets into trouble," he continued, passing on to his second point, "The serpent went to Eve and tempted her because she was idle. Adam was busy and escaped temptation. That is one of the main objections I have to wealth, that it makes for too much leisure and temptation."

The successful and happy life was described as the life of struggle. It is easy to float with the stream or to coast downhill, Dr. Stuart said, but the person who makes more than a fair success of his Christian life must go against the current of popular whims and fancies.

"There are three kinds of influences that are included in a person's companions," he added. "These are literature, pictures and other people. All of these have an important influence on the sort of life a man leads."

FAIRVIEW

This school is celebrating Thanksgiving with a short but most interesting program followed by a box supper, contest for the prettiest girl and candy drawing. The entertainment will begin about 7:45 p. m. Admission free. Proceeds to go for benefit of school. Everybody come and make the occasion a most happy one.

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Eptiomized Form.

The new Madison county wheel tax which has been decided upon as a means of raising additional money for the public roads, will be put in effect the first of the new year, while the monthly commercial tax will be made payable on December 1 and the first of each month thereafter. The scale agreed on is: One-horse wagon or one-horse [illegible] buggy or wagon, $2.50; one-horse commercial wagon, $1.50 per month; two-horse wagon, $2.50 per month; four-horse wagon, $5 per month; six-horse wagon, $7.50 per month. All the money collected from this tax will be used in the improvement of roads in the precinct in which collected and on the roads nearest the man who pays it.

William Harris, president of the Tennessee Valley Negro Fair association, has given the press a statement declaring his belief that many more negro farmers will be leaving Alabama for the north during the approaching winter unless something is done to hold them. He declares many of them cannot live until the landowners make seasonal provisions for them in the spring and that their removal will be a necessity in a great many cases. Harris suggests that road building and other public works be planned be started as soon as possible so as to provide the needy negroes with employment

Marshall County citizens have presented their claims for state and federal participation in the erection of the proposed bridge over the Tennessee river at Guntersville to J. H. Scruggs and J. F. Suttle, members of the state highway commission. It is said that the argument for state and federal aid in the project was based mainly on two facts: First, the county is too small to undertake the construction of such a costly bridge as would be necessary, second, the structure would be a part of Jackson highway, which is one of the main routes of tourist travel north and south.

The cotton grower in Alabama is not so badly off financially this year as he has been in others, according to F. W. Glst, of Montgomery, of the state bureau of economics of the department of agriculture. He pointed out that the state will [illegible] year about 100,000 more bales of cotton than was produced two years ago. He stated the increased acreage this season had, of course, greatly increased the [illegible] crop, but added that the [illegible] increased price would, undoubtedly in offsetting this disadvantage.

A verdict of $500 for the plaintiff was returned by a jury in Jefferson county in the case of Isaac Williams, negro, against W. C. McCarty, loan broker. Williams sued [illegible] grounds of unlawful garnishment. The plaintiff testified that he had been paying interest of $2 every pay day to McCarty on a loan of $12 two years ago. It was figured out that a total sum of $170 had been paid as interest on the money.

Ensley will have an arcade shopping district in the near future, if present plans mature. A project is being considered to widen and pave the alleys in two downtown blocks so as to make eight small blocks, with nothing but pedestrians allowed on the narrow walks, to be made from the alleys. Safety, and a greater ease in going from one shop to another, are the chief advantages of the plan, it is claimed.

Abolition of the convict leasing system in Alabama or the entire revision within the near future was forecast in a report that Governor Brandon would appoint a committee of prominent citizens of the state to investigate fully the [illegible] and submit a report to him with recommendations on which he would urge the state board of convict supervisors to act favorably.

The county commissioners of St Clair county met at Ashville and adopted the survey of Mr. Moore, who has laid out the work of a road from Odenville to Pell City. The citizens of the towns of Pell City and Odenville and adjoining communities have been working on the project for some time. They have secured a right-of-way 50 feet wide and have cleared it between the two towns.

The Southern Manufacturing Company of Gadsden will shortly begin the construction of a plant to mill lumber in transit in connection with its large finishing mills. It is said that the company desires to take care of all the surplus rough lumber produced in the county and district. The new buildings will be of brick and the equipment will be modern in every respect. The cost will be around $100,000.

Action of the executive committee of the Calhoun County Rural Letter Carriers association in condemning the bad condition of the county roads over which they travel daily and which was presented to the county board of revenue, aroused attention of many Anniston people. The protest was in the form of a resolution asking that immediate repairs be made on several of the roads of the county.

The extent to which the general public is responsible for the enforcement of law has been forcibly brought to the fore by the Morgan county grand jury. In its report last week the jury stated its regret that it could not bring an indictment against the public for its apparent indifference to the enforcement of law. The jury's report has created wide discussion.

Carbon Hill is in the midst of a building boom, according to George W. Wakefield and Luther Sides, prominent merchants of that place. Messrs. Wakefield and Sides stated new brick business houses are in course of construction in Carbon Hill this fall, and other substantial buildings are contemplated by Carbon Hill business men.

Arthur Segars, white, convict from Lauderdale county, made a daring escape by leaping from a train near Jemison, while en route to the mines. Twenty men were being transferred from Kilby prison to Aldrich on the train leaving Montgomery. When the train slowed up near Jemison, Segars made a successful leap for liberty.

J. H. LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 25

CHRISTIANS CALLED TO BE MISSIONARIES

LESSON TEXT—John 17:18; Matt. 28:16-20; Acts 1:6-8.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Go ye therefore and teach all nations."—Matt. 28:19.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling Everyone About Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Our Marching Orders.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Working Together With Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—World-Wide Witnessing for Christ.

I. Sent by Christ (John 17:18).

Christ was sent into the world to save it. Just as He was sent, so He sends us. Just as He was obedient to the Father's command, so we should be to His command. That this might be possible Christ set apart himself, and that the disciples might be fit for this work they are to be sanctified through the truth of God's Word. That which fits the one called to represent Christ is the knowledge of God's holy Word.

II. The Great Commission (Matt. 28:16-20).

At an appointed meeting place in Galilee on a mountain side, Jesus appeared before the disciples and gave this great commission.

1. His Claim of Authority (v. 18). He does not claim to be merely the King of the Jews, but King of Kings and Lord of Lords. He stands clothed with the authority and power of the universe. Before there will be any great concern about evangelizing the world there must be an understanding of the power and might of Jesus Christ as Lord. The Lord must and shall be obeyed.

2. The Obligation Imposed (vv. 19, 20). They are to make disciples of all nations. The obligation of the Christian is not merely to preach the gospel to the Jews, but to all the nations. Those who accept Christ as Savior and Lord are to be baptized in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. By this means they openly acknowledge their allegiance to Jesus Christ as their divine Lord. To secure public avowal of loyalty to Christ is important. It strengthens the character of the confessor. They are also to be instructed to render obedience to all the commandments and requirements of the divine Lord.

3. The Divine Presence Promised (v. 20). To assure the disciples of the success of their undertaking, Jesus guarantees His presence at all times and under all circumstances. That which gives courage and encouragement to the missionary today is the assurance of the unfailing promise of the Lord Jesus Christ.

III. The Missionary Program (Acts 1:6-8).

It is essential that the missionary program be understood. The work incumbent upon the church is to witness of Christ's gracious salvation to all the nations. After this is done there will follow the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom by converted Israelites. This was not clear to the disciples, therefore they put the question, "Wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom of Israel?" They were right in thinking that the kingdom will be restored. The Davidic kingdom shall be established, but not till after the gospel of the grace of God is preached and the body of Christ is completed. Its realization is certain, but the time is unknown. Times and seasons are in the hands of God. The program which the disciples are to carry out in this present time is witnessing for Christ.

1. In Jerusalem (v. 8). This was done by the Twelve immediately following Pentecost.

2. In Judea and Samaria (v. 8). This was done by the disciples after the hands of the persecutors were laid on them. Not only the Twelve but many others took part in this.

3. Unto the Uttermost Parts of the Earth. Beginning with the first foreign missionary enterprise this work has been carried on with varying degrees of success till the present time.

Being Self-Centered.

Nothing is more wearing or a more fruitful source of unhappiness in the long run than to be self-centered. If our thoughts and plans, our hopes and fears, our ideals and ambitions all center in our own personal comfort and happiness, there must come many a day of infinite weariness and self-disgust when life does not seem worth living. Poverty or riches have very little to do with it. You will find just as many well-to-do people as poor, for whom life has lost its spice and enthusiasm. It is not a question of capital, but of character.

No Place Sweeter Than Home.

It is very dangerous for any man to find any spot on this broad globe that is sweeter to him than his home.—H. W. Beecher.

A Mind In Health.

The first sure symptom of a mind in health is rest of heart, and pleasure felt at home.—Young.

God Should Be There.

A cottage, if God be there, will hold as much happiness as might stock a palace.—J. Hamilton.

ARE STRONG ON ETIQUETTE

Observance of Ceremonious Forms In China Is Considered of the Highest Importance.

When a salesman, or person seeking business interviews, presents his card at the entrance to a Chinese merchant's place of business, the possibility of an audience depends altogether upon how he deports himself while awaiting the return of the cardbearer. Should he be so indiscreet as to put one foot over the 12-inch railing that intervenes between the step and the doorway, no manner of persuasion can prevail upon the merchant to grant him an interview. In case he waits patiently in the space allotted to unknown callers, this fact is noted, and he is usually ushered in.

Once in, there is still a more delicate matter to be disposed of, and in case the newcomer is ignorant of the customs, he fares ill with his errand. Immediately upon the caller's entering and taking a seat, a servant brings a serving of tea, which includes a small cup for each person present. The point of etiquette demands that this tea shall not be touched until the guest is ready to depart, in case the interview has been a pleasant one, in which event the caller is supposed to take up and drink his tea at parting, and at this signal all the others do likewise. However, should it so happen that the Chinese is not pleased with his caller, and is in any way annoyed by him, he takes up the tea and begins to drink at once, which act is a direct and decided hint that the interview is ended, and has not been to the pleasure of the merchant. The caller is then expected to take his immediate departure.

When a caller has become well acquainted, some of the formality is broken by the Chinese, and on a cold day a cup of tea is served immediately to the guest in a social way. But the "formal" tea is still to be observed and partaken of at parting, irrespective of the cup given to warm and greet the caller on his arrival. This, however, is done only after many visits, when the business dealings have been of such a nature as to warrant friendship and this hospitality.

Inventions Must Wait.

In his new book, "We and Our Work," Joseph French Johnson corrects thus a possibly current error about the inevitableness of the inventor:

"Many people imagine that a man like Edison could invent almost anything and anywhere.

"That is not true. If Mr. Edison had lived in 1800 he could not have made one single invention for which he is now justly famous.

"The science of physics was not advanced far enough in 1800 to enable anyone to invent the electric light.

"Much has been said about Marconi and his genius in inventing the 'wireless.'

"But back of this invention was the work, continued for many years, of English and German scientists, who showed how the waves of the air spread.

"Marconi himself has acknowledged his debt to these men."

Yes, even the inventor of the lately popular refrain, "Yes, We Have No Bananas," might have had to wait on the discovery of the banana plant.

IN LOVE WITH THE MOON

Writer Admits Attraction of the Night, As She Gallops "Down the Milky Way."

Far beyond the pale blue sky, beyond the horizon where the setting sun blazes high, my fancy wanders into thoughts trailing like a comet through the ether.

Once again I am a child and play, carefree and innocent. I touch the stars, I probe for the seventh of Pleiades. They do not fall, only blink and blink away with dawn. I gallop down the milky way like a Crotonian steed and shy at Venus, writes Clara Frazee in the Los Angeles Times.

Oh, how I love the night, the still, still night, when the moon plays with me. When she smiles at me, I watch her move slowly behind the clouds piled and clustered like herded sheep on a distant green slope.

She looks down on me hypnotically and seems to say:

"You thought I was 'green cheese'?"

I gaze vaguely, and she continues: "Foolish, foolish, I am not 'green cheese,' I am the 'ball of love,' lighting the way and inspiring romance from above. When all is dark and still, and love seems sad, I hide behind the knotted gray and white. Sometimes, I too, feel pale and stealthily glide through the day and follow the golden rays. I love the sun, I want to be near him; he makes me weary and dim and at night hides. So, boldly I defy him and call on my friends, the stars. Time is short, day breaks fast, and I must rest, so we dance and twinkle and blink and flirt with mortals below.

"Ah, child, you are weeping and sad. I know, you are waiting for his return and I have touched the romantic cord, unused.

"There, there, do not wail, trot on to thy bed, I am not 'green cheese.' As the 'ball of love' let me bounce through and plunder your dreams."

I am no longer a child; sad eyes, sad soul, sad fingers, reach but for the realms of Morpheus.

RESTORE GEMS WITH FLAWS

Defective Diamonds Made Perfect in Brazil—Only Small Loss in Weight Noted.

It is said that the process of restoring defective diamonds is almost a lost art, but a recent traveler in the diamond fields saw the operation performed by an old man of his acquaintance who seemed pleased to show his skill. The process is called burning and in Brazil is carried out as follows:

A small crucible is placed on the blacksmith's hearth, and when it is cherry red the flawed or lusterless diamonds are dropped into it with a spoon. Charcoal is then heaped around it and a blast is maintained until a welding heat has been reached. That stage requires about three minutes.

The crucible is then taken from the fire and examined. The diamonds are immediately replaced in the crucible and the heat is maintained a minute and a half longer. Finally the crucible is taken from the fire and, after a teaspoonful of potassium nitrate has been thrown into it, it is well shaken.

As soon as the vapor has dispersed, the diamonds are scraped out singly and allowed to fall into a basin of water. The loss in weight is said to be a little more than 8 per cent, but the increase in value is nearly 100 per cent.

"'In the days of Lafitte the world was straight as a switch,'" translated De Marigny for the benefit of a young American lieutenant, "and, look you, Jarvis unfolds the pirate's flag. Another crack at Raoul's new friend—the famous Sazarac!"

For the artist, as his amateur buccaneers roared their chantey, shook free the colors, and planted the staff by Bossiere's table. A black banner upon which was a grotesque skull and cross-bones. Even Bossiere was convulsed with laughter at the grimacing Jarvis' antics. Then he uprose, glass in hand.

"Well, then, to the buccaneers, my good Jarvis! The old cry: 'A-Barataria! A-Barataria!'" And then the old seaman seemed to stare curiously at the nearest of the pirate mummers. Raoul's eye was on him; the young man caught a covert glance from Alderman Dominique. But the shouting tables saw nothing wrong. De Marigny was up and roaring.

"A flag! A flag, for the Seraphine! A royal jest for Bonaparte when we scale the cliffs of St. Helena, hale him to sea, and run up the old colors of the free rovers! Ho, Jarvis, this is a bit!"

A group was about the artist, dragging him to a wine cask to mount and speak. But suddenly a new uproar burst from them all. One of the red-shirted masqueraders had sprung to the rail, seizing the black flag to wave it as he ran. And his song burst forth—there seemed some new, warning accent to the thing:

"Di tems M'ieu Lafitte—"

Above the hubbub De Almonaster's nervous senses caught a sound over the rail. His covert glance to the yellow river showed a deeper shadow, then the flash of oars. He found Alderman Dominique staring at him hastily. Then, turning, he heard bare feet pattering along the wooden slope of the levee. But even when the first of a curious crew appeared at the gangway among the crowding servants, hustling them aside, the revelers on the deck did no more than roar appreciatively.

"Ho, Jarvis! More of your jesting! Faith, how many—"

Then De Marigny stopped. Gorgio, the crayfish seller, was unwarping a mooring line that held the Seraphine in the tide. And a huge mulatto leaped from rail to deck; there came a flash of a cutlass from another figure.

"De Almonaster!" cried La Barre, "that is your hostler, Teton! This is not good taste!"

And suddenly, with a roar, a score of burly forms rushed the rail and swept among the guests. Forward came a rattle of poles and blocks. A shouted order from old Johanness of the swamp; and the bow of the clipper was sheering off the wharf. A startled silence fell. The richly appareled gentlemen were staring as the Seraphine's bow caught the slow current. De Almonaster grasped Dominique in turn.

"They are here!"

The two caught sight of a tall cloaked figure that had sprung to the quarterdeck and turned calmly to watch the melee. Captain Bossiere had leaped up shouting:

"Lafitte! 'Pon my soul—the bandit!"

Then from the barefooted fellows arose the old cry of a decade agone:

"A-Barataria! A-Barataria!"

"Off with them!" roared old Bohon, "to the work, bullies!"

The elegant young De Marigny, in his evening clothes of broadcloth and silk stockings, was lifted and hurled over the rail to the muddy levee. A sword flashed in Villeret's hand, and he was seized and thrown from the deck. La Barre sprang to the shrouds with a warning cry to the servants, but he, too, was propelled off. And with yells and laughter the Baratarians rushed upon the retreating guests of the Napoleon ship. Overpowered, borne back, the struggling gallants fought, but one by one the brawny hunters and fishermen of the chenieres threw them from rail and deck. Tables were overturned, the awning poles broken, lanterns flared up smokily; and over the battle the one-time commander of the black Petral watched calmly. The pressure brought De Almonaster almost against him.

"Jean!" he whispered; "you dared, then?"

But a hand clutched frantically at Raoul's sleeve. De La Vergne was borne past in the embrace of two lusty fellows. "A moi!" cried the youth. "Raoul, we are attacked!"

"Nom de Dieu!" muttered Raoul. "Nez Coupe, do not injure him!"

"Over with him!"

There was a splash in the batture mud. The ship was swinging wide in the river flood. Jarvis came reeling aft, staring back at his late fellow-guests and bon-vivants. Already ahead came the snap of a loosened jib. Johanness, the bo'sun, was shouting orders to fellows who were manning the fore-rigging. At the wheel stood Beluche, one-time admiral of Cartagena, looking up to the break of the canvas. And even as De Almonaster gasped to see how swiftly the plotters had worked, each to an appointed station, the last of the youth and chivalry of La Nouvelle Orleans went over the side to the levee mud.

Save one. Jarvis, the wit seized his hand-painted Jolly Roger and shook it toward the city. Then bewilderedly he looked again at Lafitte.

"Jean! What is this jest!"

"Next time you seek to amuse the gentry of New Orleans," cried Johanness, "do not allow Gorgio to choose your players!"

Jarvis approached the master of the Seraphine.

"It might be of interest, Monsieur Sazarac, why I am here, why my fat friend, Dominique, is here?"

"My good Jarvis, I wish you were ashore—you and the councilor at least. This is a serious venture, sir. We are to the rescue of the English lady."

The painter stared at him: "Why, I thought she—you—she did not flee with you after all? I may see her again?"

"It lies with the winds of chance. You are set on a mad venture, sir."

Jarvis poured him more drink unsteadily. His captain stood frowning at the long tables on the banquet deck. Already along them wild spirits of of the crew were cracking bottles and making merry over the disordered feast which had been spread for the gentlemen-adventurers of New Orleans. The older men were working the ship safely in the broad reaches of the river on a following wind, but the others hardly gave way before the under-officers.

"Eh, well!" bawled the town's jester suddenly. "Ho, slimy gallants. Ho, drenched blades o' the opera!—tomorrow, to celebrate the sailing of the Napoleon ship there will be such a scrubbing and hanging forth of furbelows and ribbons as will keep the house mammies busted for a week! Who is in the mud, now—John Jarvis? Mo l' aimin vous comme cochon—!"

But after the laughter that followed him the author of it went aside to stare ahead into the dark. De Almonaster found him so, his pallor heightened, his cheeks twitching. The mimic seemed shaken with a fear as he watched the bloom of shadowy sail drawing him on to unknown venture.

"I am to see her, Monsieur—and she me?" he said pluntively.

"Monsieur Sazarac will rescue her by force if needs be, John."

The other nodded slowly: "Yes—Sazarac, always—Sazarac. Ah, name o' G—d!—to play one hour! To be the poseur—to have the lover's gesture, the pretty speech; and to tell men: 'Go there!—Come here!'—with a mere glance that they obey! Think of it! A Sazarac . . . Come, Monsieur, the cognac. It is the refuge, the adventure—and the dream. In the bottle I am Lord Sazarac—I swagger, I rescue—I love." He twitched his friend's sleeve dolefully: "She must never see me . . . I am the ragged ghost out in the shadows, Monsieur—where her eyes cannot follow." He turned away, the sardonic mood quite shaken from him. "Below—the emperor's chair, for Sazarac. The lady will come—for Sazarac. Sazarac who does not exist save in her dreams! . . . Why should I not play Sazarac for her? What right has Jean Lafitte to this gallant, rescuing role before her eyes?"

CHAPTER IX

A Question of Diplomacy.

They had been a roaring, unruly lot forward until Beluche, as second officer, with Bohon and Nez Coupe, had brought discipline, at times with the threat of fist or marlinspike. The watches were picked and the mess organized, and the desultory plundering of stores and the finery left in disorder by the gentlemen crew of the Napoleon ship was sternly stopped. Indeed, three fellows who had a set-to with the rum at once, were in the brig by nightfall; and a trio more had broken heads. But when the Captain Jean, with Monsieur de Almonaster and Dominique, went on inspection during the second watch, they were greeted with cheerful and subdued respect.

The former second officer of the Black Petral muttered to his chief.

"There be sixty-four in all. Some old artillerymen of Jackson's day at Chalmette; some fo'cas'le lads who've sailed wi' David Porter and wi' Decatur against the Tripolitans; some escaped Britishers from press gangs—and there be a score of our old fellows, Jean. Men of Grand Terre, and of Galveston Island, some wi' the President's pardon—some not."

The gaunt, shifty-eyed John Crackley, stepped from the line. "We have made bold to ask, sir—under what flag this ship—"

A rumble of laughter stopped him. Aft, by the captain's companion, hung a stiff, painted banner already fraying in the gale. And by it, fast asleep, sprawled the artist-jester who had painted the thing to amuse the city of the Creoles.

But Lafitte stopped the levity. "We shall attend to that. We are on a venture the end of which will be disclosed to you in due time."

But when he had dismissed them to quarters, old Beluche voiced his doubts. "Not a ruffian of them all but thinks we are privateering again. As to Napoleon, they would roar with laughter; and as to this rescue of the English woman, well—you can lead them to that, but it is plunder that is in their minds."

The chief looked thoughtfully at De Almonaster. When they sat again over their brandy and coffee in the tapestried luxury of the emperor's suite, the young man adverted to it.

"We have the excuse, sir, that Mademoiselle Lestron was unlawfully seized out of the city. Only violent action could save her. She must explain the mystery of her abduction to clear us with the admiralties—"

"[illegible] already reports a vessel [illegible] mists kept the Englishman hid in the passes, but out to sea we can pick him up at our pleasure."

Old Dominique twirled his thumbs upon his stomach. He had declined to take any active part in the ship's hurried organization, pleading his gout and corpulence, but they had gibed him well.

"If trouble comes of it—as it will," grinned Beluche sourly, "you will still be the worthy councilor of New Orleans, eh? Pummeled aboard and off against your will! Ho, Dominique!"

"And you may yet need an honest councilor to plead your cause," retorted Dominique. "And you get yourselves into admiralty court, the bigwigs will be hard to convince this is not open lawless piracy. The Captain Jean's love-affairs—eh, well! Can you get an advocate to speak them to the magistrates of Jamaica, or even in Charleston or New York!"

A lanky tousled form came reeling under the rocking cabin lamp

"A magistrate!" chuckled Jarvis, "the rum, old gabbler—that is the prime magistrate! Since when did Dominique mewl of the laws?"

"Be still, Jarvis!" said Lafitte, "this is a serious council. The lady of the

"In the Bottle; I Am Lord Sazarac; I Swagger, I Rescue—I Love."

Genaron is to be rescued—without violence if we may. After that—"

"Bonaparte!" cried Raoul eagerly, "that is our one chance for fame, for fortune and for extenuation! The exiled emperor slipped from under their noses and to sea on the fastest clipper that Yankee brains ever devised!"

"And after that, pray?" mumbled old Dominique.

Illinois Highways Will Have Roadside Planting

Native trees and shrubs are to be planted along the entire length of the Fox River trail in Kane County, Ill., making the road through the beautiful Fox River valley of even greater interest to the tourist.

With $17,000 already available the work of preparing the ground was carried on during the summer, and the actual planting was done this fall. O. C. Simonds of Chicago, leading exponent of the naturalistic style of planting, has charge of the work.

Under the direction of Superintendent of Schools Osher Schlaifer of Dundee, who is a leader in Kane county educational circles, this plan for beautifying this famous concrete highway has been financed, and memberships in the Children's Highway association are being sold to school children in each town along the trail, at 50 cents each, as a fund to take care of the trees, shrubs and flowers after they have been planted. Children of Aurora, Elgin, Dundee, Geneva, Batavia, St. Charles and smaller towns along the highway are rapidly swelling the membership, and Mr. Schlaifer is hopeful of raising $25,000 for the project, which will insure the proper maintenance of the planting for several seasons.

Highway in Kane County, Devoid of Trees or Shrubs.

Too frequently it is the case that enthusiasm flares up for roadside planting, a few trees are stuck in the ground with blare of trumpets and high-sounding words of dedication, and then the trees are left to die. It is especially gratifying to the people of the Fox River valley, and Kane county in particular, that provision is being made to preserve this planting once made.

Although some systematic planting of roadsides has been undertaken by states and counties, it is believed this is the first time a complete planting has been prepared for a cross-county highway 35 miles in length, and a definite scheme worked out for financing and maintaining the planting.

Practical Suggestions on Keeping Roads Good

Maintenance of improved roads has often been neglected.

As a result, costly improvements have gone to ruin.

Insufficient funds for maintenance have been largely to blame.

No financial oversight can be more disastrous than failure to provide for our improved highways.

The character and volume of traffic determine the type of road to build, provided adequate maintenance is assured.

Economy, therefore, can be had only when proper maintenance is guaranteed.

No part of highway work requires more skillful supervision than maintenance.

A slip-shod method of maintenance will ruin the best of roads.

Nowhere is there a greater field for application of sound business principles than highway maintenance.

Constant attention to detail, combined with close study, produces efficiency.

Efficient maintenance—the secret of public highway success.

Highway of Remembrance for Warren G. Harding

A road of remembrance for Warren G. Harding, beautified by trees planted by 6,000 children, is to be built in Allen county, Ohio.

The Harding highway from Lima will be planted for 26 miles, Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree association, announced, and later it is planned to extend the road from Marion to Canton, home of William McKinley.

Mrs. Harding has been invited to plant the first tree.

Road Improvement in Far East.

As in America, the automobile has forced road building in the Far East. During the last five years more new roads have been built in China than in any previous five decades.

America Helps.

American road machinery is constructing an automobile road 310 miles long in Argentina.

Fat hens and old roosters better hunt the tall timber this week and make it snappy.

Butter was plentiful in the market last week but eggs are still very conspicious by their absence.

Mr. W. T. Johnson was called back to Columbus, Ga., Saturday to the bedside of his brother who was operated on to recover from an operation in a hospital there.

Some prominent candidates that we could mention right now, need to fall down on their knees and pray long and lastily to be delivered from their friends.

A little too much booze was in evidence again last Sunday. Our diligent force of officers have made it so dry here that just a little dampness attracts attention.

With proper cooperative marketing arrangements the splendid syrup grown in this section could be sold at a good profit. It is quoted in Baltimore at $1.75 per gallon wholesale.

We have cut a big notch in the editorial table. We went out in the country the other day and actually found [illegible] Roper hard at work. He was [illegible] some of the finest ribbon cane syrup we ever saw.

We offered to set 'em up if somebody would plug up that hole in the sidewalk at the ice plant crossing, but we burned Coosa corn and we got no takers. We will make it a treat to real corn if Sheriff Littlejohn will loan us a half pint.

Freedom is the greatest blessing the earth can hold out to mankind, but [illegible] not carry with it the [illegible] for one person to usurp the rights of another, nor to lead a life that is either a menace nor a nusiance to his neighbor.

The resolution passed by the late legislature intended to bar any candidate for president, who lived outside the state from getting his name on the ballot was the most unwise political action that we remember having known of. The greatest incentive that you can apply to the average American citizen is to tell them they shall not do a thing.

When the cold winter winds are whistling around the corners and the days are dark and dismal, that is where the farmer can shine. He can sit by a big oak fire and ever time he puts on another stick his mind won't have to be busy figuring on whether he can burn one more piece or have to go to bed to keep from going bankrupt.

If you are old enough to know how a gentleman behaves, have gray matter enough in your head to respect yourself and an understanding of what it takes to be a real 100 per cent man, your heart will ache or your gorge will rise if you pay any attention to the maudlin meanderings of the average young jelly bean on the street. They are really objects of sublime pity.

We are old enough now to know the value of money and we want to get rich. We are searching the geography every day trying to find some race, nation or people that haven't already been exploited. We want to start a "drive" to raise money for their starving mothers and babies. That beats oil stock all to death and then the law won't interfere.

The time to stop a thing is right at the start. We have refrained from saying anything about skating on the pavement in the business district because we thought it would be stopped without it. Last Saturday a squad of seven young skaters, in mass formation, were monopolizing the sidewalk right down in town. This is a great inconvenience and nusiance to shoppers and a dangerous menace to little children.

Our good neighbor and true citizen, Mr. W. M. Greer Route 7 was in town Saturday. Mr. Greer visited relatives and friends in Shelby county not long since, but he became convinced that there was, "No place like home."

AN EASY ROAD

One of the evils that the war engrafted upon us, and which seems destined to do like the brook, "go on forever," is the habit of exploiting somebody or something all the time to raise money.

The grafters have learned their lesson well. They no sooner exhaust the dragging power of one scheme than they start up another.

They lay their plans well, too, though they are getting a little old and worn out at last.

They select some good sob stuff writer and send him ostensibly across the pond. In a week or so our news syndicates begin to flood the whole country with heart-rending stories of starving women and children in some foreign land.

After this line of pitiful dope has been fed to us for a time, some confederate in the game over here, who poses as a great philanthropist, will begin to feel out the situation and fill the press full of a lot of high sounding articles about our duty to a starving world.

Women, being supposed to be more sympathetic and easier marks than men, are soon persuaded to take the matter of these starving babies up in the "societies" and aid in shoving the wolf away from their throats.

About this stage in the game they get ready for business and they must have an "organization".

Here is where the original promoters and grafters shine. They, on account of their zealous activity in behalf of these perishing iniants and mothers, naturally are called upon to take charge of the great relief campaign, and then the intended fulfillment of their deep laid scheme to grow rich is in sight.

It has become a fad for every paper in the land to lend a hand in putting these supposed calamity tales of starvation over, so the kale begins to flow in like a deluge. Those iniquitous inventions of the grafter called "drives" are put over and over and millions are cajoled out of the hands of our own needy people in "sweet charity's" name, when really there has never been any official or even authenticated, data given out as to the real facts. Look at the millionairs we have made by this plan. The promoters always have plenty and to spare after the campaigns are over.

Now and then some real honest citizen makes a voyage of discovery to these starving lands and his letters home often tell us that these very countries are recovering from the effects of the war faster than we are and are doing fine.

Real want should always be relieved. Real suffering should always be attended to. For be it from us to say a word to discourage the flow of the "milk of human kindness" but we are getting good and tired seeing our country played up as an easy mark, especially so, by people who just yester year were visiting every cruelty their ingenuity could devise upon humanity at large.

We have plenty of needy people in our own land, more the pity, and intelligent charity begins at home. Christ told his deciples to preach the gospel to all the world, beginnig at Jerusalem—which was at home. That sentiment is not only righteous, it is emminently sensible.

For the sake of common decency let's put this eternal "Drive" mania in cold storage and let it await there the final blast of the trumpet.

Make an honest and sincere survey of the conditions at home and you will find room for several million dollars of your "drive" money right at home. We even doubt a blessing following in the wake of this long distance charity. Get the mote out of your own eye and, perhaps, you can see more clearly how to aid the other fellow.

We are disgusted with seeing the sob stuff put out by Rev. Dr. So and So and Prof. This or That in whooping up alms for supposed women and babies starving in heathen lands. They are starving in the United States too.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Howard Oden who is one of the best church and Sunday School workers in Chilton has sold his farm in the Shoults community and has purchased the Speer farm at Isabella and will move to same in the near future.

DR. WILKERSON COMES BACK

To the great delight of all the people of Clanton and especially to the members of the Methodist church here, Dr. C. C. Wilkerson has been returned to this charge for another year.

Dr. Wilkerson has done, and is doing a very great work here in building his church up spiritually and has also been instrumental in erecting one of the finest church edifices in Central Alabama. This grand work is not yet entirely completed, but with Dr. Wilkerson back on the job to push the work, it will soon be ready to house his large congregation at home again.

OFF YEAR ELECTIONS

There have been several elections over the country during the past week and most of them have gone democratic.

Notably in Kentucky a very hot campaign was waged. In the last election the state forsook its faith and went republican, but she has now come to her senses again and returned to the fold.

These off year elections hardly ever mean anything so far as national conditions are concerned, for usually some local issue is involved that turns the balance one way or the other, but in the case of Kentucky the conditions were different. They had no issue except Democracy vs. Republicanism and democracy won by a large majority, so it is safe to presume that Kentucky has got over her war time grouch and has come home to stay.

Everything looks favorable for a return of the democrats to power next year, provided we nominate the right man and that is a question hard to determine at this distance.

HIRAM WILL RUN

The only original Hiram Johnson, of California, has cast his hat in the ring and is going to buck Mr. Coolidge for the Republican nomination for president this time.

Hiram won't stand any show of defeating the stand patters of the party unless Mr. Coolidge takes to shooting of his mouth when the campaign opens in earnest and says too much.

The meeting or Congress in December may change the political chances of several of the aspirants.

COL. J. O. MIDDLETON MOVES OFFICE

Col. J. O. Middleton, who has had his office in the Upchurch building since his return to our city from Mobile, moved last Thursday into a splendid suit in the new Hayes building.

He is certainly nicely fixed up and has one of the most complete law libraries we ever saw

WHAT FOR?

We notice that Gov. Brandon is contemplating the appointment of a committee to investigate whether or not the convict leasing system should be abolished.

Who is this commitee supposed to investigate? Are the convicts to be interrogated as to their wishes in the matter, or will this committee endeavor to gather the concensus of the wishes of the wardens, guards, or other attaches? What are they supposed to find out and from whom?

There is certainly no need for an investigation to ascertain the wishes of the people. They have already declared themselves in no uncertain terms.

Perhaps the coal operators are to be investigated, but what's the use? We all know they are responsible for the "cold feet" from which the last legislature suffered when the question of abolishing the lease system came up.

Gov. Brandon was responsible for the failure of the passing of the abolishing act in the last legislature, that would have removed this stigma from the fair name of our state and now, it looks like, he wishes to shift the responsibility and "pass the buck" to an irresponsible "committee" in an effort to unburden his own shoulders of the unfortunate burden.

Once for all let it be understood that the real people of Alabama want the blot of a convict leasing system to be wiped out and it can not be done too soon to please them. No committee is needed to find out their wishes. They have already spoken.

Dr. S. J. Ezell, Mrs. W. I. Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Shaw, Mr. D. A. Wingard, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Robinson, Mrs. Andrew Minor, Mr. G. C. Armstrong and W. O. Rich went down to the capital city last week and attended the Baptist Centennial.

WATCH WALL STREET

The great financial sharks of Wall street are framing up some other scheme to squeeze the public.

In the daily papers the propaganda is already beginnig to appear. They are going to call in loans and raise the price on money. They are figuring on drawing the Reserve [illegible] into [illegible] to put a pair of safeties. These fellows have had a panic as part of their robber tactics for over a year. They want to make a grand killing and by close money and high interest rates double up the [illegible] wealth they have already wrung out of a helpless people.

Unless some kind of a monkey wrench is thrown into their machine they will get by with it this time and stage a period of hard times on us when there is no earthly excuse for it at all.

We want to see J. Thos. and Borah go to work on this new gamble right away and tear it up root and branch. They make a hard team for the Wall street gamblers to handle and now is the time for them to roll up their sleeves and wade in.

Unless some kind of a check is put on this plan of withdrawing the money from the avenues of business, we are going to run right into a period of business stagnation that will seriously effect the entire country.

It is a little suspicious to note that the big dailies carry this propaganda with so much prominence and do not raise a voice of warning to their readers. Come out of the crack, you "great moulders of public sentiment" and help to ward off this impending calamity.

Psycho-Analysis teaches us that the strongest propensity in mankind is curiosity. That that is unquestionably so is also proven in other branches of science. The Bible, philosophy and mythology all emphasize the power of that faculty in man. Almost everybody has a well developed bump of curiosity. And what does it lead to?!

Well, in this case it leads to turning the paper upside down . . . .

BENZOL AS MOTOR FUEL SHOWS BIG POPULARITY

Five years ago benzol as a motor fuel, was as little known in the United States as the automobile was thirty years ago. Today, the millions of gallons of benzol, one of Alabama's own products, being used throughout the state of Alabama, and adjoining states, has increased the natural resources of Alabama several millions of dollars per year.

Several years ago, Mr. G. T. Wofford, of Birmingham, Ala., and at that time a local jobber in petroleum products, visualized the possibility of benzol as a motor fuel, and after more than two years of experimenting with benzol, had the nerve to advertise to the world that he was using a benzol and gasoline blend motor fuel, under the trade name of Woco-Pep. Prior to that time, large oil companies were buying from the benzol producers whatever surplus they had to offer at a small price, mixing a small percentage with gasoline, which they did not dare advertise they were doing; and had these conditions continued, benzol, one of Alabama's greatest natural resources, would have remained an insignificant factor, in fact would have eventually dwindled out; but today the coal producers in the state of Alabama and incidentally the laboring classes, realize millions of dollars from benzol, a by-product of coal, which formally went to waste, and the motorists enjoy a very superior motor fuel, due to the pioneering of Mr. G. T. Wofford, who still remains at the head of this rapidly growing Alabama organization.

The Wofford Oil company and its subsidiary concerns, have established distributing plants for its now famous motor fuel, throughout the state of Alabama and part of the adjoining states. New distributing plants are being constructed as rapidly as the production of benzol increases sufficiently to take on new territory.

According to John T. Ellis & Sons, local Woco-Pep distributors, the policy of the company is to develop home territory first, though they have many demands to establish their products in other states, further removed from the home of the product, Birmingham.

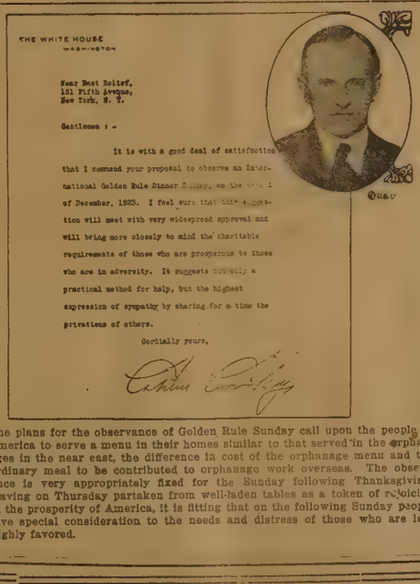
COOLIDGE ASKS NATION TO OBSERVE "GOLDEN RULE SUNDAY" ON DEC. 2



THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Near East Relief,
101 Fifth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen :-

It is with a good deal of satisfaction that I commend your proposal to observe an International Golden Rule Dinner Sunday, on the [illegible] of December, 1923. I feel sure that this suggestion will meet with very widespread approval and will bring more closely to mind the charitable requirements of those who are prosperous to those who are in adversity. It suggests not only a practical method for help, but the highest expression of sympathy by sharing for a time the privations of others.

Cordially yours,

Calvin Coolidge

The plans for the observance of Golden Rule Sunday call upon the people of America to serve a menu in their homes similar to that served in the orphanages in the near east, the difference in cost of the orphanage menu and the ordinary meal to be contributed to orphanage work overseas. The observance is very appropriately fixed for the Sunday following Thanksgiving. Having on Thursday partaken from well-laden tables as a token of rejoicing in the prosperity of America, it is fitting that on the following Sunday people give special consideration to the needs and distress of those who are less highly favored.

The Value of Land Abstracts

It is not safe to buy land, or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortagages, judgements, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title, be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Dr. and Mrs C. C. Wilkerson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Q. Wade went over to Opelika last week and attended the Alabama Methodist Conference. Mr. and Mrs. Wade returned Tuesday. Dr. and Mrs. Wilkerson will return some time in the near future. The entire membership of the Methodist church as well as the citizens of Clanton are jubilant over the fact that Dr. Wilkerson has been sent back for another year. He has already started an important task in Clanton and with his return the success of the noble work will be seen ere another year passes.

COULD HARDLY DO HER WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and rundown and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and dizzy, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep, and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."—Mrs. M. ORLEN, 3640 S. Marshfield Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

It is such letters as these that testify to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude.

For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Influenza, Grippe and Pneumonia usually start with a cold. The moment you get those warning aches, get busy with good old Musterole.

Musterole is a counter-irritant that relieves congestion (which is what a cold really is) and stimulates circulation.

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

BITTER TASTE, HEAD "SWIMS"

Signs That Black-Draught Is Needed to Help Eliminate Poisons—An Arkansas Woman's Experience.

Hatfield, Ark.—"I have used Black-Draught for a number of years," says Mrs. C. V. Dale, of this place, "and I have never found any other liver medicine so good. When I get bilious, my head swims and I get a bitter taste in my mouth, then I know I must get something to eliminate the poison, so for years, when I would get this way, I would take the Black-Draught. It always feel better after taking two or three doses. It cleanses the system and my head quits swimming, and I feel like I can do my work. I have recommended it to others."

Biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, bitter taste, warn you that your liver is out of fix. Prompt treatment, with a dose or two of Thedford's Black-Draught, often will prevent serious sickness. Bile poisons and other unhealthful matters should not be permitted to lodge in the system. Drive them out with Black-Draught, the old, long-established, well-known, purely vegetable powdered liver medicine.

Keep a package in your house, handy for immediate use.

Sold by good druggists everywhere.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Stresemann to Repudiate Treaty and Abandon the Ruhr and Rhineland.

MELLON FOR TAX REDUCTION

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CHANCELLOR STRESEMANN of Germany made two momentous decisions last week. The first was that the national government would temporarily abandon the Rhineland and the Ruhr, economically, to the French and Belgian armies of occupation, the workers and state employees of those regions being warned that henceforth they could not look to Berlin for help. The second was to repudiate the treaty of Versailles and refuse to comply with any of its provisions as long as the French and Belgians continue to occupy the Ruhr.

But Stresemann was playing a desperate game in the endeavor to stave off his own downfall, and at this writing it seems likely he will fail. The Democrats and Catholics decided to quit him, and the Socialists already have done so. Hitherto President Ebert has firmly supported Stresemann, but as the week was drawing to a close it appeared that he, too, was ready to abandon the chancellor and place his reliance in General von Seeckt, whom he had made supreme military dictator.

The decision to abandon the occupied regions was made necessary, according to the chancellor, by the reichsbank's refusal of paper credits with which to meet the expense of maintaining the unemployed during the next two weeks—expenses which will call for 300,000,000 gold marks ($75,000,000). The government, said Stresemann, was forced, because of the total breakdown of industry and commerce, to choose between the destruction of all Germany, with the possible salvation of the occupied areas, and abandoning those regions to their fate temporarily.

Return to Germany of the former crown prince is complicating matters more than had been expected. The allies demanded his immediate delivery for trial as a war criminal, but the Berlin government replied that if he was to be tried, he would be tried by a German court. Frederick William went quietly to his Silesian estate at Oels, but a French correspondent in Berlin says he is about ready to spring a coup for seizure of the throne and is being financed by a group of American, English and Dutch bankers. The story continues that the ex-prince has obtained the solid support of the reichswehr and will soon march on Berlin at the head of a division of infantry with the assurance that no other divisions of the national army will oppose him. The French also assert that scores of German factories are working night and day making ammunition and other war material. It is believed in Paris that France may proceed to occupy Frankfort and Hamburg if Frederick William is not expelled or surrendered to the allies. A flurry was caused last week by a story that the former kaiser was preparing to return to Germany, and already had his passports. This was flatly denied. Advices from Rome are to the effect that the Vatican would like to see the German monarchy restored in order to prevent seizure of power by the communists.

The government of the United States has informed the allies that it will not intervene to keep the Hohenzollerns from returning to the throne, and it is not certain what course Great Britain will pursue. France probably is strong enough to do all that is necessary without help.

Bavaria's Fascisti are not wholly subdued by the failure of the Hitler coup, but seem unable to do anything more just now except create disturbances. Hitler, wounded, is under arrest. Ludendorff also was arrested but was immediately released on parole.

All hope for an agreement on the Hughes reparations committee plan was abandoned when Washington informed the world it could not accept the French restrictions. Premier Poincare thereupon instructed M. Barthou to propose to the reparations committee that it nominate a committee of experts such as the "United States rejected" to examine Germany's capacity to pay, and its resources in foreign countries.

HUGO STINNES and his plans have become of intense interest to the world. The Westphalian industrial magnate, who has made himself one of the richest men on earth by taking advantage of his country's misfortunes, is said to have made up his mind to start a combat with the Standard Oil company for supremacy in the oil industry on four continents. His fields are in Argentina, Oklahoma, Texas, China, Mesopotamia and the Caucasus. More of his colossal schemes will be heard later. Not even Stinnes himself knows the extent of his vast wealth, yet when he was asked to contribute something for the hungry children of Germany he replied that he was maintaining a soup kitchen in Berlin and could do nothing more. The kitchen is supplied with left-over food from one of Stinnes' hotels. The fact that Stinnes, Krupp, and the other multimillionaire profiteers of Germany could easily provide all that their "starving" countrymen need makes many Americans wonder why we should be called on to contribute to that cause. General Allen's appeals will fall on many deaf ears.

KING GEORGE of Greece, who is accused of complicity in the recent revolt which was speedily put down, has been asked by the party in power to abdicate and leave the country in order that the people may decide unhampered on the regime they prefer. Most of the Greeks, it is believed, wish for a republic. Great Britain, however, is doing its best to keep George on his throne, considering him a strong tie between Greece and England.

WILLIAM G. McADOO and Senator Hiram Johnson have declared their candidacy for the presidential nomination, the former as a Democrat and the latter as a Republican. Henry Ford, it is reliably reported, has decided not to be a candidate.

Mr. McAdoo's announcement was informal and rather by inference, but Senator Johnson's was formal and at length. He challenged President Coolidge and any other aspirants to go before the voters, especially in the primary states, on the issue of America's foreign policy. He also declared war on "reaction" and made an appeal for a "revitalized Republican party, the instrument neither of static reaction nor of destructive radicalism." His statement to the public was issued in Chicago.

COL. CHARLES R. FORBES, former head of the veterans' bureau, appeared last week before the senate committee which has been hearing grave charges concerning his management of the bureau, and denied those charges all and severally. He said flatly that the witnesses against him had lied and that some of them were in a "conspiracy" to destroy him. He attacked especially Gen. Charles E. Sawyer, personal physician to President Harding and one-time head of what were termed the deficiencies in the administration of laws for the benefit of disabled veterans were due to "politics and Sawyer." As for the hospital contracts that have been the subject of serious accusations, Forbes said he put the job entirely in the hands of the army and navy engineering departments and had followed their recommendations. This was supported by army and navy letters and reports. That there were gross faults in the management of the bureau seems certain, but judgment as to those for blame should be suspended until the inquiry is completed and the findings of the committee made public.

NO PLAN for the immediate relief of the American wheat farmer is forthcoming from the national wheat council, for its production committee says it is confining its consideration to development of a long-time program and policy of wheat growing and the economic measures necessary to carry out that policy. The committee emphasizes the necessity of standardization of production, and says co-operative marketing should be developed by the farmers as a part of the long-time program.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in an address before the Chicago business men, said the improvement in agricultural conditions during the year had been remarkable, although the improvement has not been sufficient to put agriculture on a parity with industry, commerce or labor. From his report to the President he cited figures showing that the value of eleven principal crops has increased from $5,200,000,000 in 1921 to $7,000,000,000 this year. He declared that of relief measures proposed, price fixing was hopeless, co-operative marketing would reduce some costs but wouldn't bring better prices, and buying the surplus and giving it to needy countries would help if it could be done practically. Then he sprung a new plan.

"The government might well consider the setting up of a government agency which would take the surplus wheat and handle it in exactly the same way many manufacturers have handled their surplus products," he said, "so that it would not be the government carrying the burden, but the producers. Many who have given the matter consideration believe that of all the proposals suggested this one offers the most hope."

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MELLON stirred up the animals with his tax revision program, and it is a cinch that his proposals will cut an important figure in the coming session of congress. Mr. Mellon recommends sweeping reductions in income taxes that would benefit both the large and the small taxpayer and would mean an annual reduction in revenue of about $323,000,000. Primarily, he proposes a 25 per cent reduction in the tax on earned income, meaning income derived from wages, salaries and professional services, as distinguished from business or investment income. He also recommends big reductions in surtaxes, having them begin at $10,000 income instead of $6,000 and with the maximum rate 25 per cent instead of 58 per cent. The secretary says, however, that none of his recommendations can be carried out now or for years to come if the government is required to finance a soldiers' bonus. Indeed, if congress insists on passing a bonus bill means must be found for providing additional revenue.

President Coolidge is believed to approve of Mr. Mellon's plan, and members of congress agree that it will be attractive to small taxpayers; but they think there will be some objection because the special reduction will not apply to earnings of a farmer or a man running a small business. The big contest will come over the choice between tax reduction and a soldiers' bonus.

GREAT BRITAIN'S imperial conference having approved of the protective tariff plans mentioned a week ago, Prime Minister Baldwin dissolved parliament last Friday and called a general election for December 6. His reason for doing this, it should be explained, is that on assuming power he promised there would be no radical change in the country's fiscal policy during the life of the present parliament. His action, however, is attacked bitterly by his political foes, and the Conservatives will have a hard time to obtain a working majority in the new parliament. Lloyd George, returned from America, at once effected a reconciliation with Asquith and thus the two big branches of the Liberal party are reunited and will fight the battle for free trade. The slogan of the Conservative party is "protection or a capital levy to relieve unemployment," but the Laborites bitterly complain that Baldwin has delayed unemployment relief until he could use it for campaign purposes.

THE Supreme court of the United States resumed its sessions last week, and among its first decisions was one upholding the Pacific coast anti-alien land laws providing they do not contravene treaties. Japan is now about to seek to negotiate a treaty with the United States conferring on Japanese the right to own and lease land in this country.

Test This Out for Yourself—

MANY people who drink coffee regularly are troubled with insomnia; or they feel nervous, "headachy," or suffer from indigestion.

It may be hard for such men and women to believe that coffee is responsible for the way they feel. Because they have always drunk coffee, it hardly seems possible that this old habit could cause trouble.

But there is one sure way to find out whether coffee is harming you. Just stop its use for a week or so, and drink Postum.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage—absolutely free from caffeine, the drug in coffee, which disturbs the health and comfort of many.

After a week or two on Postum, you will sleep better and feel better; then your own good judgment should decide whether you go back to coffee or continue on the Road to Wellville with Postum.

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in package) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

NURSE GAINS 15 LBS. ON TANLAC

Miss Mary Early, 1631 North 20th St., Omaha, Neb., practical nurse for the past fifteen years, prompted by gratitude for the Tanlac treatment, because of its benefits to her and others, recently gave out the following statement:

"Tanlac is the one medicine I can recommend knowing full well it merits the highest praise, not only because of what it has done for me, but because of what I have seen it do for others. My brother was flat on his back with typhoid for a long time, and afterwards was so weak he could barely walk from one chair to another. I gave him Tanlac and it was simply marvelous the way it built him up.

"Nursing him through this illness left me weak and exhausted. I couldn't eat anything to speak of and my food hurt me, but Tanlac gave me a keen appetite, strengthened my digestion, and I gained fifteen pounds in weight and am still in perfect health. As a nurse and user of Tanlac, I give it my unqualified endorsement."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute.—Advertisement.

Costs Less to Keep Clean.

More than 250,000 deaths and over 4,500,000 cases of serious illness annually are ascribed by Federal and State health reports to needlessly unsanitary conditions. It is an amazing fact that most of this needless lack of sanitation is found, not in the cities, but among the rural and small-town population.

Yet wholly sanitary conditions may be brought about in the country just as quickly and easily as in the city. The actual expenditure involved is very small, especially when you consider how much the family's health will be improved as a result. It will assure also, of course, a great improvement in comfort.

Septic tanks, privy vaults, protection for domestic water supplies, ratproof outbuildings—all of these can be provided for a little cost and a little work by any man. Full directions on how to do it, what is the best structure for each job, what tools you will require, how much cement, how to mix and place the concrete—all this may be had free on request to the Portland Cement Association, 111 West Washington Street, Chicago. Marketing Main Crop of Tubers

New Light Thrown on Old Questions by Department of Agriculture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

New light is thrown on old questions in the marketing of main-crop potatoes, in Farmers' Bulletin 1317, just published by the United States Department of Agriculture. The answers are based on the combined experience of marketing experts in many sections during recent market seasons.

How, when and where to market potatoes are the practical questions asked. They include hundreds of related queries which growers are asking about the selling end of the potato business. The replies necessarily make reference to production and to the conditions and methods in the great shipping sections and to harvesting, grading, packing, loading and shipment. They show which are the principal markets for nine prominent producing regions and what are the conditions, requirements, business methods and special features in a dozen great city markets.

Light on Activities.

The bulletin turns a sidelight on activities of the dealers at buying time; why they buy or wait, and how often as a class the dealers win or lose as a result of the prevailing season's business policy. It explains what faults the inspectors usually find in shipments of potatoes and how to avoid them and save freight on inferior and unsalable stock. Careful grading is considered one of the main items on which success depends.

One of the most striking conclusions is shown in barometer style; how prices tend upward when yield goes down, how the crop and its marketing may be planned according to the various indications from crop and market reports. The reader is told where and how the free reports and summaries are to be had and how to use them.

Evidently to forecast the market situation is a matter of shrewdness and experience. The outlook for a day or a week or a season depends somewhat on conditions taking shape in the present. The reader of crop and market news soon learns to look for certain changes under given conditions and in time becomes able to weigh the market importance of whatever happens in the main producing sections and in the great consuming market centers. He is able then to plan his acreage intelligently and to handle the crop with some regard to the situation and outlook. The result benefits all classes in the long run. When the majority of buyers and sellers are equally informed, there is little opportunity for a few to gain unfair advantage. Prices thus tend to become more uniform in all sections and from season to season the extremes of oversupply or scarcity tend to become less frequent.

Course of Prices.

The course of prices is shown to depend chiefly on acreage, total supply, losses from rot, diseases or freezing, the demand and the competition, besides occasional changes according to weather and conditions of transportation. Among the regular and usual developments in average seasons is the rise after digging time, the up and down weather-market in winter, and the spring rise or decline. The stocks on hand as reported from month to month during the winter have a relation in the course of the late market.

An estimated yield of about four bushels per capita has usually been followed by falling prices, while a yield of around three bushels per capita has often been followed by rise of prices. For yields between these points the indications are not clear, but the general price tendencies during many such seasons suggest that in cases of doubt, the chance of gain may be hardly worth the cost and risk of long storage.

The bulletin bases good marketing on careful planning, good handling, grading and packing, full use of crop and market news, and of the marketing experience of other sections. Copy of Farmers' Bulletin 1317, entitled Marketing Main Crop Potatoes, may be obtained free upon request to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, as long as the supply lasts.

Breeders of Pure Bred Stock Must Advertise

Pure bred live stock breeders must advertise their goods just the same as the producers of other kinds of goods must advertise their products. The best way to advertise pure bred live stock is for the producer to show his samples to the public at community, county, state and national shows. Good samples, well fatted, give the breeder good advertising. Poor samples give him poor advertising so the breeder should show his best samples to the buying public in the most attractive condition possible.

Beekeepers Suffer Big Losses During Winter

Winter is the time when beekeepers everywhere suffer the greatest losses. Contrary to the general belief losses are practically as heavy in the South, where winters are mild, as in this section. The 10 per cent losses that usually occur could be reduced to a fraction of 1 per cent if apiarists would pay more attention to the building of windbreaks and to the storing and feed of bees in winter.

Crown Rust of Oats Spread by Buckthorn

Ailment Blamed on Hedge and Ornamental Plants.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Crown rust of oats is spread through certain species of buckthorn commonly grown as hedge and ornamental plants in some sections of the United States, according to co-operative investigations conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture, the Iowa experiment station, and other co-operators. An epidemic at Hinton, Iowa, caused by an infection from a 520-rod hedge, was so severe in 1921 that the oats in the adjoining fields were not harvested.

The part that these species of buckthorn play in the spread of this disease has been studied for several years. A bulletin discussing the findings of the investigators has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture as Department Bulletin 1162, and is now available to those interested in the subject.

The bulletin is of a technical nature, discussing the relative importance of the different species of buckthorn and citing instances of damage which furnish conclusive evidence of the fact that this shrub is responsible for the harboring and spread of crown rust infection. A copy of the bulletin may be secured from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., while the supply lasts.

Obtain Good Results in Control of Peach Borer

Very satisfactory results have been obtained in the control of the peach borer in the Southern states by the application of paradichlorobenzene, states the United States Department of Agriculture. Interest in the use of this material has increased widely. From present indications it looks as though 500,000 pounds of paradichlorobenzene will be used around peach trees in the Southeast this year for the control of the peach borer. Most of this amount will be used in Georgia, where a large percentage of the commercial peach growers apply the chemical. Last season about 250,000 pounds were used in the same area. Experiments to date indicate that it is safe to use the chemical, three-fourths to one ounce per tree, on trees three years of age and over. Heretofore recommendations have been limited to trees six years of age and over.

Give Vegetable Garden a Thorough Cleaning Up

Much of the success of next year's vegetable garden depends on cleaning up the trash left from this year's crops, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Insects and disease spores live over the winter in stalks, vines and stubble. Weeds and vegetable debris should be raked into piles and burned or carried off as soon as it is convenient to do so. Pieces of cabbage, carrots, potatoes and other vegetables which have been left on the ground in the harvest should be raked up and destroyed to avoid attracting insects and rabbits. The rabbits, tempted by these titbits, may remain to bark the fruit trees and damage bushes. Time given to this work in the fall will be well repaid in the spring and summer.

Buttermilk Paint Good for All Exterior Work

A very good wash for exterior work is made by mixing three pounds of Portland cement in one gallon of buttermilk. Add such coloring as is desired. This paint must be stirred frequently to prevent the cement from settling and hardening, and it should be used as soon as possible. It will dry within six hours. It is a good weather and water resistant and is sometimes used to cover and protect the cuts on trees that have been pruned. For such use, a larger proportion of cement can be used to advantage.

It is estimated that one gallon of whitewash will cover 270 square feet of plaster; 180 square feet of brick or 225 square feet of wood, and a man should be able to put on nearly one gallon per hour.

Many Factors Determine Success in Hog Raising

Success in the hog business depends upon many factors but the two outstanding ones are the number of pigs farrowed per sow and the number of pigs raised per sow. The farmer who keeps sows that farrow large litters and saves a high percentage of pigs, cuts down the cost of raising pork. It is not necessary for him to carry a large number of sows through the winter to be assured of a pig crop, for he will raise as many pigs from ten sows as the man with the poorer sows and the greater pig losses will raise from fifteen.

Guard Against Fire in Orchard in Grass Crops

Where alfalfa, hay or straw is being produced in the orchard, care should be taken to plow fire lines and to take such steps that fire cannot run freely through the orchard. A large number of fine orchards are ruined annually by fire catching in the stubble, dried up alfalfa and similar material. A rapid hot fire is sufficient to practically ruin the trees.

DAIRY FACTS

Good Supply of Ice in Summer Big Investment

Nothing adds more to comfort in hot weather than a good supply of ice. In dairy farming it is an investment that pays a good return in the amount of produce that it saves from spoiling. Moreover, ice is winter's only crop and it may be had for the harvesting.

The icehouse shown is made by the use of silo forms. Three doors allow the ice to be stored, or removed with a small amount of lifting.

If silo forms are obtainable it takes a surprisingly small amount of material to build such an icehouse, and it will keep the ice in splendid condition with no danger of fire as in houses that are built of wood. The sawdust or straw in which ice is ordinarily packed is a fire hazard that is minimized by the non-burning concrete walls.

Increase Productiveness of Herd by Better Sires

Keeping books with your cows is the only sure way to build a herd of high producers. By selecting cows on their records, discarding the unprofitable ones, using only good pure bred sires, and raising heifer calves from the best cows, one is sure to increase the productiveness of the herd.

It is also advisable to weigh each milking because it enables one to feed intelligently and if sickness, neglect or abuse has caused a cow to drop in milk a remedy may be applied before the loss becomes serious.

Weighing milk creates interest among the milkers and encourages clean milking and careful treatment of the cows.

The greatest source of loss to the dairy industry is the unprofitable cow. A certain cheese factory paid one of its patrons $877 for the product of eight cows while it gave another patron $868 for the milk from 22 cows. It pays to keep records.

Ropiness in Milk Caused by Growth of Bacteria

A ropy or slimy condition of milk, sometimes noticeable after the milk has stood several hours, is caused by the growth of a certain class of bacteria which gain entrance after the milk is drawn.

Though probably not more injurious than ordinary sour milk, this condition is especially troublesome, as the bacteria are passed along through vessels and otherwise to other milk and even to the dairies of an entire community.

The remedy is thorough washing and sterilizing of everything that in any way comes in contact with the milk. Chlorinated lime, or bleaching powder, at the rate of 12 or 16 ounces to the 100 gallons of water is recommended by the dairy department of the Ohio experiment station as a safe and effective disinfectant.

Find Crushed Corn Best at New Jersey Station

At the New Jersey station ear corn was compared to corn and cob meal for feeding cows. The corn was broken on the cob and compared to corn crushed in the ear; 6 pounds wheat bran, 10 pounds corn stover and 9.4 pounds of hay produced 20.2 pounds milk with .89 pounds of fat for each cow, while 6 pounds corn and cob meal, 6 pounds wheat bran with same amount of hay and stover produced 22.1 pounds milk, 03 pounds fat. Thus corn-and-cob meal exceeded corn from the ear by 9.4 per cent for milk and 4.5 per cent in yield of fat.

Save Heifer Calves.

Here's a good rule to follow—save your heifer calves and sell your bull calves. If he is a pure bred he is worth good money to an older breeder—sell him. But it is different with the heifers, give them a chance to prove their worth in the milk pail.

Why Sell Rich Cream?

Cream testing from 30 to 40 per cent makes better butter than if thin. For this reason a better price will be received, which is to the advantage of the creamery patron.

Are You Using this Free Service?

It comes with every sack of cement. It has been made possible through the Portland Cement Association by the eighty-six cement manufacturers who are its members.

They realized that important research and educational work was necessary to give people the best information on how to use cement. They also realized that this could be done better by unified effort than by any individual company alone.

As a result, you may have for the asking the benefit of this Association's long and exhaustive studies on how best to use cement for the most satisfactory results in concrete construction.

Whatever use you plan to make of cement—whether you are building a concrete hog house or concrete dairy barn, a stretch of concrete walk or a concrete road, a silo or a skyscraper, a home, workshop or a factory—you needn't guess. You can know.

If you want information about the usefulness of concrete under certain conditions, how to mix or place it to get the greatest value out of every sack of cement—you can get it by writing any one of our 28 offices listed below.

Supplying dependable information without charge by booklet, by letter or by personal conference when necessary, is the work of this Association. Millions of helpful booklets, covering a multitude of uses of concrete, are distributed annually to people who know they needn't guess—who know they can get the facts from us.

One of our new booklets, "Concrete in Home Sanitation," will surprise you with the number of easy ways in which concrete can be used to make the home healthier and happier. Address our nearest district office for your free copy.

JEMISON NOTES

(By R. B. Johnson)

On last Friday evening the Jemison High School basket ball team interlocked with the strong Thorsby Institute [illegible] in a terrific combat of basket ball. The contest was spiced with many thrilling and sensational plays, which aroused the keen interest of each school, which was constantly [illegible] and applauding their team [illegible] but as the [illegible] was called by the J. H. S. [illegible] Birmingham on their home [illegible] by the close score of 17-16. The [illegible] again on Thanksgiving Day. So we urge each and every individual who can and will come, to be present and we will heartily assure you a close, interesting truggle. The game will be on the Jemison High [illegible] Come and uphold your favorite [illegible].

We regret very much to state that little E. B. Langston has been confined to the bed since November 13. with bronchitis. It is the sincere desire and earnest wish of all, that he may speedily recover his health, and again display his bright, cheerful smiles as usual.

Mr. Charles W. Glass who has recently been working in Birmingham has returned for a brief stay.

Miss Mary M. Johnson made a business trip to Birmingham last Wednesday.

On last Sunday evening Prof. Leo C. Langston accompanied by his sister Sybil and Miss Ola Rodgers motored to the thrifty little town of Thorsby.

Mr. Linton Shaw and Otis Atkinson, two young men of Jemison, now at work in Birmingham came home for [illegible] last Saturday evening, via the Birmingham and Montgomery Highway.

Mr. C. W. Shaw has purchased him a new Ford. Somebody else is going to enjoy life.

Mr. H. T. Watkins, pharmacist and drug clerk of the Darby Drug Co. made a successful trip to Clanton last Saturday for the sole purpose of demonstrating the wonderful medicine of which he is agent.

Relph Glass made a pleasant visit to his uncle Sunday. Ralph is a member of the Senior Class of Jemison High School this year, and we all look forward to seeing him graduate with every mark of honor next spring.

The B. Y. P. U. is making splendid progress in its growth and advancement. New members are enrolled every service. We justly owe our thanks and gratitude to Miss Catharine Mickle, who manifests such a glowing interest in the work. She seems to possess the gifted power of leadership. Such that the young people of Jemison need. We sincerely feel that by the assistance and hearty co-operation of Miss Mickle that in the near future we can rank our B. Y. P. U. up to any in the state. Proportionly in size of town. The Oak Grove B. Y. P. U. society will render a program at the Jemison Baptist church the First Sunday, in December. Everybody is cordially invited to come, as this thriving male band never disappoints an audience in a cause of this degree.

Mr. Paul Maroney who was in an automobile wreck over two months ago is rapidly regaining his strength. The accident occurred near Memphis Tenn. He has been practically confined to his bed since his unfortunate accident overcame him.

The Jemison people were entertained last Saturday night by a series of magical tricks and a rare performance of ventriloquism. Miss McCollum seemingly enjoyed the amusement the most.

Why do we not have enough love for God to support all good causes in the way he has taught us to. Please get your Bibles. I want to direct you to a few of the many passages we find in the Bible which teach us how to support His causes. Read the 35th and 36th chapters of Exodus and see how the people, by their offerings, built the first church. Notice especially the verses that tell us how they gave willingly. Now, Proverbs 3:9, and I Corinthians 16:2.

We cannot count ourselves liberal until we have given more than the tenth of all our increase, for the tenth is justly Gods. Read Melachia 3:10 and Leviticus 27:30-32.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 3 — CLANTON, ALABAMA, NOVEMBER 29, 1923 — NUMBER 12

ARE WE THANKFUL, OR DO WE FORGET?

Do You Ever Sum Up Your Blessings And Consider Why You Should Be Thankful

Away back in the days of ancient Greece when not one God but a dozen different gods were supposed to control the destinies of man; when mythology took the place of the Bible and when people prided themselves on the orthodox punctiliousness with which they observed the various feasts and fasts to propiteate their various gods and call down on themselves the multiform blessings from each, even then they had a sacred harvest feast to Ceres, the gor of grain, which was enforced by Kingly decree.

Perhaps, the histories of this feast suggested to our forefathers, away back in the puritan days, the idea of returning thanks to our God for the plentious yield of the soil. At all events, this day that is being observed throughout the length and breadth of our great land on this, the 29th day of November 1923, has been handed down to us by them and is regularly proclaimed each year by our president and observed by our people.

In the days of our forefathers it was not only a day of feasting, but it was essentially a day of prayer.

In memory of them and the ideals they made come true in this wonderful new world, it would be seemly in us to likewise remember our many blessings and return thanks, with all of our soul, mind and strength for the mercies and blessings we have undoubtedly enjoyed since the "harvest home" of 1922.

We are in debt to God for an infinity of blessings—blessings we scarcely notice or appreciate in the hurly burly of our lives—but great and wonderful blessings nevertheless.

In the first place, it is a wonderful display of long suffering mercy that we are living at all.

In the next place, where, on God's green earth, is there a people or a country so free, so prosperous and so happily situated as ours? No other spot on earth is so brim full of opportunities to live and enjoy living. We have only 15 people out of every 1,000 that live in the world, but we have one out of every two dollars of money in the world. Think what that means!

In the next place, we live in the only country on earth that enjoys absolute political and religious freedom. If you will read up a little in world history you will soon realize what an inestimable blessing that is. How would you fancy living in a land, where you had to believe what you were told to believe and not to believe what you really concieved to be the truth?

Another thing. Think about the horrible earthquake in Japan that claimed its victims by the thousand. Think of the great famine in India where other thousands have perished with hunger. Of the frightful typhoon that recently swept the Chinese coast leaving a trail of death and desolation in its wake. We have been spared such disasters so far.

We should be thankful for all these material things especially and then for our friends, who are worth ten times more to us than wealth. For our fathers and mothers whose place in our life can never be filled when they are gone. For all of our loved ones, whose presence, perhaps, we do not seem to value much, but whose passing away leaves a void in our lives that time can never fill. For the good wife or the good husband who really makes home what it is and life worth living. For the thousands of other blessing that we accept as a matter of course and never lift up our eyes or thoughts to see from whence they come.

Verily, verily, we have a million reasons for being grateful and today let's count some of them up and thank the Gracious Giver of all good gifts.

MORE ABOUT THE ELECTION CONTEST

We are glad to be able to give to our readers some real definite information in regard to the election contest in our county at last.

We see from the call for the County Democratic Executive Committee to meet on Dec. 5, that a day has finally been set for the real trail to begin. The first Monday in January is named as the day upon which the sifting of the last polling list will begin.

Now, this is merely a legal battle between two individuals who represent opposite political factions in the county, and, if properly carried out, like we dare say it will be, it will be a great source of enlightenment to a great many citizens in the county who are honestly in the dark as regards the methods of the average politician. Not only that, when the battle is over and we go forward again with our political affairs, we will have a clean place to start and a thoroughly purged poll list as a guide in our future elections. For these blessings every honest citizen should be thankful.

Our country has labored under very unfortunate political conditions now for a number of years. It has not only cost us our rightful place among the progressive counties of the state, but it has crippled us in a business way to an untold amount in dollars and cents. We have been at each other's throats continually and have not been in a position to cultivate a community spirit that would be attractive to outside investors.

In our own experience in corresponding with oil mill and cotton factory people, we have had this very divided sentiment of antagonism that exists among our home people, urged upon us as the one reason why capital hesitated to make large investments here. They desire a community where local sentiment is harmonious, and where the pepole present a solid front in working together for the good of all alike.

Now, after this contest has been settled, let us hope that the political atmosphere will clear up and that we may all abide whole-heartedly by the result and turn our eyes to the future with a loyal determination to get together and work for the material prosperity of our common home.

Vote your honest convictions at the polls and if your neighbor votes against you grant him that privilege, but when that is done, let it go at that, but when it comes to boosting Chilton county unite like one man, for our interests are the same.

BOX SUPPER

There will be a box supper at Collins Chapel school house Saturday night, December 1st, 1923. Proceeds to be used for beenfit of school. Everybody invited to come.

NEGRO SELF-GOVERNMENT A FAILURE

Away back in the days before the civil war, when Boston abolishonist were raving and ranting about the evils of slavery, a great fund was subscribed by enthusiasts and a large section in Africa bought up and dedicated as a refuge for all of the negroes in this country who would escape bondage and set up a government of their own.

Great throngs of fugitive slaves were given transportation to this promised land and they were ably financed and otherwise assisted in establishing the Republic of Liberia.

They were given a free hand and after the war and emancipation come, these same philanthropists raised more money and sent thousands more of the newly made free negroes over to this haven of refuge.

Time wore on and this great government of ours, seeing the approaching collapse of the Boston dream took a hand and helped untangle the troubles of these incompetents and from that day until quite recently, the Republic of Liberia has been a constant liability and source of annovance to our government.

Now, this black republic is in a bad way again. They have borrowed money from England and France on bond issues time after time. These countries are now hard up and want their money, but, with the customary improvident nature of the negro, they have made no arrangements to meet their liabilities and, unless Uncle Sam again intervenes this dream of negro self-government is going to dissolve before our eyes. This is an object lesson to all the world that the negro race is incompetent when thrown upon their own resources. Some of them in this country, with their wonderful powers of imitation, can appear to manifest real ability, but it is the steady and calculating brain of the Anglo Saxon who keeps the boat steady.

The negro has had more than a fair test of his executive ability in Liberia and he has continually and signally failed.

The need of ability and the sphere of existence of the different races is perhaps, fixed by a higher hand than ours, and we remember an old quotation that says: "A servant of servants shalt thou be all the days of thy life."

L. W. HENLEY DIES

Last Sunday night, at 10 o'clock Mr. L. W. Henley, an aged and almost life long resident of Chilton county passed peacefully over to the other side.

He was almost 82 years of age and had reared a family of 13 children, boys and five girls, all of whom are still living with the exception of one boy. He came along in those dark days of the civil war and fought faithfully for what he conceived to be the right under the "bonnie blue flag."

He was buried on Monday at Pleasant Grove cemetery, Rev. W. S. Cox a long time close friend of the deceased, officiating at the grave.

Mr. Henly was a devout member of the Methodist Protestant church.

A SERIOUS CHARGE

One day last week Mr. Jas. Armstrong, who resides in the northwestern part of the county, was arrested and brought before Judge J. W. Gulledge for a preliminary hearing charged with rape by a little Atchison girl, of the same neighborhood, who claims to be between 7 and 8 years of age. The name of the little girl is Mary Lee Atchison.

Attorney Thos. A. Curry represented the defendant while Solicitor G. C. Walker appeared for the state.

After listening to several witnesses and both lawyers had summed up the case Judge Gulledge remanded the accused to the grand jury under a bond of $2500.

SPOILS THE FLAVOR

Standardization is a good thing in a great many instances, but the coordination of charity by "community chests" or otherwise, does not appeal very strongly to us. The sentiment, the aroma, as it were, the indefinable joy and the tender sympathy that blesses both the giver and the recipient in the place of direct giving is utterly lacking in the "community chest" idea.

Profs. W. E. G. Sutton, Marion Mims, and Ira Pegues went down to Montgomery Saturday and took in the Georgia-Alabama foot- ball game.

REV. W. J. BONE PASSES AWAY

The venerable subject of this sketch was born at Mt. Meigs, in Montgomery county, on April 9, 1833 and passed away at his home, near Kincheon, in this county on last Saturday, Nov. 24, being in his ninety-first year.

He was left fatherless when about 10 years of age, and he, his mother, one brother and one sister fought the battle of life together.

He was reared principally in Elmore county near Wetumpka.

There were no school advantages [illegible] and this sturdy youth, of the old pioneer days, made the living for his mother and the other two children by hunting and fishing.

When the clouds of civil war broke over our country he joined his destiny with the 34th Alabama regiment, under Major Slaughter in 1861.

His regiment was attached to the Western army and went through the fighting of the entire war, being in such great battles as Murfreysborough, Chattanooga, Shiloh, New Hope, Lookout Mountain and numerous other less sanguine struggles.

In one battle the flag of his regiment was shot down and, at the peril of his life, he recovered it, tore it from the splintered staff and carried it in his bosom back to his command. Of such heroic stuff was this great and good man made.

Soon after the close of the fratricidal strife, he united himself with the Masonic fraternity and remained an honored and faithful member of that great organization until the hour of his death.

He became a Missionary Baptist minister in early manhood and fearlessly fought the good fight for his Master until the summons came for him to lay down his cross and put on his glorious crown of immortality and enter into the joys of his Lord.

He was solemnly and beautifully laid to rest in the Shiloh cemetery last Sunday at high noon, by a large body of [illegible] Masonic brethren with all of the honors possible for them to confer upon such a true, tried and faithful brother.

A very large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends witnessed the revell rites with bared heads and tear washed cheeks.

The Chilton County News respectfully tenders its condolence to these bereaved ones and would add its mite to the honor and respect shown this honored and aged man of God.

EXTRAVAGANCE IS PASSING AWAY

During the war, when money became so plentiful that nearly everybody expect for it, a widespread spirit of extravagance prevaled the whole [illegible]

People spent money fore and aft and bought everything that took their fancy and this state of wastefulness became such a habit that a great many people have not recovered from it yet.

We have been watching close the [illegible] of the times, and we believe that here crops and the impending prospect of hard times just ahead, has had a salutary effect on a great many [illegible] people now and that this loose spirit of extravagance is being curbed to a great extent.

There is no real panic on now and most of the people have money, but the wild revel of waste is passing and the majority of the people are settling down on a business basis and they are spending their money wisely and only for the things that are really essential.

The old dollar bill is regaining the place it once held in the respect and esteem of the public, and people are beginning to handle it tenderly and carefully as though it really did have a value after all.

The trade in light and trashy luxuries is falling off considerably while the market for the substantial necessities of life was never better nor more prosperous.

The world needs to get back on a rational basis of spending again and we rejoice to note such a pronounced and substantial change in the kind and quality of "best sellers" as the fall months go by.

A national sanity will return as these changes take place and in a few months everybody will sober down to a normal condition and the times will be as stable as they were before cheap money run the world wild.

Mr. J. L. Messrs of Verbena was the guest of friends and relatives here Sunday.

ANOTHER SIDEWALK PROJECT STARTED

It is pleasant to be able to state that our worthy and enterprising "Dad Dads" are already laying out and surveying another quite extensive sidewalk project.

Work of grading, filling and bringing up to the city survey of one sidewalk project, extending on Sixth Street from First to Fourth avenue, is already progressing rapidly and it is intended to have this second project ready by the time this section is completed.

With a few more business houses built down in town now Clanton would be ready to make another stride towards metropolitan pretentions.

THE SENSIBLE VIEW

Talking about bootlegging and whiskey running the other day on the streets one man made the remark that he had done a little of that sort of thing a year or so ago, but that his business instincts had prompted him to quit.

He said there used to be times when he was out in his car that his heart would almost stand still if he saw an officer coming towards him. He said the constant dread that brooded over him made his life miserable, but the temptation of big profits would intice him onward in the business.

Then, he said, the officers began to tighten up on enforcement and it became daily more dangerous to take the risk and finally he decided that fooling with whiskey had become a losing game financially, aside from its moral blight.

He says he has kept tab on the various bootleggers who have persited in trying to buck the law and that every one of them is in a worse financial condition than they were a year ago, while several of them are doing time or fighting for their liberty in the courts.

He says, that eventually every one of them will be caught if they try to keep it up. That it is impossible now, to evade the persistent vigilence of the officers and that the only safe and sane policy to pursue is to cut it out absolutely.

This sounds to us like wonderfully good logic and advice. A bottle now and then will get by from some moonshine still in the hills but the day is past when bootlegging as a business can succeed in this territory.

Democratic Executive Committee to Meet

Notice is hereby given that there will be a meeting of the Democratic Executive Commitee of Chilton County, Alabama to be held at the Wilson Hotel on Wednesday afternoon, December, 5, 1923, at 2:00 o'clock.

GREATEST GAME OF THE SEASON

Chilton Tigers go up Against Columbiana. While the Score was 18 to 0 Against the Tigers It was the Greatest Victory They Will Have This Year

The Chilton County High School football team went down in defeat to the Columbiana agregation last Friday, but in doing so, paradoxical as it may seem, they scored the most spectacular victory of the season.

When the teams lined up on the gridiron for the start it looked like absolute folly for the Chilton boys to go into the game at all. The Shelby young men were all large and lusty athletes and in size they towered over the Chilton kids about like a dollar covers a dime. It was, by far, the most miss matched game, so far as size and weight were concerned, that we ever saw enter a contest. The most optimistic local fans said our boys could never hope to score, and if they even lived through the first quarter it would be marvelous.

In the first quarter this excessive weight enabled the Columbiana heavies to smash their way to a first goal by direct line bucks, but from then on the little Tigers held them to a dead stand every time.

The only chance for Chilton to score at all was by making forward passes and in this the elements were against them, for the wind was so high that a thrown pigskin would sail away like a feather and no certainty could be placed on where it would land.

The Columbiana bunch have not been even held by any other team this year and scored on only one time and that by a Birmingham team. It is said that many backers of theirs left some good money in Clanton wagering that Columbiana would score, at least 21 points on the local team. The result of the game was a greater surprise to the team and their backers than it was to any one else.

[illegible] want to emphasize the strength that for classy, clean and heady football playing we do not believe that the battle put up by Chilton Hi last Friday can be excelled. That is the gamest bunch of boys we ever saw, and we extend to them our heartest congratulations on the pluck, energy and staying qualities they manifested in playing such an excellent game when the odds were so palpably and strongly against them.

Coach Pegues cannot be complimented too highly on his success in turning out such a wonderfully coordinated football machine.

Verbena comes today and they better borrow a bag or two of new tricks to bring along with them.

AN ALARM BELL

Wouldn't a big, loud-toned fire bell swung up about the center of the business district be a blessing?

We have no church bells now to warn us of fire and a night alarm is a very difficult thing to make quick and general.

If we had a fire bell, every time its voice was heard everybody in town would know what it meant.

If the Methodist people have not disposed of their old bell it would be a dandy sentinel of the night.

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Eptiomized Form.

What promises to be the largest poultry show ever made up in North Alabama will be put on by the North Alabama Poultry association December 5, 6 and 7, at the Madison county fairgrounds. The association is receiving inquiries from fanciers throughout Alabama and Tennessee and many exhibits from ont of the state are expected. Secretary Norris M. Payne announces that the association has contracted with Prof. Arthur S. Chapin of Cookeville, Tenn., to act as judge for the exhibition.

One of the agents making the liquor raid at 102 North Royal street, Mobile, carried to the government building to be used as evidence together with other things, a case of bottles, several hundred new and unused caps, such as is found on bottled-in-bond liquor and a large number of new gummed labels of well known brands of whisky. The federal men expressed the opinion that much of the stuff sold in Mobile as imported whisky was made right in Mobile.

Bessemer city officials announced that the Alabama public service commission would be in session in that city on November 28, when the question of a reduction in water rates for the city would be opened. There has been considerable agitation for the past three years for a reduction, city officials and citizens stating the present rate is excessive and that they believed once the matter is carried before the utilitices commission, a substantial reduction will be granted.

A nine-room addition to the East Alabama hospital at Opelika, which has been under construction for several months, has just been completed, together with the remodeling of the entire building. The plant has been equipped with all modern conveniences, signal system, steam heat. Miss Nell Lurton will be superintendent and a training school for nurses will be established in connection with the hospital.

The wartime Red Cross house in the central part of Sheffield, which was one of the prize institutions of the city during the World War, is to be sold with its contents to be moved by the purchasers from its present location. The spot on which the building stands may be the site of an imposing structure, [illegible] district fair.

A majority of the dozen or more persons who have been arrested on [illegible] ing of meat in Huntsville without license [illegible] have taken out licenses and will have a test case appealed to the circuit court. Mayor Adams fined them $100 each on their refusal to [illegible] bond and appealed to the higher court.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pruitt, said to have been 100 years old, died at her home at Ohatchie, Nov. 20.

The Alabama company will blow out a furnace at Gadsden shortly for repairs, but operations will be resumed as soon as repairs are completed.

Work has begun on the erection of the new steel and concrete bridge over the Chattahoochee river at Eufaula that will replace the present old wooden structure. The new bridge is being built by state forces and is modern in every respect.

Montgomery dairymen are opposing the sale of milk from the Kilby prison dairy in the city of Montgomery. The board of directors of the Montgomery county farm bureau at a meeting appointed a committee to call on Governor Brandon and request that the Kilby dairy be allowed to sell milk in Montgomery county only to state and federal institutions.

The Gadsden Chamber of Commerce has secured a freight rate of 59 cents per 100 pounds on denim from New Orleans to Gadsden and Collinsville, which is a reduction of 35 cents. The new rate will benefit the overall factories of the Gadsden district, as they get most of their raw material from [illegible]

An institutional course in home economics is a part of the regular program at Alabama college at Montevallo this year, the first course of the kind ever offered in the state. The class is composed of advanced students in foods, and one feature of the course is to teach pupils to prepare meals for large groups of people.

The Troy Rotary club enjoyed a radio concert on a recent evening at the Folmar auditorium. Following their regular luncheon, a joke was pulled on the club in the fact that the concert came from the Woodmen of the World in a hall near by and was given over the telephone instead of radio.

Deciding that there is room for and need of a high-class chorus of well trained professional singers in Birmingham, a group of 18 vocal artists have taken first steps toward organization and have requested Prof. Ferdinand Dunkley, director of music at the South Highlands Methodist church to take charge.

Age has not dimmed the optimism of L. B. Wright, of Morgan county, aged 88 years. Mr. Wright declares that he has observed farm conditions for the past 40 years, but that never before during that period have the farmers of his area been as well off financially as they are at present.

A petition was filed with the Alabama public service commission by Penick & Ford, Ltd., Inc., big syrup manufacturers, against alleged unjust and unreasonable rates on empty iron drums returned in less than carload lots over the Western railway from Selma to Montgomery.

The Bankhead highway into Winfield is rapidly nearing completion. At present the cherting is going on in and near Winfield. With the completion of this link of the highway and the link in Walker county, Winfield will be joined to Birmingham by a hard-surfaced road.

Retail business in Huntsville in all lines, especially clothing, has been greatly stimulated during the last few days which have brought cold weather. Farmers of that section with a two-thirds crop of cotton are selling at the high prices and are coming out a great deal better than expected.

Morgan county ginnings officially reported by the government as only 11,804 bales, compared with 15,615 bales up to November last year, has aroused the county to the realization that this year's crop is far below what had been expected.

Lillian Lucille Edlund, a minor, by her father, Charles Edlund, in a suit for damages filed in the circuit court of Mobile, against Mrs. Frank A. Thierry, a storekeeper, asked for $1,000 because the latter stepped on her foot.

The hunting season began in Alabama this year 20 days later than the old law provided and, as there has been a strict enforcement in the laws during the last few weeks, there is said to be an abundance of birds and other game.

It is said signatures of most of the automobile accessory and tire dealers in Birmingham were on a petition to the city commission which asked that all automobile, tire, battery and accessory dealers' places of business be closed on Sundays.

The city council of Gadsden has authorized an election to determine whether Gadsden decides to change its form of government from a mayor, a president of the council and eight aldermen, to a mayor and five aldermen, the date to be selected later.

A party of hunters, enjoying a deer hunt in Hale county recently, were unfortunate enough to kill a doe. The act was shoudered by Calvin McGruder, their negro guide, and the party pleaded guilty and paid their fine of $25 and costs.

Tax values in Gadsden proper took a slight slump during the past 12 months, according to figures made public. This year's assessment totaled $9,172,728, as compared to $9,504,017 a year ago.

The poultry show to be held at Bessemer under the auspices of the poultry division will be held on December 27, 28 and 29.

At the meeting of the Troy city council three ordinances were passed setting out paving which is to be undertaken at an early date.

With good weather the farmers of Fayette county have gathered their crops, and are sowing oats and beginning their fall plowing.

The state's cotton mill at Kilby prison, which began operations a few months ago, is returning a handsome profit, according to figures furnished by Roy L. Nolen, associate member of the state board of administration.

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(©, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 2

THE POWER OF THE EARLY CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 2:1-4; 37-42.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."—Acts 2:21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Telling About Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Three Thousand Converted in One Day.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Brave Preacher and a Great Revival.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Source of Missionary Power.

The power of the early church was the Holy Spirit. This same Spirit has been the power of the church in all ages. The watchword of God's mightiest men throughout the centuries has been, "Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit saith the Lord of Hosts." (Zech. 4:6.) The mightiest forces in the world are spiritual.

I. The Coming of the Spirit (Acts 2:1-4.

1. Time Of (v. 1). It was on the day of Pentecost. "Day of Pentecost" means the feast which was held fifty days after the wave sheaf was offered (Lev. 23:15-16). It was observed by presenting two loaves made of the new wheat (Lev. 23:17). These loaves were baked with leaven, while leaven was excluded from the Passover feast (Lev. 23:6). The reason was that the Passover feast typified Christ's sacrifice, while Pentecost represented the church, composed of Jews and Gentiles—the two loaves. Christ had no sin in Him while the men and women composing the church have sin in them.

The feast of Pentecost in a figurative sense still continues, for the body of Christ is not yet complete. Pentecost was a most fitting time for the coming of the Spirit.

2. Upon Whom the Spirit Came (v. 1; cf. 1:13-15).

The twelve and others to the number of 120. The coming of the Spirit was not merely for the twelve but for all believers—members of the body of Christ. They were in "one place, with one accord" waiting for the fulfillment of "Father's promise" (Luke 24:49). With a group of believers thus with eyes fixed upon Christ in expectation of the fulfillment of His promises, wonderful blessings are sure to come. If the church would be with one accord in one place wonderful blessings would come still.

II. The Marks of the Spirit (vv. 2-4.) These marks were external and internal.

1. External.

(1) The Sound of a Mighty Wind. There was no wind—only the sound thereof. This suggests the all-pervasive life-giving influence of the Holy Spirit.

(2) Tongues of Flame. Each of the 120 was crowned with such a tongue. The tongues show the practical purpose of the Spirit's gifts, and the fire indicates His purifying energy, purging the dross and making fit witnesses for Him.

(3) Speaking in Foreign Tongues. For these humble Galileans to thus speak caused great amazement.

2. Internal.

This is seen in the transformation wrought in the disciples. They have great courage and self-possession. Peter, who a little while before was cowering before a Jewish maid, now with lion boldness stood before the thousands of Jerusalem and a little later before the chief rulers of the city and declared that they had murdered their King.

III. The Converting Power of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:37-42).

Many people were convicted of their sins—about three thousand repented and were baptized. This revival was real because:

1. They continued steadfast in the apostles' teaching. They did not grow cold or run after every fad that came along. This is the real test of conversion.

2. They continued in fellowship with the apostles. The surest way to grow is to keep in fellowship with Christians. Death is sure to follow the neglect of the fellowship of the brethren in Christ.

3. In using the means of grace, "In the breaking of bread," God has instituted ordinances in His house and those who are genuinely converted will avail themselves of their use.

4. In prayer the apostolic church was a praying church. The Christian life cannot be lived without prayer.

They were silent. The light breeze lifted and swung the silken curtains of the ship Napoleon; the wines lapped slowly in the rich glass and silver. Jarvis looked about at the polished teak, the heavily carpeted floors; he shook his head.

"This is a dream," he muttered, "and still—we must awaken! After Napoleon—when our threescore musketeers have come scrambling up the St. Helena crags, filched the emperor from their snoozing guards and cutlassed a way to sea again—what then?"

"Old Bossiere, Monsieur Girod, and the other spirits of this venture, before we seized the ship, had every point worked out," explained De Almonaster. "Even the plans of the island and the English lookouts. Even block and tackle and chair to hoist the emperor from out the St. Helena cliffs to our waiting longboats if needful. Doctor Antommarchi, Napoleon's own physician, and Marshal Bertrand, his friend in exile, are aware of our purpose and expectant. Everything is geared for—it is only for us to put through what the gentry of New Orleans had plotted."

"Except," mused Jarvis, "the lady who once looked back at me from the coach . . . and threescore cutthroats brawling on these decks!"

The Captain Jean looked gravely off to the shimmering sea. Dominique sighed. "Ah, yes—after Napoleon—what?"

"Gentlemen, the future of you all has been a concern to my mind," said Lafitte gravely. And as he was speaking on, there came a hail from the forward lookout; and then Beluche, the deck officer, at the companionway.

"A ship's light, sir! Sou' by east, lying out o' the wind!"

"She is not within hailing?" The master started to his feet.

"No, sir. And we have little air to come up with. But the longboats, sir! The thing might be done in a trice this very night, unless she undertakes to repel our parley!"

"She will hardly give in to our demands." Lafitte followed to the quarter-rail. The twinkle of the stranger showed through the moonlight. But both ships were lying in the great outrush of the Mississippi waters though many miles from the sight of land.

"Lay to, sir, and keep her in eye. We can do nothing without a bit of wind. We shall request the restoration of Mademoiselle Lestron peaceably before we consider boarding the bark." The master turned below again.

Johnanness went forward grumbling. The light of battle was in his eye. Off this pass he had taken his last Spaniard fifteen years ago with eighty thousand dollars to be divided among his crew at the Grand Terre fort of the buccaneers which was not a day's sail westward on the Louisiana coast. And the party in the emperor's cabin heard a hoarse shout from the fo'cas'le hood.

"A ship, bullies! And we lay here with the old itch to be alongside! What do the gentlemen aft propose for her, eh—mates?"

Beluche showered imprecations upon the speaker. There was a yell or two,

"I Have Been Forward," Grunted the Painter. "There Is More Hubbub Than a Ladies' Picnic."

then silence. Presently the admiral came aft under the limp hang of the Seraphine's snowy new canvas.

"There are some hardheads, sir. Already they are dicing it for the first choice o' plunder from the Genaron. The woman, they agree, is yours!"

"De they think," retorted Lafitte tersely, "that this is the time of Morgan come again?"

The silence grew upon them all. Dominique sighed once more. "The English woman—if it was not for the affair of the English woman, we could give a wide berth to everything until this ship and crew had found themselves."

"They will now—this coming day!" said the commander. "I am Lafitte again—not Monsieur Sazarac! Irons, and then the yard-arm for the first fellow who disputes my will. The older heads will not needs be told. The English woman first—after that, as it is Monsieur de Almonaster's honor to his fellow citizens of Louisiana—for Bonnparte. And then—"

"The seas are wide," grimaced Jarvis with a look at the master which drew, in turn, a glance of impenetrable reserve.

CHAPTER X

The Long Chase.

At dawn the Seraphine lay in a flat pink sea, with, not a mile to the eastward, the dingy moil of the Mississippi outpour still visible. The canvas hung wet and limp. The lithe steersman listened to Beluche's impatient comments as he held the glass off to the growing light.

"Beggar's luck! The river drift has been with her. She is all but tops'l down with some capful of wind that we never saw!"

"Wi' the sun," growled Nez Coupe, "we shall find our breeze."

"Yes, but this matter cannot wait. Some Yankee clipper may put out on our trail! We cannot tell what is brewing after this affair."

De Almonaster and the captain joined them before breakfast. True, a topsail breeze came with the sun, and the Seraphine began to draw out of the detaining eddies of the delta drift. The gentlemen had no more than settled to their morning coffee when the monotonous cry of the lookout was repeated. Beluche came with his report.

"The stranger has picked a better wind, sir, and has come about, making sou'west, and running fair."

"Good! She will not make the Floridas then and draw us into the path of the traffic. It will be a good ship today that we do not haul up with."

"I have ordered the chase guns shotted," muttered the admiral. "It may take a carronnade across her bows to make her lay to. Eh, bien! You will see old eyes shine as they take to the lanyard!"

De Almonaster cried out exultantly when he followed to the deck. The first poke of the breeze laid the good ship smartly over, and the snap of the answering canvas drew a shout from the crew.

"Every bully of them out to see!" cried Raoul. "A lot of schoolboys minded to rob an orchard! The first eighteen-pounder let go will be music to old ears, Monsieur!"

"And they may dance on air to it, afterward." Lafitte turned quietly to the younger man. "I have had a sleepless night, Monsieur de Almonaster. It appears to be largely yourself. The rest carried in irons to Charleston when the inevitable happens, will not matter, but you—your position, your good name and fortune—"

Raoul snapped his fingers laughingly. "I came for this—a true exploit, and with you, sir—whatever befalls afterward!"

"I have my plans considered," said the captain calmly. "We will not escape in the end. When that hour comes, you shall be my prisoner."

"I, Monsieur?"

"I seized you upon this ship against your will. It was no affair of yours but of Jean Lafitte's."

"But nom de Dieu! I was the first to propose it!"

"That is why I shall save you." He bowed enigmatically. "And Jarvis, the fool. The rest—well, in the end, I must answer. First to these lawless spirits who believe absolutely that I am turning pirate again. Next to the admiralty courts, America, Great Britain"—he shrugged—"it will be of no consequence."

De Almonaster watched the face of the exile who had been the enigma of diplomats of Britain and generals of the United States but seven years back when he shook the dice between them for the province of Louisiana, and gave back a captain's commission in the royal navy to fight for the puling republic of the West. Slowly the younger man was guessing. To rescue the woman whom he loved meant but to tear the mask from his own face—to stand before her—Jean Lafitte, the last pirate chieftain of the gulf—a proscribed outlaw, hunted by the navies of the world, dragged out of his obscurity of peace to face a ring of enemies.

"You are my prisoner, sir—when the end comes," he said quietly.

Raoul stirred, and then turned from this implacable will. Below he came upon John Jarvis shaking the sleep from his swollen eyes.

"I have been forward," grunted the painter. "There is more hubbub than a ladies' picnic. Bobon and Johanness cannot keep the dogs from howling. Old fellows who have been in the business before are scouring up rusty dirks, pistols that have molded ten years in muskrat trappers' camps—very quiet, the older heads, but winking wisely. They whisper that Lafitte is a wise fox to pretend to an affair of women when he knows of the fat prizes helpless, unsuspecting, in the trade routes."

"They are in for an awakening, Jarvis. He does not mean that."

"I took them a bucket o' grog," muttered the other. "The gimcrack admiral roundly cursed me for upsetting his discipline, but the bullies are ready to elect me captain, if Sazarac is too finicky in tastes."

Raoul laughed wonderingly. "The Captain Sazarac ordains that you and I are to be prisoners—to save our necks if the venture fails. And our good names, as well, in the eyes of Mademoiselle Lestron of Quebec."

"He can consider what he wishes and be damned. I am a free man—I will boast to the lady of the necks I have slit, which—God knows is none! I will play the fool for her, the thief for her—I will stretch rope for her and . . . and I never saw her but one time. She looked back and laughed—there was old John Jarvis, very drunken in the broad day, hanging to a lamp-post, his stock behind his ear and a bottle sticking from his coat. A proud Tory lady of the Canadas, filled with soft sweet laughter at John, the jester."

Raoul looked keenly at the impassive face of the wit. "Have a care, Who was ever your friend in the old days, but Jean? You and I diligently must aid his plan. It is due him, Monsieur. He would be an honest gentleman in this, at least."

"In Her Own Good Time the Ship Will Fly a Flag—and That is the Business of Wiser Heads Than Yours."

"Well, a drink, now—and I will play the fool for anyone," Jarvis arose: "Come, I hear the bo'sun's whistle. They are calling the bullies up for some matter."

Johanness had tumbled the watches out and along the port rail, when the two came behind Lafitte who was addressing the straggling lines. There was much unsteady peering and bending; and then reprimanding growls from the older dogs.

"Stow that talk! The captain speaks!"

"Silence, there!" roared Beluche, "and a man mutters he gets the cat! This is a ship, mind you—not a drinking bout!"

Lafitte raised his hand:

"First, men—I have already told you of the object of this venture, which has, for the end, the rescue of the Emperor Bonnparte from St. Helena. That, alone, will keep us busied for some months; but I do not say there will be nothing done of profit to you all, in the meantime, if it comes our way—"

There was a murmur, some in approval, some impatiently.

"The English," went on Lafitte sternly, "are now the friends of the United States. Even now, in Washington, they report that never were relations so good as under the President Monroe—"

"Bah," grunted Crackley, "I am not a sea-lawyer! Eh, mateys?"

"Silence!" thundered Lafitte.

De Almonaster, by the rail, watched curiously. The line of reluctant privateers edged nervously. Behind the captain stood Beluche and old Dominique and Nez Coupe. Old Johanness, grim and sullen, stood rubbing his chin doubtfully.

"Enough!" went on Lafitte. "Another word, and then Johanness will dismiss you. But first, take your warning—I am Captain Sazarac of the Seraphine. In her own good time the ship will fly a flag—and that is the business of wiser heads than yours And now, as to that ship we are overhauling—it is a matter of private business in this case. A lady is to be taken off. If an affray must come you are to fight the guns or board exactly as ordered, and cease when ordered. And when once the lady from the Genaron is put upon this ship, she is to be treated with absolute respect from you all. More than that—complete silence. She is not to know upon what mission this ship is bound, nor who is her commander."

Things to Give for Christmas

FANCY NEEDLEWORK

Everybody goes about the ordinary business of life, in plain dresses of dark woolen cloth, that depend upon collar and cuff sets to lend them variety and a dainty flavor. Therefore these sets are among the most acceptable of Christmas gifts. An endless variety of embroideries in white or in bright colors, comes by the yard, in straight or curved sections. One has only to stitch these sections to bands of lawn, to make a set like that pictured. Other sets are made of net, lace and sheer fabrics—the last finished with needlework in embroidery or fancy stitches.

LACE DANCE HATS

Gold or silver lace and a bit of gay chiffon or malines will serve to make the pretty dance cap, with soft crown and up-rolling brim, as shown here Tiny flowers at the front and a ribbon sash adorn it. The brim is supported by two fine wires.

SCREEN FOR TELEPHONE

Either men or women friends will appreciate a pretty telephone screen for a gift. Here is one with a foundation of cardboard, covered with satin and ornamented with triangles of tapestry or figured ribbon, finished with gold braid. The reverse side is lined with plain silk.

FOR HOUSEWIVES

Housewives will appreciate holders for handling hot dishes and kitchen utensils. They are simply squares made of bright cretonne, padded with woolen cloth. A container for them is provided with a hanger, so that they can be hung up near the kitchen stove

DAIRY HINTS

Choosing Dairy Sire Is Important to Breeders

"The selection of the right bull has many times been the real beginning of a successful dairy farm," says A. C. Baer, professor of dairying at Oklahoma A. and M. college, Stillwater. "Thousands of farmers still make use of a scrub or grade sire on account of a mistaken economy in the cost of the animal. Such farmers or dairymen would be more successful and would make more money and get more pleasure out of the business if they paid more money for a good pure bred bull, one which would be certain to transmit desirable qualities.

"Some of the important factors to consider in the wise selection of a herd bull or a community bull are as follows:

"First—The bull selected must be pure bred of the same breed as the cows. If it be used with a grade herd the breed best suited for the purpose intended should be chosen.

"Second—The pure bred bull should have a pedigree which shows official production records. For a grade herd, the dam and granddam of the bull should have at least a record of 9,000 pounds of milk or 400 pounds of butterfat. For a pure bred herd a bull with dams of 500 to 600 pounds of butterfat should be selected. The better the class of cows, the better the bull chosen for the herd should be.

"Third—The bull selected should have good conformation, strong vitality and constitution, and should show good breed characteristics. An animal showing male characteristics (strong masculinity) generally always proves to be a good sire.

"Fourth—The sire chosen should be as a rule large in size. An undesirable animal or one which seems to lack vigor is not as desirable as a fairly large, vigorous animal.

"A good herd bull should be pure bred with known production record of his ancestors; should have good conformation; should be fairly large in size and show strong vitality and constitution.

"Whether to buy an old bull or to select a young animal is still an unsettled question. Sometimes an old bull may be purchased from a breeder who has no further use for him. In such case, a valuable sire can be secured for a small sum.

"In America, the average dairyman prefers to select a young animal, mostly because a young one is handled easier and shipped more easily than an old one, and also because he can be used for a longer time on the herd."

Butterfat Still Holds Prewar Purchase Power

Butterfat is the one agricultural product that has the same purchasing power that it had during the period previous to the war, according to J. B. Fitch, head of the dairy department of the Kansas State Agriculture college. Butterfat is 14 cents higher than it was a year ago.

With a 10,000,000 pounds' shrink in the volume of butter in storage during the past year, with imports greater during 1923, and with the industrial situation good, Professor Fitch is of the opinion that butter prices will remain steady. He states that farmers contemplating the purchase of cows need have no fear that because dairying is a profitable business it will soon be overdone. He points to the fact that our population is increasing more rapidly than the cow population.

High Producing Cow Has Big Capacity for Feed

Why one cow will make a heavy producer while her stable mate of the same age and similar breeding, under the same management fails to pay her way is a problem many men have given up. At the Missouri experiment station two such cows were found. A careful study of the feed sheets showed that the high producer was eating a great deal more feed than the other cow. In other words, the good cow, because of large capacity and a well-developed mammary system, was able to not only eat enough for her bodily needs but considerably more besides. The poor producer, after satisfying the needs of her body, had no room left to store feed from which to make milk.

Secure Economical Milk by Liberal Cow Feeding

The most economical milk production is not secured by liberal feeding of each cow in the herd, but by studying each cow and feeding according to the production of each, giving to the heavy producers all the feed they will eat and convert into milk, and giving the light producers no more feed than they can utilize for milk production. Overfeeding is to be avoided just as much as underfeeding.

Keep Promising Heifers.

You cannot afford to buy inferior cows when you can raise good ones at him. Farmers should keep promising heifers and raise their own milkers.

Cow-testing associations are gradually becoming a popular throughout the Middle West.

This might truly be called the age of "passing the buck."

Hiram Johnson may not be such a joke after all. The Arizona republicans have endorsed him.

A lack of confidence in each other is the most predominant characteristic of the average human being.

Laws are supposed to be made for the rich and the poor alike. Law enforcement is intended onyl for the poor.

Possums used to be a luxury, but they are so plentiful this year that no one seems to like them any more. They are too cheap.

Alabama will likely have two candidates for president before the polls close. Our last legislature forced that issue upon us.

There are two kinds of politics. The people vote for the principles of one kind, and the office holders trade on the future pull with the other kind.

A real politician can advance more reasons for going back on his pre-election pledges than you can count on all your fingers and toes.

Lots of people go through the world and die in debt to their stomach, because they allowed their back to hog their entire income.

The La Fayette Sun last week said some wonderfully true things about the School Teachers' Lobby that infests, like vermin, the legislative halls when a session is on. Good!

Have you seen a 1923 silver dollar? They seem to have discarded the eagle and put a buzzard in its place. Wonder if rotten politics had anything to do with that?

Mr. J. A Burke, of Route 7, says he don't do a good many trifling stunts in his life but no man can accuse him of ever going on a fox hunt or to a ball game.

Judging from what we saw on a little trip to the country last week, the sowing of fall garin has been fairly liberal this year. That's the way to head off hard times in 1924.

The average young man round on the farm will live longer, be happier and more independent and have more when he comes to die if he never leaves the farm.

McAdoo is said to be going strong throughout the west and northwest. The labor vote will either nominate or defeat him. The support of labor means the opposition of the capitalists.

Ninety-nine percent of the citizens of Alabama violate some law every day and does know it, and they are good citizens too. Even the lawyers are several years behind in learning them.

Henry Ford sat is truly a pioneer. It takes all new territory first and creates an appetite and a necessity for the service and then comes the real development, while the Ford goes merrily onward to open up new markets.

SWORN IN

Last Saturday morning Messrs. J. Will Gulledge, E. H. Adams and J. D. Johnson the recently appointed registrars of Chilton county, went up before Judge Reynolds, probate judge and took the oath of office, thus qualifying for the job.

THE COMMITTEE MEETING

You will notice in this issue a call for the County Democratic Executive Committee to meet on Dec. 5

Just a few words in regard to this meeting. It is a most important occasion for the party and the chairman, Mr. W. W. Fox, told us that he desired the presence of every member, and not only that, he said he hoped that every member would make it a special point to bring two or three good democrats along with them.

As is stated in the call there will be two very important matters brought up for discussion—the contest and registration. A complete and definite policy in regard to these two matters will be decided upon at this session, and a full and free expression of opinion is desired.

Besides these two prime issues there will be other matters of policy discussed and some kind of a systematic organization or program for the future will probably be decided upon.

It is to be hoped that every member of the committee will make whatever sacrifice it requires to be present. Do this much for the party and give the encouragement of your presence to this important session.

STEP BY STEP

We have it upon good authority now that the highway commission has a man in the northern part of the county preparing a chart of all the right of ways, with the land owners etc, so that the county commissioners can proceed to secure, or condemn a right of way for our highway from Clanton north to the Shelby county line.

This sounds a little bit encouraging, and it may be, that actual work will begin on that section within the next year or two. There is no road in Alabama that can possibly be so essentially important as this north and south trunk line through the state, and it is an everlasting monument to the absolute inefficency of the former Highway Commissioners that this road has not long since been constructed from end to end.

Possibly the new Board, having been reduced to only three members, will be able to function more equitably as regards to building of roads. Too many local intersts had to be served by the old unwieldly bunch. They all were loyal to their home counties and wanted as many good roads and as much cash diverted there as possible.

It is admitted that not less than 15,000 northern tourists detour our state every year, going and coming, because we have no roads they can rely on getting over.

This condition does not exist because the good citizens of Alabama have been ingenially in putting out a lot of money and voting heavy taxes upon themselves for road building, but because we have always been conspicuously unfortunate in getting the money properly expended.

Road building at from $5,000 to $50,000 per mile has been the most outrageous folly and is a confession on that senseless and selfish policy that has kept us in the mud for all of these years.

It does not require a clairvoyant to tell that in the present State and Federal road building program too much money is being put on too few present transportation routes" while the nothing but cow paths and keep the road work gangs busy all the time. Railroads are constructed successfully all over the country without a regiment of wrangling engineers (?) going over and over, for a dozen times or more, the very same route and, at last, discovering that all or the work was useless because they did not know where they were going nor how to get there if they did.

All of the people are wise to this absurb waste of time and money and they are absolutely disgusted with it.

Mr. L. A. Calloway returned Sunday from Havannah, Florida. He returned to the "Land of Flowers" Monday. We regret to learn that Mr. Callaway and family will leave Clanton and move to Florida. However, after living in Clanton for awhile nearly every one who leaves comes back. Sometime in the future we feel certain this estimable family will return to the best town in Alabama.

FORTUNATE INDEED

If we don't do better in the future than we have in the past we will be absolutely ashamed of ourself.

Monday morning last, before we had recovered from the estactic shock of being presented with the finest thanksgiving turkey we have seen in years another stroke of wonderful, and equally unlooked for good luck arrived to bless us and ours.

When No. 2 arrived a sure-enough-to-goodness box of oranges was put off addressed to us. We were almost afraid to claim it, but the expressman said he knew he had made no mistake so we caught our breath for a few moments, and took possession.

Upon opening it up we found that it was filled with luscious golden fruit, fragrant with the breath of flowers and almost ablaze with the mellow sunbeams that kiss the hills and dales of the Land of Flowers.

The box came from Lakeland, Fla., and carried a miscellaneous and beautiful display of the wonderful citrous fruit possibilities of that famous section.

Large, luscious and golden oranges were mingled with beautiful and toothsome tangerines and then came a few little boughs, with leaves like the orange but with a small pear shaped fruit that put us to guessing. They were pretty all right.

The card that came with this thanksgiving offering bore the name of Mr. M. L. Henley, who used to be a Chiltonian, and who was here this week at the burial of his aged father.

The Chilton County News extends to Mr. Henly its most profound thanks and wafts him its continued good wishes for health, prosperity and happiness.

WE ARE THANKFUL

Among the other blessings that we should be especially thankful for, Dr. Ezell told us in his splendid discourse last Sunday, that our friends were among the greatest. He is right absolutely, and memory tells of several times in recent years when we have found that wonderfully true in our own experience.

For instance just listen. Last Monday morning just after we had begun the labors of the day, two very fine turkeys appeared in our office. They were of this year's vintage also, for they were living and in fine health and condition.

We were told to take our choice and almost fell in a fit at the breaking of this wonderful piece of good news. At first we could not realize the truth, but finally it dawned upon us that we had again tangible evidence of what a gracious blessing real friends are.

We made diligent inquiries in an effort to find out who the generous doner was, but failed utterly to even get a hint. But there is one good thing about gratitude, it has no limitations and our heart is overflowing with thankfulness to whoever it was that so magnificently remembered us.

May their pathway always lead through pleasant pastures and their lives be blessed with friends like they have shown thmselves to be with us.

FARMERS PAY OFF LOANS

If there were only some way of really getting the ear of those politicians who are pupularly supposed to have that member to the ground, it might be profitable to tell them that the case of farmers is not so desperate as they have persuaded themselves to believe To be sure, the plight of the wheat farmer is a good subject for political conversation, even though the farmer himself doesn't realize that he is as bad off as the politician says he is But when where there is not fiction is a most affable and obliging handmaiden, perfectly willing to serve in a pinch

There are some facts, however, that should not be overlooked For example, while a good dealer in Omaha tells interstate commerce commissioners that prohibition is costing the farmer fifty cents a bushel loss on his corn, a leading banker of the same city informs the same commissioners that the farmers of that state are unusually well off, and that his company, which deals largely in farm loans, finds that such loans are being paid off. This bears out the contention that, where the farmers have lost sixty million dollars through the decline in wehat, they have gained five times as much through the increase in the price of corn. Nebraska is a corn, as well as a wheat, growing state. Besides, that sixty million dollar loss in wheat is to some extent only a book loss, for the farmers have not sold all their wheat, the price is going up, and already part of the loss has been wiped out. This is hard on the politicians, but it is gratifying to those who believe in the fundamental soundness of our conditions.—Age-Herald.

APPRECIATION FOR ROAD

Dear Mr. Editor:

Please allow us space in your valuable paper to write in the most commendable terms of our Hon. Probate Judge and board of commissioners relative to the condition of our road.

We, the undersigned citizens of Maplesville wish to take this means of expressing our keenest appreciation of the well constructed road that we now have leading from this place to Clanton. It is in excellent condition now and we believe that it will stand through the winter months with any ordinary traffic. We are proud of the fact that we can have free access to our county seat and can drive there in less than an hour without fear of being stuck in the mud as the case has been in the past. We feel sure that we are voicing the sentiment of our entire communnity when we say that we heartily appreciate the interest our officers of the county have shown and the very efficient work done on the road by the men under the supervision of Mr. Will Deshazo and Mr. Popwell. We shall be glad to have any of our friends in the county drive over our road and call to see us any time.

FOURTEEN NATIONS SUPPORT COOLIDGE

European Countries Join American President in Backing Golden Rule as Practical Program.

Geneva, Switzerland.—Officials of relief organizations from fourteen European countries have asked their governments and peoples to join in a great international movement to save the destitute orphans and widowed mothers in those countries of the Near East that have suffered from recent wars.

Dec. 2 has been set aside as "Golden Rule Sunday." On that day people will be asked to observe the broad principle of the Golden Rule by foregoing their usual noonday meal and eating instead the frugal ration usually partaken of by the parentless children of Greece, Armenia and Palestine.

The world's people will then be asked to contribute the difference in the cost of the two meals to the principal relief organization in their country, to be administered for the needy children.

Notable people in Europe who will co-operate to give the day an international aspect are King George of Greece, Prince Carl of Sweden, Premier Clemenceau of France, Dr. Paul Hymans and Dr. Ailce Masaryk.

AMERICAN FOODS BEST SAYS FAMOUS DOCTOR

Athens.—American standard foodstuffs are the best in the world, says Dr. Mabel Elliott, famous woman physician, who for the past two years has been medical director of American orphanages in the Near East. From the standpoint of purity and high food value, she asserts that no European nation can compete with the United States, and for this reason she insists on American products in all orphanages and hospitals, in order to meet adequately the needs of undernourished children.

Dr. Elliott's annual report, summing up the results of the care of 50,000 children in orphanages as well as clinics for 50,000 additional children in refugee camps and homes, says:

"Stable American foods are now the backbone of all our menus for rebuilding children who became weak and anaemic during the refugee exodus from Asia Minor. Our menus contain, not only bread made from American flour, and corn grits in porridge and stews, but also the liberal use of corn syrup, American condensed milk and American cocoa and macaroni, thus making a balanced ration to meet all the scientific requirements as to relative food values, calories and vitamines.

"The favorite orphanage pudding is composed of corn grits with cocoa, sweetened with corn syrup, and made more nutritious and palatable by adding a sauce of American condensed milk. Such a pudding has a high food value and is very economical—no other equivalent food value could be obtained from other foods at twice the cost. Moreover, it is so palatable that children eat it eagerly several times a week, and never seem to tire of it. The American people, in providing for these parentless children such pure and wholesome foods from their own tables, are certainly making a practical application of the golden rule."

Dr. Elliott has recently returned to America to arrange for the publication of a book of her experiences under the title of "Beginning Again at Ararat."

REFUGEE MEAL FOR AMERICANS

Whole Country Asked to Adopt Orphanage Menu for Just One Sunday Dinner.

RELIEF HAS SAVED MILLION

People of All Nations Will Figuratively Gather Around Same Table as Practical Sign of Sympathy With Near East Sufferers.

How many comfortably fed, clothed and housed Americans will sit down to a Sunday dinner of rice, corn grits and other typical orphan fare—on December [illegible], as a practical test of the golden rule?

The question is asked today by Charles V. Vickrey, general secretary of Near East Relief, who is in charge of plans for the general observance throughout the United States of "Golden Rule Sunday." In an interview Mr. Vickrey said:

"If the American people will renounce for one meal the food they are accustomed to eat, and contribute the difference in cost to the support of starving children in the near east, the situation in Greece, Armenia and Palestine will become infinitely more real to us.

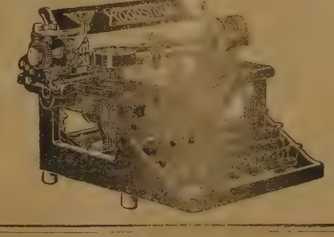
"I have recently returned from several months in those countries. America is a name to conjure with there. No reproaches are heard against us as in every other country, but none expect us. That is because people realize that Americans have gone to help with a helping hand and a willing deal, rather than with the [illegible].

"America could well have afforded to have spent every penny of her relief fund as a long-sighted, cold-blooded business proposition. The good-will that has resulted from relief work in the near east is of incalculable value. When these orphans we are caring for today grow to manhood and women will become the leaders of their nations and their eyes will turn toward America.

"At least a million persons in the near east would not be alive today had it not been for American aid. Even today 100,000 persons are being cared for from day to day by the Near East Relief, mostly women and children who will probably perish in a few days or weeks if the work ceased.

"Our workers are now concentrating not only on the physical care of 100,000 orphans, but on their industrial training as well. At the age of fifteen when an orphan leaves our schools is equipped to enter some trade or business. In Nazareth boys working in our carpenter shops a few feet from the spot where Christ toiled. In Macedonia, Greek orphans are learning to live in the atmosphere where for years in establishing Protestant churches.

"[illegible] a month provides food and necessities for an orphan; [illegible] a year provides for his education as well. The observance of Golden Rule Sunday by a million American families will provide [illegible] for thousands of orphans. [illegible] people break bread together, [illegible] friends. On this International Golden Rule Sunday people [illegible] collectively will gather [illegible] table, partaking of [illegible] representing the menu [illegible] the children of the [illegible] the benevolence of [illegible] 365 days in the year. [illegible] simple menu the orphans [illegible] unless the rest of [illegible] the Golden Rule.'



PEACE IN THE PACIFIC

Ambassador Wood says Japan is a greater friend of America today than ever before, in consequence of the aid and sympathy we extended at the time of the disaster. That is undoubtedly true. Moreover, it will be a very long time before Japan can be regarded as a potential military menace. The outside world does not yet know the details and extent of the destruction wrought in the Japanese navy by the earthquake. Two of Japan's great cities were ruined; and Japan's economic power was materially weakened.

Before this disaster came Japan had come out of the Washington conference a weakened world power. Japan had come out in a weakened condition of its own choice and will it voluntarily accepted a comparatively minor position in relation to the United States and Great Britian and was going ahead reducing its navy in accordance with the terms of the treaty when the earthquake came and reduced the navy to a point far below what had been agreed upon at Washington. [illegible] represents the inexorable logic of position on the question of land ownership, a position that has been sustained and ratified by the United States Supreme Court. Against that loss can be set the gain which we have made in the [illegible] of the Japanese in recent years.

[illegible] of the Pacific for the next generation is more secure today than at any time before the breaking of recent events in that sphere.—Advertiser.

The Value of Land Abstracts

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortagages, judgements, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title, be furnished A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Mrs. J. A. Hester, who underwent a very serious operation some weeks ago, has been visiting relatives in Birmingham for several days recuperating from the effects. She returned for Thanksgiving much improved.

* * * *

Mrs. C. B. Cox made a rather involuntary though pleasant visit last week over at Cherokee Bluff. She accompanied her husband, who is the railroad contractor over there, on what he expected to be a day's stay at the works, but when he got over there some trouble with a steam shovel kept him all the week, so Mrs. Cox did not get to return either. She says she always knew Charley was unreliable but now he has made assurance doubly sure by "citing" her. She had a splendid time anyway.

Mesdames J. P. Hayes, E. E. Upchurch, John T. Ellis, G. C. Harris, Ed Bruce and L. P. Vanderveer were delegates who attended the State Baptist W. M. U. Convention held in Bessemer last week.

* * * *

Mr. J. B. Jones, Mrs. Hugh Foshee's brother of Eldorado, Arkansas, has been here for some time with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Foshee. We are glad to have this esteemed citizen of Arkansas spending several pleasant days with our worthy and highly esteemed Clanton citizens.

Judge George F. Smoot of Wetumpka, will be in Clanton next Monday for the purpose of holding a non-jury term of circuit court. Several "moonshine" cases in addition to many other cases of different natures will no doubt be disposed of. Judge Smoot is one of the most scholarly [illegible] jurists in Ala.

CARD OF THANKS

From the children of the late Rev. W. I. Bone.

Editor of Chilton County News,
Dear Sir:

Please give us space in your most valuable paper to express our thanks and appreciation to the good people of our immediate community and the entire county for their many kind deeds of kindness and exceptional sympathy during the continued illness and recent death of our dear old father.

We rejoice that his life is a living epistle worthy of our imitation, and we trust that we shall not be tempted to bring reproach upon his memory. We rejoice also that Heaven means more to us since mother and father beckon us homeward.

May God's richest blessings abide with each and every one who contributed even so much as a sympathizing tear or a cup of cold water.

THE CHILDREN.

JEMISON NOTES

(By R. B. Johnson)

The Stanton High School basketball team invaded the Jemison court last Friday with the intention of carrying away the J. H. S. scalp, but to their utter surprise, the home boys trounced them by the one-sided score of 29-0. The combat opened apparently like it would be hotly contested, but, alas, this opinion soon faded as the sterling little forward, Astro Wright, began displaying his keen eye for the goal by ringing up 10 field goals and 3 foul goals. He convinced both the writer and the spectators by his flashy goal pitching and his spectacular court runing, that he was easily the star of the game. Reese Wells also exhibited his skill and agility as a basketball player, by allowing his opponent only two difficult throws at the goal. The Stanton boys seemingly never lost hopes and interest till the last quarter, when they were engulfed by defeat, gave up in despair with the score board registering zero to their credit.

Mr. H. T. Watkins and Mr. W. A. Darby left last Saturday morning en route to Bay Minette for business transactions.

On last Wednesday night the Senior class of the Jemison High School gave the faculty a grand reception by serving them with a five-course supper. The Home Economics class acted as waiters.

Mr George Adams a well-known citizen of Jemison has been confined to the bed since Nov. 20th with acute Brights disease. The doctors are exhibiting every effort in behalf of his restoration to health.

Miss Catharine Mickle, First assistant of the Jemison High School, was a recent visitor to Bessemer.

The Methodist members of Jemison gave Bro. Ross, their former pastor a pounding last Saturday. Each member contributed freely and liberally. We take pleasure in issuing our thanks to the members of other denominations for their generous contributions.

Mrs. W. T Edwards former science teacher of the Jemison High School was a welcome visitor to our flourishing little town last Friday. She is at present a teacher at Stanton.

Rev. C. P. Roberts, pastor of the Verbena Methodist church was in Jemison a few days past viewing his prospects of work for the on-coming year. Annual Conference has placed the Jemison pastorage on the Verbena charge, hence Bro. Roberts will be on pastor the ensuing year.

Dr. J. M. Broady pastor of the Fifth Ave., Presbyterian church of Birmingham delivered a masterful sermon to an appreciative audience at the Presbyterian church at Jemison last Sunday night.

Messrs. Holmes, Leo Langston and R. B. Johnson, accompanied by Misses Nell Wells, Malene Howard and Elsie Brown made a pleasant trip to Thorsby Sunday.

Mr. R. M. Honeycutt of Jemison left Monday for Birmingham.

Miss Emma Campbell was the charming hostess of a delightful [illegible] Saturday night.

[illegible] Killingsworth and family [illegible]dale were recent guests of [illegible] J. R Johnson.

Last Monday, Nov. 20, the bird season opened, and each and every bird hunter from this section was out seeking a chance to display his rowess as a bird hooter. Every field and meadlaw was teeming with hunters, as the day was ideal for that purpose. The bird crop seems rather limited this season, very few have been found and killed so far.

Do not put the Railroads Back in this Roundhouse~

Certain demagogues, politicians and others who hope to profit thereby, are advocating Government ownership and operation of the railroads. They would put railroads in the Government "Pork Barrel", and pile on the back of the taxpayer, public a still heavier load.

Government operation during the war caused a net loss of $1,000,000,000, and [illegible] added the cost of [illegible] standard [illegible] also the deferred labor [illegible] the cost of under-maintenance; altogether a total of $1,500,000,000. This enormous cost had to be met by appropriations from the Public Treasury.

President Harding said he believed that "Government Ownership would be a colossal blunder which would destroy initiative, infect us with political corruption, create regional jealousies and impose incalculable cost on the Public Treasury."

There are also a few mis-informed but honest and well-meaning people who believe that Government ownership would solve the transportation problem. The L. & N. joins the other roads in asking that these people pause and consider the consequences of using the National "pork barrel" for a railroad roundhouse.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Relieved of Nervousness and Other Distressing Ailments by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound four years ago, and [illegible] taking it now for the Change of Life and other troubles and I receive great benefit from it. I am willing to let you use my letter as a testimonial because it is the truth. I found your booklet in my letter-box and read it carefully, and that is how I came to take the Vegetable Compound myself. It has given me quiet nerves so that I sleep all night, and a better appetite. I have recommended it already to all my friends and relatives."—Mrs. ENGLEMANN, 2053 Palmetto St., Ridgewood, Brooklyn, N.Y.

For the woman suffering from nervous troubles causing sleeplessness, headache, hysteria, "the blues," Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine. For the woman of middle age who is passing through the trials of that period, it can be depended upon to relieve the troubles common at that time.

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of nearly fifty years of service and thousands of women praise its merit, as does Mrs. Englemann.

You should give it a fair trial now.

Thanksgiving in Days of Grandmother

OUR grandmothers began preparation for Thanksgiving day long before it arrived. Pickles of all sorts, apple sauce and preserves were prepared ahead of time. Mince meat was mixed that it might ripen and acquire a more delicious flavor. All the vegetables were ready for the pot on Wednesday night, the chickens or turkey were stuffed, the puddings and pies were prepared and there was nothing to do on Thanksgiving day but cook the dinner.

Garnishes and Turkey Stuffing.

Oysters belong to Thanksgiving, according to tradition, because friendly Indians who joined the early celebrations brought gifts of shellfish. A garnish of fried oysters is tasty and appropriate to surround the turkey, or a dish of scalloped oysters may accompany the turkey, or an oyster cocktail or oyster soup may be served before the turkey, or may be molded in a thin layer of jelly, which should be cut out with a fancy cutter so that the oyster appears in the center of a tomato or aspic jelly, and is laid on tender lettuce leaves with mayonnaise placed beside it.

A cupful of chopped peanuts blended with two cupfuls of coarse bread crumbs or cracker crumbs and seasoning is a fine stuffing for the turkey.

To prepare chestnuts for a stuffing, first gash the shell, brush the nuts over with beef drippings and put in the oven for a few minutes. When heated, shell and skin are easily removed. Cut the nuts in small pieces, then add them to an ordinary bread mixture, or they may be put through a potato ricer, seasoned and used alone.

Sausage croquettes are good for a turkey garnish. Buy one pound of sausage meat, add to it one cupful of soft bread crumbs, form into balls the size of English walnuts, dip in beaten egg, roll in bread crumbs and fry in deep hot fat.

Cranberries With Turkey.

Left-over turkey, especially the white meat, may be cut in cubes and blended with enough warm cranberry jelly, not too sweet, to hold it in shape when cold.

The combination of cranberries and raisins, popularly known as mock cherry, is good for a pie filling or as a conserve. The proportion is half as many raisins as cranberries and both should be cut in halves.

Old-fashioned Cranberry Dumplings.—Prepare a cranberry sauce from one quart of cranberries, one and one-half cupfuls of water and two cupfuls of sugar. Make up a biscuit dough with two cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of sugar and three-fourths of a cupful of milk. Shape the dough into rounds and steam them for twelve minutes. Serve with the cranberry sauce, accompanied by a hard sauce made of brown sugar and butter.

Cranberry Punch.—Cook one quart of cranberries in three cupfuls of water until soft, then press through a sieve. Add two and one-half cupfuls of sugar and the juice of two lemons, and stand on ice for about four hours to chill. Serve in glasses with maraschino cherries or candied cranberries.

Menus to Choose.

Yellow is the Thanksgiving color, just as red belongs to Christmas. A pumpkin fruit basket is effective to use as a centerpiece, and small pumpkins, or gourds, may serve as candlesticks or be shaped in basket form to be filled with nuts and raisins at each plate.

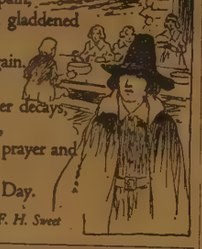
The Home-Feast Day

NOVEMBER has come with its festival day,
The sweetest home-feast of the year,
When the little ones mingle in frolic and play,
And share in the Thanksgiving cheer.

And let us remember that tale of the past,
Of the Pilgrims who gathered their band,
And offered up thanks for the corn when at last
It waved o'er the famishing land.

For hunger had wasted those strong, patient men
Who struggled and labored in pain,
And the blessings of plenty which gladdened them then
Gave courage and hope once again.



And the fame of their bravery never decays,
While year after year rolls away,
Since the morning that ushered in prayer and in praise
The birth of our Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving —Then and Now

IN THESE days of rush and rustle, the advent of Thanksgiving serves most of all to remind us of what wondrous changes time has wrought. The Thanksgivings of our fathers and those of today are no more alike than the minuet and the fox trot, the dances that well typify the era of the present and the past. About the only thing left to us from out of the old days is the Thanksgiving turkey, and even this bird is not now held sacred and necessary for this festival.

The very mention of the word Thanksgiving brings to the mind a picture that modern conditions have turned to the wall. It is a picture of the time when life was simple in its pleasures and robust in its strength; when people were really folks; when the race and rivalry of life did not extend their office hours over the entire day. That state of things has now passed away. It has followed in the wake and the trail of the pioneers and the other figures of the American national life that was but is not.

In the old days there were tippets and mittens, things that hang in memory's closet on the same nail as the high stock, men's shawls and daguerreotypes. Gone are the marvelous tippets that went round and round the neck until a person was swathed like a mummy of ancient Egypt. Gone, too, are the mittens knit at home in ecfors of sunset and sunrise blue, those cozy ancestors of gloves. As for the bootjack, in those days of luxury and ready-made shoes it is as unknown as any creature of the prehistoric age.

No longer does Thanksgiving bring the real mince pie, that culinary triumph of every well-regulated household, with its wonderful fruity flavor, that cunningly combined the qualities of solidity and crispness, a pie that even if dangerous to health made a danger well worth facing and putting down. Compared with the bakery-built substitute of today the mince pie of those days was a vintage pie, as far above its modern rival as a vintage wine is above the grocery wine for cooking use. Its existence was a splendid testimonial to the physical traits of the men and women of the era in which it flourished.

Even the plum pudding, that carnival of richness, is disappearing from the stage. It is giving way to ice cream, that mollycoddle of digestion that invites to slow eating and deliberate enjoyment.

The Thanksgiving stage is now set with new scenes and new characters. There is the cabaret and terrapin, and football and the theater. There is the social function in place of the family festival; and in the evening hours the elaborate entertainment in the gilded ballroom, in place of the homely dance to the strains of the fiddle and the bow and the minstrations of the merry, squeaking fiddler. Truly, the coming of this holiday and its observance well measures the distance that the nation has gone from its life and its habits in the days when Thanksgiving day was young.

Observance of Thanksgiving

THE celebration of Thanksgiving day has a long and curious history, in which it is the province of a woman to play no inconspicuous part. The earliest aspect of the day takes us back to the chronicles of the Israelites, among whom there is mention throughout the Bible of days set apart for special thanksgiving unto the Lord. Later the custom was not uncommon in England before the Reformation, and was taken up and continued by the Protestants afterward.

Thus it was that at its inception there was no regularly appointed time for this celebration. Sometimes it would be observed once a year, sometimes twice, and then perhaps a year or two would be skipped—according as reasons for thanksgiving presented themselves or not.

Among the colonists it was customary for the president to issue a proclamation recommending that the people cease from their ordinary occupations and observe a day of thanksgiving, with proper ceremony, at some specified time, but it was usually left to the governors of the various states to determine whether there should be such a day, and when.

* * * * * * *

This irregular course and unofficial-like treatment of the observance might have continued in vogue indefinitely but for the well-directed and strenuous efforts of Mrs. Sarah J. Hale, editress of Godey's Lady Book. She realized, perhaps more forcibly than others at the time, that the celebration of Thanksgiving as then observed lacked character and impressiveness, which could be remedied only by the adoption of measures bringing the people to concerted participation on this occasion. Therefore she assumed and devoted herself to the task of writing to all the governors of the different states and territories, urging upon them the propriety of a national thanksgiving and suggesting the last Thursday in November as the day for such celebration. She continued to write these letters year after year, and was finally rewarded for her efforts by all the governors, excepting two, granting her request.

However, the people's response was not enthusiastic, and during the Civil war, especially in the South, the custom lagged.

Immediately after the battle of Gettysburg Mrs. Hale wrote President Lincoln, inclosing a copy of Washington's Thanksgiving proclamation, and suggesting that he also proclaim a day of national thanksgiving. The President acted upon her suggestion and issued a proclamation "for the observance of Thursday, August 16, as a day of national thanksgiving, praise and prayer."

From that time on the celebration of the day lost its local and variable character and took on the fitting dignity of a national and stable ceremony. Lincoln's successor appointed the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving day, and the date has continued unchanged ever since.

Thanksgiving day is a legal holiday in every state, territory and possession except Utah, where it is observed, though not on the statute-books.

THIS OLD FASHION IS STILL IN VOGUE

Cheney's Daily Grows in Popularity as More People Recognize Its Worth

There's one fashion that hasn't changed in over sixty years. Not only that, but it is one that is growing in popularity year by year.

It is the fashion—the habit—the necessity for taking Cheney's Expectorant for coughs, colds, bronchitis and other affections of the throat and lungs. Long ago when grandparents of today were children, Cheney's Expectorant was a widely-known family remedy to relieve these troubles. It was given to children for croup, quinsy and whooping cough. Its action was so wonderfully soothing and efficient that in thousands of families all over the South, Cheney's Expectorant is, today, a household word.

It should be with you, too. If you haven't got a bottle of Cheney's Expectorant in your medicine closet you are taking chances you have no right to impose on those around you.

Get Cheney's today to take with you on that auto trip. You may need it before you get back.

Louisiana Lady Says She Used to Suffer "From Morning Until Night," and Was Weak and Nervous.

Chacahoula, La.—Mrs. O. J. Pelegrin, of this place, writes that she was very uneasy about her weakened condition six months before her baby was born. "I suffered from morning until night with my sides and back," she says. "I was so nervous. I didn't have any strength or appetite. I couldn't rest night or day, I was so worried about myself.

"I began taking Cardui. After taking three bottles I was much improved. I gained in strength, I was able to eat and sleep. I took fifteen bottles in all and grew strong and well. My baby is the very picture of health, and I am well and so glad I found the Cardui. It is a splendid tonic for womanly troubles."

The medicine which Mrs. Pelegrin took is a perfectly harmless vegetable extract of mild-acting medicinal herbs. Thousands of other women, who have taken Cardui, have reported recovery of strength and normal health by consistent use of this well-known remedy.

When buying, please look at the label. Don't take any medicine that may be offered. Get CARDUI, the Woman's Tonic. One of its principal ingredients has been recommended by the medical profession, for female trouble, for over 300 years. Its success in relieving these complaints, in many thousands of cases, is proof of its genuine medicinal value.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senator Johnson Challenges Coolidge and Others to Direct Primary Fight.

STRESEMANN CABINET IS OUT

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON of California, avowed candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, has started into make things lively for his rivals, including President Coolidge. He has warned them that he proposes to make a determined fight in every state against "hand-picked" delegations, and challenged them to meet him in the primaries in a straight-out contest. His statement, issued from Washington, is supposed to have been the result of unwarranted intimations that Mr. Coolidge would not make a direct campaign for state delegations, relying largely on delegates from states that have no direct primaries, and on those which would turn to him after their favorite sons have been eliminated from competition.

"I insist that the rank and file of the Republican party have a right to express themselves as to the candidate of the party for the presidency," Senator Johnson said. "I am seeking to have that preference expressed. I shall accept the determination of the voters with equanimity and philosophy. I do not fear to go before the people upon that which I believe, and no other man who is a candidate should hesitate to have those whose support he asks express themselves on his candidacy.

"The members of the party, rather than a few self-constituted bosses, are entitled to select the candidate. We are going to put it up to the American people. I insist that all candidates should go before the people on the same principle."

Senator Johnson indicated that his main fight would be made in such states as Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Nebraska and New Jersey. He is looked on with considerable favor by many Illinois Republicans, but must contend with the strong followings of Coolidge and Lowden. In Indiana Senator James E. Watson says he may become a candidate "if for no other reason than to keep the state's delegation from Hiram Johnson."

While he is too radical for such men as Watson, the Californian is too conservative to suit the other Senator Johnson, Magnus from Minnesota. That loud-speaker arrived in the national capital and told the pop-eyed world that Hiram was a backslider from the cause of progressivism, that the third party movement was growing very strong, and that the farmers must be given protection against their enemies, the grain and dairy companies. He seems to be right about the third party movement. Indeed, a third party was formally organized in Chicago by a group under the leadership of J. A. H. Hopkins of New York and the call for its convention, to be held May 30, was issued.

Another meeting of progressive groups was held in Omaha and representatives of fifteen states indorsed Ford for president and called a convention at Detroit December 12.

WILLIAM G. McADOO had his first test of strength among the Democrats last week in South Dakota, where the county proposal conventions were held. Ford supporters were his chief opponents, and while results are not yet quite definite, it appears that McAdoo won throughout the state by at least two to one. The Republicans were fairly divided between Coolidge and Hiram Johnson. Most of the Farmer-Labor conventions named uninstructed delegations to the state convention.

DR. STRESEMANN and his cabinet fell soon after the reassembling of the reichstag, as had been expected. The chancellor made a long and pessimistic statement, winding up with the declaration that Germany's internal condition was hopeless and that he could not see the slightest prospect of improvement, and the offer to relinquish office if the reichstag considered it necessary. He was heckled by the Communists and others, and when he demanded a vote of confidence this was refused him by a vote of 230 to 155. He and his ministers at once resigned. At this writing it seems likely that the new chancellor will be either Herr Leicht of the Bavarian People's party or Dr. Albert, who was in charge of the propaganda bureau of the German embassy in Washington before America entered the war.

Had Stresemann been able to defer the vote in the reichstag for a quarter of an hour he might have been upheld, for the news came, just too late, that the industrial magnates of the Ruhr and the Rhineland had signed a treaty with the French which is expected to bring comparative peace and prosperity to the occupied regions, since under it the coal and steel plants will resume operations.

In Upper Silesia the organized farmers, who are nationalistic, declared a food boycott against the towns until Stresemann and his cabinet should resign. Immediately the hungry townsmen flocked into the country by thousands and burned and looted the farmsteads. They were fought by the junkers and their employees and by the police, and there were many fatalities. The farmers' organizations, it is stated, could provide plenty of food for all of Germany until next March if they wished, but they will not do so until a nationalistic government is established.

ONCE more the Anglo-French entente, periodically smashed by the foreign correspondents, has been saved. Notwithstanding his fiery and defiant addresses, Premier Poincare yielded to the British view as to what was best to do in the matters of the return of the former crown prince to Germany and the resumption of the activities of the allies' military control commission, and agreed that there should be no threats of sanctions nor anything that might sound like an ultimatum to Germany. The British gave in on some minor points, and thereupon the council of ambassadors sent to Berlin two notes. In one the Germans were told that since Frederick William already had returned, he might remain as a private citizen, but the government was asked to see that no steps be taken to place him on the throne. It was also warned that it must not permit the former kaiser to return. In the other communication Berlin was informed that "the allied governments have decided that the operations of military control and aeronautic supervision must be resumed without delay under conditions which will be notified to the German government by the presidents of the commission of military control and the committee of aeronautic guarantee.

"Should these operations meet with obstruction from German authorities or German nationals, the allied governments intend to take measures which may seem to them proper to assure execution of the treaty."

It was understood that the Stresemann government would find the notes from the allies entirely satisfactory. The French press, except the government organs, was not so well pleased with them and the premier was rather severely criticised for his "surrender." But from his point of view Poincare seems justified. Prime Minister Baldwin faces a hard fight in the coming British elections, and one of the chief complaints against him is that he has suffered so many diplomatic defeats at the hands of Poincare. The latter cannot expect that in the event of Baldwin's defeat the new British government will be even as friendly to his policies as has been the present cabinet. Therefore he could well afford to give Baldwin the diplomatic victory of last week. After the British elections the whole question may be reopened.

DESPITE the misgivings of Senator Lodge, Senator Smoot and some other Republican leaders who fear it may mean disaster for their party, President Coolidge has decided to support Secretary Mellon's tax reduction program boldly and unreservedly. With a revenue surplus piling up it is the duty of the government to reduce the tax burden, the President holds, and he is confident that the radicals will be unable to put any extreme measure through congress. His attitude toward soldier bonus legislation has not been disclosed, but he probably will follow the example of President Harding and insist that if a bonus bill be passed, a means for financing it be provided by congress.

J. C. WALTON, suspended governor of Oklahoma, was found guilty of eleven of the sixteen charges presented to the senate court of impeachment and for corruption in office, moral turpitude, neglect of duty and general incompetence was removed from his office. The vote was 41 to 0, Walton's one consistent supporter being absent. Six of the original charges were dismissed. No evidence for the defense was presented, for Walton had withdrawn his counsel after announcing that he could not stand the "humiliation of an unfair trial." His attorneys, however, intend to try to carry the case to the Supreme court of the United States. A grand jury in Oklahoma City considered the evidence on which the deposed governor was convicted and indicted him for criminal offenses.

DR. FREDERICK A. COOK, the Arctic explorer who gained notoriety by his bogus "discovery" of the North Pole years ago, and who of late has been a spectacular dealer in oil stocks, has come to the end of his rope. Tried before Federal Judge Killits in Forth Worth, Tex., for misuse of the mails in connection with the operations of the Petroleum Producers' association, of which he was the sole trustee, he was found guilty and sentenced to fourteen years and nine months in prison and fined $12,000. Nineteen co-defendants were also found guilty. Judge Killits in passing sentence denounced Cook scathingly for robbing widows and orphans, concluding: "You ought to be paraded as a practical warning in every state where you have sold stock."

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE HOOVER says the government is not considering any plan for the relief of the hungry people in Germany, though several persons have talked of the matter with the President. As to whether relief is needed, Mr. Hoover says the breakdown in distribution, coupled with considerable unemployment, has caused suffering in the poor districts. Uncertainty of business life has multiplied many times, but Germany as a whole is still a powerful country in business, agriculture, and trade. Purchases by Germany from the United States in the first six months of 1923 aggregated more than $143,000,000, or about 570,000,000 gold marks. The industrial plan of Germany is better than it was before the war, and there is even danger that it is overdeveloped. Crops throughout Germany are reported generally good, in some instances being the best for fifteen years or more.

Major General Allen's committee for relief of hungry German children is all ready to open its campaign for the collection of funds from American citizens and it is announced that at least $10,000,000 will be needed. The American Friends service committee will administer the fund and the German government will kindly attend to the insurance, warehouse and other overhead charges.

FRIENDS of Corea in America, who are organized, have filed with Secretary of State Hughes a formal protest against the alleged murder of about 500 Coreans during the great earthquake and fire in Tokyo and Yokohama. Dr. Floyd W. Thompkins, president of the society, who signed the protest, declared an eyewitness saw 250 Coreans "bound hand and foot, placed on an old junk, covered with oil and burned alive." What Secretary Hughes can do about it is not indicated.

KING ALFONSO, Queen Victoria and Dictator Primo Rivera of Spain all went to Italy last week and were received by King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Mussolini with impressive ceremony. It was said a military alliance between the two countries would be signed to balance the alliance between France and Jugo-Slavia.

WE DISCOVER A LINEAGE

America lays some claim to antiquity, after all. The fossil remains of prehistoric man found in California are our patent of nobility and ancient lineage. It is true that these venerable beings came in from the northwest, [illegible] our historical forebears entered [illegible] We have been scoffed at by the British for being so new and raw-looking. Now we can scornfully retort that their old Piltsdown man is but a modern upstart compared to our primeval find. Back into the very roots of time must scientists grope to discover his classification. Even the earliest aborigines of China [illegible] still fleeing out of Mongolia before terrors of the wilderness or the menace of a pitiless climate, our California man had already grown accustomed to this continent and lost all trace or legend of any other land. Ere we [illegible] his [illegible] and mists envelop us [illegible] can only sense the period by the very fingertips of our imagination. Up-starts indeed! We have but reached the homeland, the cradle of humanity after eons of wandering over the face of an earth which our forefathers thought young, when it was already in its doddering old age.—Age-Herald.

WHAT, ANOTHER BLOC?

President James E. Smith of the Mississippi Valley Association, told its members Thursday that the valley represented the balance of power in Congress and that if the valley did not get adequate support for its water projects, it would be their own fault. Mr. Smith will pardon the rest of the country if it does not get hilariously enthusiastic over his information

When any one section or any one class of voters boast of holding the balance of power in Congress, the citizens whose principal interest in the government is paying taxes see with some alarm the arrival on the scene of another "bloc." The taxpayers recognize [illegible] agencies for getting to the treasury. Mr. Smith incidentally mentions the fact that the government has expended over eighty million since 1874 on Mississippi projects. The country at large has no objection to the steady improvement of the Mississippi but it does not like the idea of encouraging raids on the treasury by organizing blocs. For they have learned by experience that component members of a bloc are animated by one common purpose, getting money from the treasury, and they usually know no restraint or moderation.—Advertiser.

A CROOKED TARIFF

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—Warning that productive industry cannot survive if there is one tariff policy "for the sower and another for the reaper" was sounded today by John H. Kirby, of Houston, Texas, President of the Southern Tariff Association in a statement made public here. The annual convention of the association meets at the Patten Hotel here on December 7th and 8th.

All Southern producing organizations, Chambers of Commerce, Farm organizations, Civic bodies, Women's organizations, Bank associations, Trade organizations, Press Organizations, Governors, Commissioners of Agriculture, Commissioners of Labor, Commissioners of Mining and Commissioners of Banking have been invited to attend or be represented at the meeting.

Word received at Convention Headquarters already indicates that delegates will be present representing 63 industries of the South, while about 500 Chambers of Commerce and 5,000 banks are backing the association in its fight to protect Southern Tariff schedules.

Under the flexible provision of the tariff act, which allows the Tariff Commission, by order of the President, to change the rates on existing schedules, the Bureau of Raw Materials has filed a petition for reduction on linseed oil. The Bureau asks the maximum reduction on this product, which, on account of its interchangeability, affects the entire vegetable oil schedule. With their business endangered if the reduction is granted, producers of cottonseed and peanut oil have announced their intention of fighting to retain the present schedules. Their problem will be discussed at the Chattanooga meeting.

"The Southern farmer cannot plant his crop in protection and harvest it in free trade," declared Mr. Kirby's statement. "If there is to be one tariff policy for the sower and another for the reaper, productive industry cannot survive."

"The duties in the present tariff measure were given the Southern producer and accepted by him in good faith, and, secure in the belief that his product would be protected from destructive foreign competition, he planted more than a million acres of peanuts this year."

"Before the seed had taken root in the soil, the Bureau of Raw Materials appealed to the Tariff Commission to docket vegetable oil for an investigation with a view to reducing the rate."

"Acting under the authority conferred on it by the flexible provision of the tariff law, the Tariff Commission granted this request and the matter will come up for a hearing at an early date."

"Pending the investigation, the entire vegetable oil structure is trembling in the balance, and if the rates are disturbed, it will mean utter ruin to the peanut and cottonseed farmers of the South."

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 3 CLANTON, ALABAMA, DECEMBER 6, 1923. NUMBER 13

THE VALUE OF PROPER TERRACING

All farmers and land owners should ... their land with terraces put on level and close together enough to hold all the water which falls upon it, and then close them in at end slightly turn ends up hill so as to make certain of no water getting out ends of terraces. If we let it out it sure to carry some leaves and other vegetable matter with it that needs to lay and decay in the same soil from which it came. Now I realize there are few places in this county where the land is so fine and compact ... all the land would be somewhat ... and water to allow too much water to settle in one place but such soils as this we should put terrace banks close together and not allow water to collect from a large space of territory and by so doing we can hold water on the soil with little danger of soil drowning or souring. I have often heard people remark that "It's impossible to hold all the water on ... especially where long terraces are required." I must state here frankly, that statement is absolutely without foundation. It makes no difference how long a terrace is you can dam the water in and force it to stay by this long terrace bank and dry up in soil, providing you add terraces above these long terrace in the broad places. I have a terrace over ½ mile long in my field and am holding all water that falls in field above it and what surplus water that comes from my front yard and road below yard is also run against this long terrace and kept there in field and forced to dry up. I will also state that one of the best rows of cotton I made this year was on this long terrace and an average row of corn and velvet beans next row above it. I suppose no one doubts our abundant supply of rain this year.

Now as to the forest and pastures. I believe we should keep fire out of them at all times so that all dead and fallen vegetation might decay right where and go back and enrich the soil from which it sprang.—Now I know since the boll weevil came people will differ with me on woods burning. They want to burn woods to destroy the bugs. I do not doubt but what some bugs can be consumed this way; but I fully believe the evil in burning the woods will overbalance the good. We all know the soil is sure to be made poorer by this fire consuming the fallen vegetation, timber injured from growth and often killed besides the water that falls upon the soil where all vegetation, straw and leaves are burned will have full undisturbed headway to rush to the low places, swell small streams and wash away roads, bridges and water boxes for which we are taxed to keep replaced. Then during a drougth when the rain ceases our small streams are dried up when they are most needed. A similar effect is shown upon wells going dry. It would help out much to hold up our streams and wells during a drougth if we would only keep fire out of our woods and stop letting water run out of our fields. Then too there would not be so many low places to be ditched and drained if the water was forced to soak down and leave the highlands slowly and gradually by proper terracing and keeping woods from being burned.

Now allow me to say here, the land owner who allows water to run from his farm and empty into the road is doing the road far more damage than the everyday lumber hauler or other daily traveler does. Its an undisputed fact that running water carries more soil with it than rolling wheels.

Fellow farmers, we are taxed to keep up these roads and bridges and let's don't make our taxes higher and at the same time render ourselves less able to pay them by making our soil poor by washing and draining. Also let's don't wash the fellow away who lives in the valley and at the same time raise his taxes.

Respectfully submitted.
F. IVEN POPWELL.

FORD AND MUSCLE SHOALS SITUATION

The morning papers Tuesday carried the news that Henry Ford had been to see President Coolidge in Washington.

After his interview he would not give out anything more than that his bid for the Muscle Shoals property still stood, but he seemed to be rather elated and well pleased by what the President told him.

It is understood by the Washington correspondents that the President favors the Madden plan, which is to build, for Mr. Ford, an auxiliary steam plant to take ... gas and then to accept the Ford offer. So, it looks like Mr. Ford will have an opportunity to do all of those great promised industrial stunts yet.

EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY GIVEN CHILTON MEN

During the past few days three white men of our county have been paroled by the Board of Pardons.

We do not think the Board erred in a single case.

The real intentional evil ... of the parties is extremely doubtful. Both of these unfortunates were rather the victims of bad company. Surely they will be more careful in future.

In the other case the ends of justice have probably been fully met by the long years of servitude put up by the man and, in justice to his family, as well as himself, it is well that he be given an opportunity, before old age renders him helpless, to arrange for his loved ones and himself a home where they can live out their days in peace.

In behalf of these unfortunate ones we thank the Board for these acts of clemency.

SOLDIERS' POLL TAX

Boys, your attention is especially called to the fact that if you intend to be a voter you will have to pay your poll tax this year.

We can but feel assured that the next legislature will remedy this arrangement and will relieve you all permanently of this tax.

It should have been done during the last session, for we do not believe the wishes of the people of Alabama will demand this payment on the part of the brave boys who made such great sacrifices for our common country.

Pay up this time, boys, and let us hope it will not be ever demanded of you again.

BUILD SOME GRAVELED ROADS

Chairman Rogers, of the Highway Commission, has come out in advocacy of building some graded and graveled roads, without Federal aid, with the balance of our road bond money.

He rightly claims that the kind of finished cement or asphalt roads specified by the Federal engineers is too costly and too tedious in construction to suit our conditions and climate.

He favors tracking the law and building a good graded, graveled and drained road from county seat to county seat, regardless of whether the Federal aid cash comes or not.

This sounds good to us. It is already more than evident to the citizens of Alabama that this Federal aid proposition is so closely hedged about with official red tape that it is only a delusion and a snare. It don't mean anything but fat jobs for government hangers-on, whose interest and aim in life is to try to shine in the limelight of a supposed efficiency and to make the job hold out.

The proposition of Federal aid, as far as it has gone looks more like a scheme that absorbs our money alone with their own, in providing for a horde of "higher-ups" and experimenting in how to spend the most money possible on the least possible milage of roads.

We are right with Mr. Rogers and certainly hope that all of the citizens will flock to his support, and the ..., perhaps, Alabama will begin really to get out of the mud.

It has always been a very doubtful proposition in our mind for any state to enter into any kind of a financial partnership with the General government. There are many good and sufficient reasons for remaining out of and independent of any Federal aid transactions.

This fiasco of Federal aid highway construction is only one angle and one demonstration of the wisdom of leaving Uncle Sam out of our financial projects.

CLANTON VS. VERBENA

With a gridiron knee deep in mud and with a stiff wind and driving rain adding sombreness to the scene, the Chilton Hi Tigers and the Verbena Varsity tied up in the closing game of the 1923 football season Tuesday.

After wallowing and walloping around in the mud and rain for the customary four quarters the time was up and neither side had been able to even make a spot on the score board.

The Verbena boys said they had a bag or two of tricks along but old J. P. was on the job as umpire, referee and the whole works and tricks did not amount to anything.

It was impossible to even build any dope as to the relative strength of the two teams, as the conditions under which they went through the action were so unfavorable that neither side could show off at all as to what they really had.

The score was a good fat goose egg to each team and the fans do not know any more now about how to class them up than they did before.

To us, it loked like a rank piece of foolishness to attempt a game at all under the weather conditions.

The next thing on the program now is who can develop the strongest and fastest basket ball team. Just one little thing after another. A good base ball team for next spring is in the offing.

EDITOR WYATT HERE

The many friends of Editor Mack Wyatt, for years at the steering wheel of the Union-Banner, but now performing a like service for his new paper, the DeKalb Republican, are glad to welcome him in his old home town again this week.

We regret to say however, that the wife of Editor Wyatt is in bad health, and he brought her here for the benefit of the local hospital.

We welcome Mack and sympathize with him in his trouble and earnestly hope that Mrs. Wyatt will speedily regain her normal good health.

THE BELLED BUZZARD

The famous belled buzzard made its appearance up near Thorsby last week.

This famous scavenger has been in business for more years than we can remember and we are not a spring chicken.

He passed through northern Texas about three weeks ago.

VERBENA'S ANNUAL STREET FAIR

Tomorrow (Friday) night, December 7, the Parent Teachers' Association will hold their annual Street Fair at the high school building. Those who were present last year will need no introduction to the event, and have been repeatedly asking the date of the one to be held this year. We'll repeat it here—Friday, December 7, and the fun will begin at 7:30.

There will be some of the usual sid... counts of street fairs. We promised you a good time last year, and everybody had it. We promise you the same this ... and more this year you will have a good old time again. Come and be sure and bring the children.

In connection with the fair there will be a fish pond for children, a bazaar for the grown-ups—and there is where you may solve some of your Christmas shopping problems—and an oyster supper. There will be plenty of candy and other edibles of delicious nature. Come on out, folks, and let's have a big time together. Everybody come and be sure and bring the children.

WILLIAMS-DAVIS

We are pleased to announce this week the marriage of Mr. R. L. Williams, Jr., of West Chilton and Miss Esther Davis, of Clanton.

... these happy young people have been sweethearts for a long time and, no doubt, this happy culmination of "Love's Young Dream" in their case, was no surprise to them and had been looked forward to for months with all of the blissful contemplations that usually festoon the bright day dreams of young lovers, but to their many friends here the suddenness of the denouement was rather a surprise.

They were married at the home of the bride's parents yesterday forenoon at 9 o'clock.

The groom is a son of Mr. R. L. Williams, who is one of the prominent and progressive citizens of the western part of our county, and is a model young man and has a world of friends. He is now associated with the Alabama Power Company and has promise of a bright future.

The lovely bride is the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. H. L. Davis of Clanton and is well and pleasantly known here as one of the most popular and worthy young ladies of our town.

The Chilton County News takes great pleasure in extending to this handsome and happy couple, its very best wishes for a happy, prosperous and long journey together down the pathway of life.

NATIONAL BANK CLOSES

Bank Examiner Placed in Charge of First National of Seale, Ala.

PHENIX CITY, Ala., Dec. 5—(Special.)—The First National Bank of Seale, Ala., has closed its doors, according to advices received here late today. The closing was by order of the comptroller of the currency and by resolutions passed by the board of directors of the financial institution. H. D. Benton, Jr., is president of the bank and K. C. Tigner is cashier. Clyde J. Evans, national bank examiner, is in charge, pending investigation.

The closing has been the source of much speculation as well as anxiety in the community, as the officers as yet have refused to issue any statement as to the cause responsible.

AN AMBITIOUS GIRL

... many warm friends and admirers of Miss Roberta Curry, who is completing her vocal training under the world famous vocal and musical director, Zeigfield, of New York, will be delighted to hear that she is making wonderful progress.

All of us who know Miss Roberta are not at all surprised at her success for she not only possesses wonderful natural talent but has the ambition that assures success. Good luck to her.

JOE WILSON PAROLED

Last Friday Mr. Wash Wilson, father of Joe, and Mr. P. D. Wilson, his uncle, went before the pardon board and succeeded in getting clemency extended to Joe and he is now home under a permanent parole, subject to good behavior.

COUNTY DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE MEETS

According to call of the chairman the Chilton County Democratic Committee assembled yesterday in the parlors of the Wilson Hotel.

On account of the very inclement weather the meeting was not as largely attended as it would otherwise have been, though a good quorum was present and what they lacked in numbers they made up for in pep and enthusiasm.

Several important party matters were discussed and a program for future action was blocked out.

Some very essential ... committees were appointed to do ... tion work.

The entire meeting evinced a live and militant spirit that augers well for the future prosperity of the party.

NOTICE OF ROAD MEETING

There will be held at the courthouse at 10:00 o'clock A. M. ... the 8th day of December, a mass meeting for a discussion of the new Federal Highway through Chilton County. Hon. John Rogers, Chairman of the State Highway Commission and also Mr. J. Hubert Scruggs, one of the Highway Commissioners will be with us on that day. The Commissioners' Court will also be present on that day.

The matter to come up for discussion at this mass meeting will be the question of the new Federal Aid Road through our County, the letting of the contract, the right-of-way and other important features.

Possibly the most important feature of this mass meeting will be the question of building additional highways in the county by the state regardless of Federal Aid. It is the purpose here to discuss the change in the plans and instead of building a Federal highway to build state roads through our county with the understanding that the county is responsible for the maintainance and upkeep. We especially request the citizens who desire these additional roads built through their territory to be present at this meeting.

This is indeed one of the most important questions before the county at this time, as every citizen is interested in this new road project and if the people will turn out including the farmers, business men, women and others throughout the entire county and show the commissioners our cooperation, it will mean a great deal towards the obtaining of ... Chilton. We can all afford to lose one day for such an important matter.

Please do not fo... this Sat... urday, December 8th, at the courthouse at Clanton, Alabama, at 10:00 o'clock A. M.

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

BOARD OF HEALTH FIGHTS TUBERCULOSIS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 3—Endorsement of the Alabama Tuberculosis Association's plans for combating the white plague in this state is ... in a proclamation issued by Governor William W. Brandon today. In this proclamation Governor Brandon urges the people of Alabama to respond to the appeal of the Association for funds with which to make this fight against disease which has the backing of the State Board of Health.

An unsuccessful effort was made at ... session of the Legislature to ... appropriation for the erection of a sanatorium for the treatment of Alabama's twenty-five thousand tubercular citizens. Funds for the continuation of the campaign to eradicate this disease must come through voluntary contributions and the association is depending upon the Christmas Seal sales to secure these funds, every dollar of which will be spent in Alabama.

The text of Governor Brandon's proclamation follows:

"Whereas, it is estimated that we have in Alabama more than twenty-five thousand cases of tuberculosis which proves a terrible human and economic drain upon our Commonwealth, and.

"Whereas, the Alabama Tuberculosis Association, with its forty-five affiliated county tuberculosis associations, working in close cooperation with the constituted health authorities for the control of this terrible human enemy, and

"Whereas, these voluntary agencies depend upon the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas seals for funds with which to do their work, and,

"Whereas, all the funds raised in the sale of Christmas seals are used wholly and economically in the campaign against tuberculosis, and,

"Whereas, we must depend upon ... method of fighting this great enemy until such time as the Legislature of Alabama can see its way clear to appropriate funds to cope with this disease through sanatorium treatment. I, W. W. Brandon, Governor of Alabama, do hereby most earnestly appeal to all the people of Alabama to cooperate to the fullest extent with the agencies engaged in the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas seals to the end that sufficient funds may be raised to carry on for another year the effective program of tuberculosis control which is now in operation."

GETTING READY FOR TRIAL

Hon. Fritz Thompson, of Birmingham, who is the leading council of Messer in the election contest, was here the latter part of last week and again yesterday engaged with the local council in checking up the polling lists and making other preliminary arrangements for the trial next month.

Mr. Thompson has the reputation of being a very able lawyer and one who is especially thorough and painstaking in the preparation of his cases.

The man with a batch of accounts is having a hard time this month. Saturday every body was too busy to ... and Monday it rained all day and the bill collector could not travel good.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Eptiomized Form.

Walter Jordan, a resident of Cherokee county, brought a load of fresh meat to Gadsden and while attempting to sell it to market an officer walked up and asked if it had been properly inspected. It had not and the officer began to do a little inspecting of his own. As a result he found five gallons of whisky under the pork and beef. Jordan pleaded guilty in police court and in addition to being fined $100 was sentenced to 90 days at hard labor. The labor sentence, however, was suspended.

Police Chief Littlefield of Gadsden is looking for his crutches. Not that he needs them because of infirmities but he wants the negro that stole them and by means of them managed to escape from the city jail. Several days ago an officer was forced to shoot L. B. Cleveland, a negro, who attacked him. After the negro had been placed in jail Chief Littlefield, out of pure compassion, purchased him a pair of crutches. The next day the negro broke out of prison and hobbled away with the props.

The Alabama public service commission will give an early decision on a petition filed by the Alabama Power Company to increase the height of the dam at Cherokee Bluffs on the Tallapoosa river from 100 feet to 150 feet, the construction of six dams on the river instead of four, as first contemplated, the storage power available to be increased from 147,000,000 kilowat hours to 271,000,000 kilowat hours and an increase in the expenditure on the whole development from $28,344,000 to $39,000,000.

The mammoth incubator which was bought by the Lee county farm bureau several weeks ago, has arrived in Opelika and is being installed for immediate use. The hatchery will occupy the Burt building on North Eighth street. The big incubator has a 10,000-egg capacity and the installing of it is attracting considerable attention as this project is regarded as a forward step in the developing and expanding of the poultry industry in Lee county.

Birmingham newsboys, 150 of them, were treated to a real Thanksgiving dinner and entertained last Friday by White Gibson, prominent Birmingham attorney, and Mrs. Gibson in their home on Shades mountain. Mr. Gibson was once a newsboy himself and has always felt a keen interest in their welfare. For the past 10 years or more he has been giving these dinners, either the day before or the day after Thanksgiving.

Is a tent a dwelling house, and if so, when? This was a point involved in a case appealed from Mobile county, and on which a decision was rendered by the court of appeals. The court did not undertake to define just when a tent may rightfully claim to be a dwelling house, but it held in the case before it that a tent temporarily set up to accommodate employes at a lumber camp is not a "dwelling house."

The Alabama public service commission has approved a temporary schedule of water rates to be charged at Russellville by the Union Water company. It was stated that the rates were agreed upon in the contract which the city of Russellville transferred its waterworks to the Union Water company, to be applied temporarily until otherwise ordered by the commission.

J. A. Rountree, director general of the Bankhead highway and the United States Good Roads association, after a six weeks' tour over the main line of the road through New Mexico, Texas, Arkansas and Tennessee, has returned to Birmingham.

The Alabama Power Company has purchased through J. Percy Day and W. O. Crisman, two realty dealers of Selma, 14 acres of land three miles out on the Marion Junction road from Selma. It is understood that the land was purchased for future requirements of the company, possibly for the location of a sub-station at some time.

Grate fires will soon be a thing of the past in the dormitories of Judson College at Marion. A central heating plant is being built and plumbers are already at work putting in pipes in the main building. The work will be completed during the Christmas holidays when the work can be rushed because the rooms are emptied of students.

The cotton crop in Pike county for 1923, up to November 14, exceeds the crop of 1922 by 1,152 bales, according to figures of Jeff Starling, crop reporting agent for Pike county, who stated that 18,299 bales of cotton were ginned this year and last year up to the same date there were 17,147 bales.

Changes in the present automobile laws were urged by members of the Birmingham Motor Trades association at a meeting with members of the state tax commission. It was intimated that unless some changes are brought about in these laws the matter would be taken to court.

The city council of Selma has adopted the budget of department expenditures submitted by Mayor W. B. Hall for the year beginning Oct. 1, 1923, and ending Sept. 30, 1924. The annual expenditure provided for is $149,487.61, being $1,010.20 in excess of the budget of last year.

IMPROVED ROADS

Putting Cracks in Roads to Prevent Other Cracks

Putting in a crack to prevent cracking sounds contradictory, but that is exactly what is being done by highway engineers on some of the modern concrete road projects. Such an innovation is only one of the many new ideas developed in this type of highway construction during the last few years.

The idea of building a crack into the road at the time of construction has been tried and found satisfactory in a number of instances. The "crack" consists of a traffic center line down the middle of the road, as shown in the illustration. In addition, there are dividing lines running crosswise of the road about every fifty feet. So the road becomes a series of concrete slabs 50 feet long and half as wide as the road. The center line is continuous. By using this method highway engineers in the state of Maine secured excellent results, as cracking has been practically eliminated.

Experiments on the manner of preventing cracking were carried out in spite of the fact that cracks ordinarily do no actual damage to the road. Engineers state that the effect of the cracks is largely psychological, in that the average motorist associates cracking with disintegration. However, this has proved to be erroneous, as the crack merely necessitates a small amount of maintenance, and no actual damage is done to the road itself.

Another interesting experiment which has been tried out by Maine highway engineers produced some valuable information in regard to drainage of concrete roads. On some of the projects the concrete slabs had been placed on a heavy rock foundation, the theory being that such a foundation gave substantiality and provided drainage. Study of the results convinced the engineers that this was not the fact and that instead of providing drainage the rock base furnished a place for water to settle and freeze. A decision was reached to eliminate the rock foundations and provide drainage at the side of the road to take water away from the roadbed. The results soon proved the advisability of this procedure.

Express Roads for Autos Above Railroad Tracks

From Europe comes this interesting suggestion for future highways: Express roads for automobiles built above the railroad tracks.

It does not sound so ridiculous when one has thought it over a little while, says the Evansville Courier. Suppose roads could be built for motor vehicles as long, straight and level as railroad tracks, with no sharp curves and no interference from other kinds of traffic, and few crossroads even of the same sort. How that would facilitate long-distance motoring! Automobile tourists could travel safely as fast as the railroad trains, with none of the usual petty annoyances they now meet with, and added thrill and pleasure from being up in the air.

There are practical difficulties, to be sure. The railroad owners would have to consent to the use of their property for that purpose, and be properly compensated. Construction would be expensive. Bridges and tunnels and deep cuts would offer difficult engineering problems. Yet the thing might be done. And some kind of express roads will have to be provided before many years.

Million Dollars Spent on Saskatchewan Roads

About $1,000,000 was expended on Saskatchewan roads during 1922, government reports indicate. The two principal items of expense in this connection were: Road gang wages, $369,000; contracts, numbering 1,082, $445,000. Approximately 755 miles were constructed last year by the gov-

That Plum Pudding and Some Twisted Mottoes

LOUISE loved jokes. She caught people with questions and puzzled them with conundrums. So she had arranged a program that centered about the Christmas plum pudding. When that came upon the table each one was to put in his thumb and pull out a plum in the shape of a twisted motto; there they were, all around the sides of the platter.

Father was first, unfolding his plum he read off the pit of it and, as if to moderate the coming merriment, said "All is not laugh that titters."

Then mother read hers: "It's a wrong turkey that has no turning." As this did not apply to the bird that had just disappeared, the self-satisfied smile of the cook behind the door did not come off.

Then Aunt Mary: "A hitch in time saves mine." This reference to Bob's trousers asserted his independence of suspenders, but caused his relative to remind him that he was not as needless of stitches as he thought, upon which he replied that he could depend upon that tailor who had advertised "pants a dollars and a half a leg, seats free."

Then Susan: "We never miss the swatter till the flies go by." This was a fly paper upon a dead subject and it was filed for future reference.

Bob's plum was also laid on the table after he had read: "A strolling boy catches no horse." A sentiment that he was inclined to think a little too personal.

Louise had the last plum and declared; "All's well that ends swell." Expressing the traveler's satisfaction with terra firma, less terror and more firmer.

But the pudding was cooling and that was no joke, so, as the temperature fell, they fell to.—Christopher G. Hazard.

Christmas March Was Played by Minister

THE minister had hung up his stocking, too. The sprites that put into it a candy cane, a lollipop, a ball, an apple and a motor car that would go, had added a mouth organ, most appropriate and perhaps most needed of all gifts, for what other mouth should so dispense harmony?

Then, after breakfast, came the procession into the parlor and unto the wonderful tree. First, little Sarah, with the early and aided steps of her one year and the big eyes of her first Christmas tree. Then demure Helen, blowing her own horn for once, then big Sarah and all the uncles, aunts and cousins, then father and mother, and then the minister, playing his new march upon his new organ.

When they were all seated in the happy circle they asked for the words of that new tune and here they are:

"If birds could sing in Christmas trees,
If they could hum with happy bees,
If they were sweet with all the spice
Of all things beautiful and nice,
They could not altogether be
More full of love than this, our tree.
Chorus.—March, march to the Christmas tree.
It has a loving gift for thee.

Then they all sang it, after which the beautiful tree yielded its fruit.—Christopher G. Hazard.

WRITER OF MUSIC

Monk Was the First to Devise Simple Method.

Before Guido Wrote Notes There Was No Way for Melodies to Be Put Into Circulation.

Nine hundred years ago, in 1023, the perpetuation of music was made possible by Guido, a monk of Arezzo. This year many celebrations are being held in central Germany and France in honor of the man who conceived the method of writing melodies on paper.

Before Guido brought into use the method of indicating music notes on lines, there was no way for melodies to be put into circulation other than that of transmission from person to person by humming or whistling. The name of a creator of a melody was soon forgotten, and when new tunes were heard old ones were discarded and heard no more.

The method at first employed by Guido in transcribing music was different from that used today. Instead of having five horizontal lines with notes in the spaces between them as well as on them, he used four lines with notes only in the spaces. Previous to him another monk had devised a method whereby one note was indicated upon which the melody was begun, and to complete it there was a series of directions for the melody to go up or down as the case might be, with no means for making accurate each note.

At that time the making of a manuscript of music was an art, for not only were notes placed for practical purposes, but they served a decorative purpose as well. There was a wide variety in the colors and the shapes of the notes for the various spaces, and other indications that were necessary were made to please the eye as well as inform the brain.

In the first space the note was written in red ink. It was not essential that a round note be made, such as those employed in the standard music of today, but the person who made the manuscript tried to put originality in his work, so in filling the space allotted the note he might draw a miniature picture. Other spaces had their own particular colors, but the first space, "F," was distinguished in all of the manuscripts by its flaring red color.—Boston Herald.

Luna Original Moon Deity.

Luna is the Latin name for the moon. To the Romans, however, Luna was not a planet, but a goddess, who drove her silver chariot across the sky. This goddess was not always gentle and kind and was believed sometimes to drive insane those who had seriously offended her.

From this old superstition the word "lunatic" grew up. But there was another deity, a far more important one, named Diana, and since she was a sister of the sun god, Apollo, she must, argued her worshipers, have something to do with the moon. To her, therefore, gradually were transferred the qualities of Luna, until in time the two were merged into one conception. Luna, however, was the original Roman moon goddess, and her worship dates back to the time of Romulus, founder of Rome, in 753 B. C.—Detroit News.

There was an astonished silence. The men craned and stared. Johanness nodded truculently to them.

"You have heard, now! Then be warned!—and obey!"

Johanness, catching his eye, dismissed the crew. Back once more by the steersman, old Dominique sighed.

"We have a handful. But I can guess their stares. The Captain Lafitte defending the English because, forsooth, they are friendly with the Americans! It is enough to open old eyes! Half these renegades have smarted in British press-gangs, and the rest—well, sirs, it puzzles even our old fellows!"

"It well may. Lafitte's return dazzled them at first, and they were keen to be at anything for him; but now some of them are wondering where the profits lie for broken bones and wet skins."

"They glower, too, at this young gentleman of the rue Royale—for they deem him part owner of the Seraphine, and holding back the captain from any too unlawful a venture. And Jarvis, the idler, goes among them with his jests and ruffles their feelings."

Johanness, the bo'sun, had come aft, cocking an eye aloft at the sail-spread; he had heard the talk and growled:

"A good fight—that's what these heartles need—blood let from some of the youngsters, and a man or two to the sharks! Aye, and we keep on fetching yon hull above the water as we've done the past five hours and there'll be one."

"Captain Lafitte does not desire an encounter."

"Burke and the other deserting Irisher say the Genaron mounts two long sixes and a twelve-pounder; and below hatches, stuffed with arms, which, it was given out, are going to New Granada for Simon Bolivar's revolt."

"Aye, well! I little think she'll fight. The Seraphine will flay her in an hour—we carry pretty bat'ries, gentlemen, as ever a privateer could wish! Twelve twenty-four-pound carronades and the two long nines!"

The wind slipped to uncertain streaks near sundown, and in the last glimmer of dusk the pursued and pursuer lay limp and adrift on the warm heave of the gulf. The crew had grown strangely quiet. Jarvis, lolling at the quarter-rail, spat at a following shark, then touched the Count de Almonaster upon the sleeve. He pointed at the fugitive ship to the southward.

"She must know she is pursued. She is making straight for Yucatan—she will crawl under the Spaniards' guns at some river's mouth and yell to Heaven that old days have come again in the gulf and the buccaneers are on the tail of the traffic. The crew has decided that she should be scuttled and every mouth on her closed ere she can tell that Lafitte is at sea again!"

"What nonsense! You know the purpose of this ship as well as I."

"The devil take me though if I know her end!"

"Come—come!" said Raoul hurriedly. "No more of this! Affairs are getting ominous enough among us. You had best keep apart from the crew, Jarvis. You have been setting them on to fury with tales of the gold the Genaron carries. You know there is no truth to it!"

"I was fair to split my sides laughing over the murdering humor it put them in! That and the drink I got among them to start their boasting."

"The devil take you! I should report this to the captain," fumed De Almonaster. "You are a troublemaker!"

"I must be amused," yawned Jarvis, "for in the end, I hang."

He pulled his dirty velvet cap over one ear, rubbed the unshaven pallor of his cheek, and smiled plaintively. At dinner the gentlemen found him asleep in the tapestried suite, his ragged boots upon the pillows of the bed which had been designed for Bonaparte.

CHAPTER XI

The Lady of the Genaron.

And again that night the hawk missed its prey. Even as the chiefs were conferring as to what trusted fellows should man the longboats for a surprise upon the becalmed bark, there came a stir out of the east that gave her chance to elude the Seraphine. But at once Beluche had his sailormen aloft; and with royals and staysails set the schooner lay to the course where the merchantman was last reported.

"If we cannot board before tomorrow," grumbled Nez Coupe, "there will be the question of gunning her. I smell sailors' weather coming."

"There will have to be some action. Last night some rascals plundered the steward's stores," said Bohon, now on the watch. "Dainties o' food and drink meant for the gentlemen o' New Orleans on their quest for Bonaparte have been guzzled by shrimp fishers o' the city markets!"

Indeed, the watching eyes of all the ship's officers were upon the restless spirit growing forward. It was a relief, when, after the breeze died fitfully near midnight, a hail from the lookout brought everyone out upstanding.

"There—theft our beam! She hangs flat, and the currents are bearing us past her bow!" Bohon pointed to the starlight: "Your Genaron, my captain!"

The party on the quarterdeck was watching what only a seaman's eyes could make out against the night; when, on the silence, came the jarring burst of a gun. The flash leaped from the Seraphine's side, and by it they saw three figures retreating from the port carronade.

Then, on the hush, came a shout. Jarvis, reeling from a coil of cordage by the companion-hood, pointed to the shadowy bulk of the English ship slowly heaving on the seas. With a grinding, tearing crash, her main mast was heeling down through her shrouds. The Seraphine's crew howled.

"Silence!" thundered Lafitte.

"A hit—a marvelous shot!" chuckled Jarvis, rubbing his hands.

There came a shout from the English vessel. Men were already struggling there to cut away the pounding mast and wreckage.

"What is this villainy, sir?" a voice rasped: "Against his majesty's ship in times of peace? Who are you, sir?"

A shout broke from the Genaron's crew. "The Seraphine! The Yankee clipper! Aye, the Napoleon ship—I'd know her in a thousand!"

The English captain blustered on, as his deck officers shouted to the men to clear away the grinding rigging overside. Lafitte listened quietly, and when a pause came, he spoke.

"The Seraphine, sir—then it is. Her present object is to demand the lady who is unlawfully detained upon your ship. You know the circumstances of Miss Lestron's detention. I demand that she be placed at once at our disposal."

There was an astounded silence on the bark. Then a woman's cry of joyful amazement. "The Americans!"

The skipper's voice answered: "We cannot recognize this demand, sir—whoever you are. And who is in command?"

"I demand," retorted the chief, "the person of Miss Lestron at once delivered on board this ship."

"And I refuse—"

"The affair is yours. Beluche, sir!" He turned to his silent men, who clustered along the rail. "Lay the boats alone for boarding. You, Bohon, see to the gun crews!"

There was a howl of joyful surprise among the ruffians, a scattering right and left, under the yeoman's instant call, a clattering of knives and pistols. Again the commander turned calmly to the Genaron.

"You are ready for action, sir? You shall have it!"

But the merchantman was not, as was easily seen. Her crew became a disorderly pack scattering from the amidship wreckage. The captain spoke roughly to Miss Lestron.

"Carr put this affair on me! I did not want you here! That I protested against from the beginning!"

"That I well know, Captain Richards. I also know why I was seized and delivered to you for deportation, which is more than you!"

"I know not who these people are who demand you from one of his majesty's ships. But I clear my hands of it until reparation is demanded in the courts—Carr and his intrigues and all! We cannot fight fivescore scoundrels boarding us. Madame, the choice is your—"

"I take it." Her voice came clear, and proudly.

"Remember you are committing yourself to unknown adventurers—God knows, perhaps, the buccaneers who harried these waters not twenty years agone!"

There was a hoarse laugh among the Seraphine's fellows, which the chief stilled. The woman's calm voice answered the other's heat.

"I go willingly. I have not been more than a prisoner here."

"A boat," muttered Lafitte, swiftly turning. "Pull away, and have a care under the quarter when the lady comes alongside."

"Aye, sir!"

The Seraphine rode slowly on past the bark in the easy seas. Lafitte turned to De Almonaster when the yawl swung from the Genaron's side.

"I have a mind that you represent me, sir. I prefer to meet her in the cabin. First comes this matter of that cannon shot."

"The lady comes," grunted the alderman; "make way there!"

"First—ere she puts foot on the deck—who fired that shot?" The commander motioned to the bo'sun. "Johanness! Fetch Burke and John Crackley! Those two, at least, were recognized."

The under-officers hustled the two malcontents out of the disorder along the waist. Crackley, the Englishman, swaggered with a confident leer.

"You fired that gun, sir?"

"I fired no gun."

"Burke!"

"Neither did I, sir. And a d—d good shot it be, I say!"

"Silence!" The captain looked over the press of evil faces. And from the rear a hoarse voice chuckled:

"It was no gunner, that I'll say. Nothin' 's knew but point and pull lanyard when someone give the word the Britisher was swingin' fair point-blank in the gun's eye!"

"Jarvis," whispered Beluche. "I had a mind o' Jarvis—"

At his name the buffoon arose with airy unsteadiness. The crew made way for him until he stood below the poop steps looking up against the lights. His blinking eye found the Count de Almonaster, and to him he bowed, alone, apparently.

"Monsieur, I have won a pistol. I have a mind to horror of you powder and ball—to find a tutor who will instruct me which end is which."

The commander drew his breath sharply. "Jarvis? You fired that gun?"

The boat's crew was making fast, the bow men climbing the short ladder. They stood back respectfully to make way for her. The silence grew painfully acute. The cloaked figure of a woman was assisted to the rail and past the guards. She looked about puzzledly, as if not seeing clearly who first would address her.

"The man—Jarvis—below, to the brig, Bohon!" The master spoke low, swiftly and with a mask of indifference that had concealed his pain.

His guards threw Jarvis past the crowding ruffians and hurried him forward. And the lady who looked back at him from her coach on the Esplanade now did not see him at all! She had gone swiftly to the after-companion, with its gilded panels and royal carpet leading to the cabin of the emperor.

At the companionway the bronzed lamp showed the captain's face. De Almonaster started at the grief, the stern, pent sadness of the leader.

"Jarvis," he muttered: "My friend—Jarvis—"

"Why this fool's mutinous play!" blustered old Dominique.

"It was so that you could never return to the ports of the world," put in Raoul de Almonaster. "An act of piracy—an overt act of war by a ship that flies no flag, against the power of England. He condemns you to a part he would play himself and cannot—Sazarac, the last sea-rover . . . and the lover, Jean!" And the count added hurriedly: "Go, now. You have my pledge to aid in this affair. On my honor, Monsieur—you shall be none but Sazarac."

CHAPTER XII

The Parting of the Paths.

De Almonaster stepped aside as the two came to the brocade portieres that hung at the portal of Napoleon's cabin. The other man, therefore, had stepped within, and the brilliance of the polished lamp cluster with its crystal reflectors was full upon him.

"Sazarac!" the lady cried sharply. "Sazarac—the river gamester!"

"Playing high again, Mademoiselle Lestron—to serve you!"

The lustrous blackness of her eyes was narrowing. She threw the cloak higher with one arm before her chin, as if in fear or some curious revulsion, to shut the thought of him away. And then she dropped this and stood facing him.

"Monsieur Sazarac," she repeated quietly. "This is a strange affair! How can it be? You—why should you take me from the ship of my country?"

"Why did you come?" he retorted, and his somber smile lightened. "The choice was yours, Mademoiselle—even at the last."

There came a shout from the waist of the ship. A rolling boast, followed by discordant choruses of laughter.

"With one shot I lay a ship to, helpless on the sea! Oh, bullies! One shot—my first shot! I—Jarvis! Why didn't I play the part of Lafitte long years ago?"

The muffled cry was drowned in imprecations and more fo'cas'le laughter. Mademoiselle Lestron gave Monsieur Sazarac a swift measuring glance.

"I assure you—a rough jest of my rough crew, Mademoiselle."

She shivered slightly. "Lafitte? I recall, when a child, that his men plundered my father's home at La Casa Montana in the Grenadines—"

"He has long vanished from these peaceful seas, Mademoiselle."

There came a stir at the threshold of the emperor's cabin. She turned to another figure there. A slighter man, but tall. His dark, slender, youthful face was lit by an unbelieving hope. The Count de Almonaster stepped nearer.

Calendar Curiosities.

The calendar offers certain curiosities which are little known. No century can begin on a Wednesday, Friday or Saturday. The month of October begins always on the same day of the week as the month of January; February, March and November begin on the same day of the week. May, June and August begin on different days. These rules do not apply to leap years. The ordinary year always finishes on the same day of the week as it began.

MAKE CLOTHES LAST LONG BY GOOD CARE

Proper Attention and Keeping in Repair Is Essential.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The care given to clothing, not only in keeping it clean and in repair, but also in storing it properly when not in use, makes considerable difference in the length of service it will give and in its appearance when worn, points out the United States Department of Agriculture.

Dresses and outergarments should be hung carefully when not in use. Plenty of rods and hangers save space and prevent wrinkles.

Keep covers over delicate garments or others worn only occasionally to protect against dust and rubbing. Fold carefully all garments kept in drawers or boxes.

Do not keep partly-soiled garments in an unaired place. They are likely to become discolored. Removable and washable collars, cuffs and linings save cleaning in women's dresses, waists and coats.

In putting garments away for the season, guard against wrinkling, stretching, fading and insects. Fold so that creases will correspond as far as possible with the folds into which the garment falls in use. Do not allow weight to rest on folded garments. Garments of firm materials may be left hanging if carefully covered against dust and insects; but sleazy materials, heavily-trimmed garments and circular skirts are likely to be stretched out of shape by their own weight. Keep in the dark to avoid change in color.

Garments Should Be Hung Carefully When Not In Use.

Wash stockings frequently. It prevents continued strain on the same part of the stocking, and rotting and change of color from perspiration. Wash new stockings before wearing to remove the sizing.

Shake outergarments and brush with the nap after each use. Keep tailor-made garments carefully pressed. Cover with a thick damp cloth and use a heavy, hot iron. Some of the special boards and cushions used by tailors are convenient and may be made at home. Remember that "shine" is caused by the wearing down of the nap and sometimes by grease. Remove by sponging, pressing and brushing up the nap with a stiff brush. A tablespoonful of ammonia may be used to a quart of tepid water for sponging.

Remove dust from silk by wiping with a piece of velvet, a soft cloth, or a soft brush. Avoid pressing with a too hot iron; the heat injures the fibers and sometimes the color. Remove shine by sponging and pressing. Use 1 tablespoonful ammonia to 1 quart tepid water.

Alternate two pairs of shoes; they last longer. Slip shoe-trees into shoes when you take them off to keep them in shape.

Prolong the life of gloves by blowing up and pulling gently into shape after use and mending rips as soon as they start. Reliable dealers will repair worn places at small cost.

Keep hats looking fresh by dusting them before putting them away after each wearing. Use a soft brush; or, for fine felt, silk beaver, silk, satin or velvet hats, a piece of silk or velvet. Get the dust out from under the edges of bands, folds and trimmings. Do not allow bands, bows, trimmings, linings or sweat bands to become loosened; tack them into place as soon as they begin to rip. Store your hats where they will not gather dust; paper bags or hat boxes are good for those worn only occasionally.

ROAST PORK WITH COWPEAS

Cooked In Same Manner as Dried Navy and Kidney Beans—Apple Sauce Will Help.

Whenever cowpeas are a common crop, they are cooked in the same way as dried navy and kidney beans. They are first cooked in water, much of which they absorb. When parboiled until tender either beans or cowpeas may be combined with meat.

A leg of young pork is the most desirable piece of meat for preparing roast pork with cowpeas. A deep cut in the knuckle filled with sage, pepper, salt, and chopped onion will give it flavor. After being half-roasted the skin should be cut, but not deeper than the outer rind, in several places. The excess fat is drained off when the roast is almost done, and a quart of parboiled white cowpeas is poured into the roast pan. The meat and peas must then cook slowly until the beans are entirely done and the meat is brown. Apple sauce is a palatable accompaniment to serve with the roast pork and cowpeas, the United States Department of Agriculture suggests.

MAKE PUREE OF NAVY BEANS

Suggested to Accompany Chops and Roasts and Also as Main Dish for Luncheon.

The United States Department of Agriculture suggests this puree of navy beans to accompany chops and roasts. It would also be appetizing as a main dish for luncheon or supper, especially with some pieces of cooked ham, frankfurters, bacon or corned beef cut up in it.

Puree of Navy Beans.

1 pint beans
1 onion
1 carrot
1 sprig parsley
Pepper
¼ pound salt pork or 2 tablespoonfuls meat drippings
2 cloves
½ teaspoonful salt
1 quart water
1 tablespoonful butter

Soak the beans overnight, drain and add the other ingredients, with the exception of the butter. Boil until tender and press through a sieve. Add butter and salt, if necessary, and reheat. Similar purees may be made from red kidney beans, split peas and lentils.

Household Questions

Never boil a soup bone in an iron vessel.

Be sure the carving knife is always sharp.

Milk puddings require long and gentle cooking.

• • •

To remove ink stains from tablecloths and other white goods, damp the spot freely with milk and cover with salt.

MAXIMUM OF CONVENIENCE IN HOME

Dish Closet Near Stove Saves Many Extra Steps.

Here is a good suggestion for the cottage or home where space must be economized. This dish closet, which is close to the stove, has a door which lets down on hinges, and is supported by chains. When serving meals or hot beverages directly from the stove the plates or cups may be spread out on this shelf and filled without taking an extra step. The kitchen may be made more spacious by closing the closet when there is no more need for the shelf. This arrangement was photographed in connection with a kitchen improvement contest carried on in Wythe county, Virginia, under the direction of the state home demonstration agent of the extension service of the Virginia Polytechnic institute and the United States Department of Agriculture.

To Clanton and Chilton County Democrats

We want to say just a few words to you all in regard to the Chilton County News.

There is one fact I am sure that you all will remember, and that is that the Chilton County News is the legitimate offspring of the Democratic party of Chilton County, because it was conceived and brought forth by the mandate of that party, acting through the official capacity of its Executive Committee.

So much for that. As the undisputed creature or child of the party it would naturally seem that its welfare would, at least, be of interest to its parents.

From the very first, it has been a discouraging struggle to keep the life blood, coursing through its veins, and largely so, because the rank and file of the party have seemed to consider that the little one dollar a year subscription to the paper was the full measure of the support they were obligated to give it. This dollar will nothing like pay for the material that goes into 52 copies of the paper.

There are hundreds of ways that would not cost you a penny, by which you could have aided in making your paper a self supporting proposition.

It would be mighty little trouble, and no expense at all, for you to advise the merchants you trade with to return the compliment by patronizing your paper with his advertising business. Have you ever done it? Then youcould advise your democratic neighbors and friends to do the same. If you were really loyal to your party and its best interests you would not have to be reminded of these things.

By seeking advertising patronage for your paper, you would not, in any sense, be asking a charity service, but would really be advising the merchant to do, what any banker or other close student of business conditions would advise, after he had gone into the real hard down business facts of the situation. These facts will be gladly furnished to any one interested.

Now and then a little criticism of style, appearance and policy of the paper has occurred. None of it has been of a constructive nature, from the fact that the invitation is always open, and urgently urged, for any one who can do better to take hold and show us. We want the best we can get for the party paper and those who can make improvements certainly owe it to the party to come forward and do it.

Another thing. About June 1st it became financially necessary for some change to be made, or let the paper cease to exist. It could not possibly go any further without financial aid. In this extremity, when no one else would assume the charge, rather than to see the paper go dead. Mr. C. B. Cox assumed the lead and paid up the debts and made it possible for a Democratic paper to still be issued in Chilton County. He did this without hope of reward and without hope of any return on the money he had to invest. Mr. Cox is a very busy man and is in no sense interested in the policy of the paper, further than to feel assured that the Democracy of Chilton would still have an official mouthpiece. There is no one who can know better than the writer of the absolute unselfishness of Mr. Cox in this matter. He has never dictated to me one single policy further than to make the paper the very best democratic paper of which I was capable. He shapes no policies nor carries the interest of any man, set of men nor corporation on earth, so far as I know and I do know in so far as the Chilton County News is concerned.

I have been permitted to shape and dictate the editorial and political policies of the News ever since its first issue and, under the controll of Mr. Cox I want to assure you, on my honor, that I am less harrassed and have a freer hand than at any other period of the paper's existence.

As long as I remain at the helm of the News, I can assure you all that it will be as true to the ideals of the Democratic party as it is possible for me to make it. I feel like the majority of my readers need no assurance of the fact, but while I am doing my utmost to put the party in the right light before the people, it will be equally necessary for you all to take some thought in regard to what it necessarily costs to issue the paper week by week, and if you are loyal to your party and wish to see your efforts crowned with victory in the end, you will begin right now to take such steps as lie in your power to keep a democratic paper here as your organ.

So far as I am individually concerned, if my work is not to your notion, or you feel like some one else can do the party better service as editor of your paper, don't allow any personal reasons deter you form making a change. My highest ambition is to see the democratic party win out in Chilton County.

W. B. CORLEY.

What about that fire bell? Don't we need it and if we do, can't we have it?

The stores closed on Thanksgiving day and the down town district looked just like Sunday.

Are you going to help make that 13,000,000 bales of cotton the speculators want next year?

A small crop of cotton at a good price is a much better money maker than a big crop at a little price.

Several new building projects are on the bills for after Christmas. We need some more business houses.

No decent, law abiding citizen has any fear of the law, nor of any other organization that punishes evil doers.

Industrial leaders and bankers all over the country are predicting good times for next year. We are duly grateful.

Only a few headaches followed the Thanksgiving festivities here this year. Really, either us or the joy juice are improving.

Front page stuff will be plentiful now for the big dailies. Congress has started on another talk fess that will mean nothing.

If we have one out of every two dollars in the world, Henry Ford, and a few other big guys, must have most of it put away.

Santa Claus is moving in and unpacking his wares. The Upchurch and Alred Drug Stores seem to be his main headquarters so far.

The K. K. K. do not seem to be distressed by political ambitions but their silence is scaring some of the "big leaders" into fits.

The Birmingham News is a great paper and carries many splendid features, but why the "Krazy Kat" and the "Coal Bin?"

The kind of weather we had Monday does not hasten up sidewalk paving any—nor any other line of work either, for that matter.

McAdoo does not favor government ownership of railroads nor other public utilities. He says that policy would be a mistake. He is emimently correct.

Henry Ford has beat the papers of the country out of millions of dollars worth of free advertising. No wonder he don't know how much cash he has.

We need look for no real constructive legislation from this Congress. The next election has all parties afraid to do anything. It might not be popular with the voters.

There are only 15 per cent of the people in the United States who are producers. They have to feed and clothe the rest of us. Some job, ain't it?

Try to keep the children interested at home until after Christmas. They will bankrupt you in five minutes if you allow them to look in at some of the show windows now.

The general sentiment about road building now is for the state to go ahead and build some well drained gravel roads. The finished product comes too slow and too high.

The K. K. K. organization does not seem to manifest any intention of getting into politics but their enemies seem determined to force the issue. The hyphenated variety die hard.

The western market for pork is quoted now below the lowest price of 1913, but the consumer is still paying the peak prices of the war. The markets all fall on produce but they never fall to the consumer.

Congerss began to grind again Monday morn. A peculiar situation exists this time. LaFolette and his "farm bloc" have the entire legislative situation in hand if they stick together. By throwing their 40 votes to either side they can pass or kill any bill that comes up.

The labor vote is going to name the next president if they play their hand just right. They are the balance of power between the old parties, and the result is going to be decided by the way they flop if they stand solidly together. Their united support will make either of the old parties a winner.

The latest fad with the ultra fashionable women is to have their back and side hair slosely shingled leaving a pompadore in front. Who will be the first Clanton lady to show us how it looks?

THE GAME STARTED

Last Sunday we noticed a well written and plausable article on the cotton situation that was prominently carried by the big dailies.

The writer went on to tell how much cotton there was in the world now and how soon the supply would be exhausted. He says that all of the cotton in the world will not last the spinners longer than July 1st and that we need for this year a crop of not less than 13,000,000 to meet the actual demands for another year. He also assures the farmers that a thirteen million bale crop will not cause the price to fall off but that a 30 cent price would be maintained right on.

We have been living and especially noting the different phases of the cotton crop for quite a good many seasons, and none of these statements tally out with the facts and experiences that have controlled the cotton industry in the past. This is merely a repitition of the same tactics that the cotton speculators have pursued for many years past. All of the thinking men and women who read this will bear us out in this statement. The invariable policy has been, for years, to put out a flood of propaganda similar to the article referred to, just as soon as the farmer has turned his crop loose and to keep it up until he pitches his crop for the next season. The purpose for this policy is very apparent. The more cotton the speculator can induce the planter to make the greater is his opportunity for forcing the market downward in the fall on account of an over supply. A 13,000,000 bale crop this next year would doubtless enable them to drive the market down to 10 cents. The foreign spinner would know there was more than enough to supply their needs in sight and they would not bid up a price when they knew by waiting they could almost name the price and buy all they want.

The cotton farmer does not need a surplus of cotton in the world. His salvation depends on never allowing a surplus to accumulate. His policy should always be to keep only enough cotton in the world to supply an urgent demand.

It is to be hoped that the cotton farmer will not bite at this old worn out bait this next year. The old gag is so old and time worn, and been worked so often with disastrous effects to our farmers that it does seem like every one of them would have become wise to the scheme and would pass it up with contempt.

It is the accumulated and expensive experience of the cotton farmer, acquired by years and years of toil, hardship and disappointment that a bumper cotton crop has always meant hard times and bankruptcy. Will they not profit by this experience and decide bought?

Had the weather been favorable and the boll weevil kept off the job, the crop of cotton planted this year would have wrought wholesale ruin in the South. What did the speculators begin to do to you when that foolish 11,000,000 bale estimate came out? Suppose it had been a 13,000,000 bale estimate, how much would your cotton have been worth?

Cotton is a gerat and an important crop, but only so to the farmer who raises it as a surplus after he has taken ample care of the food and feed problems that always confront him.

TO MOVE SOON

We learn that the Wadsonian Theatre will move, at an early date, into the building next to the railroad now occupied by M. Lande with his fire sale. Mr. Lande will go back into his old stand as soon as the workmen can complete the repairs made necessary by the fire.

WHY NOT?

We notice that in most of the cities and towns they are organizing "Glee Clubs" for winter entertainment.

Why don't some of our Clanton talent do the same?

We have a number of very fine male and female singers and if they would get together and organize we could furnish a musical entertainment that would be second to nobody.

It would be a drawing proposition too and bank up a neat little roll.

CURBING RECKLESS AUTO DRIVERS

There were thirty-two little children run over by automobiles in St Louis in 1923 up to Nov. 1. There has been erected right in the center of Twelfth Street, the main, broad thoroughfare downtown, a monument bearing this inscription:

In Memory of Child Life
Sacrificed on the Altar
Haste and Recklessness.

In the midst of that swelling tide of traffic sweeping by on both sides, it may conjure up to some of those motorists the vision of little children crushed mangled, maimed and bleeding beneath the wheels of the modern juggernaut—but it will hardly carry its warnings to the morons who are mainly responsible! Conscience they have not; sensibilities are atrophied, and remorse they do not know—and of such in the main are the modern breakers of speed laws. The Philadelphia Public Ledger also thinks this appeal will have little effect:

Every motorist in that Western city will pass it in the ordinary occasion of his travel. It will be a silent reminder to the already careful and conscientious, it may impress the reckless for a time, but it will make no impression upon the smooth brain lobes of the congenital fool at the steering wheel. He will always be far beyond reach or hope.

Nothing but fear of punishment will reach the speed maniacs; and that punishment should be severe, adequate and inexorable. A mere fine of a dollar or two is nothing. The jail, revocation of licenses, the impounding of the car, all these can be used with good effect. The time is rapidly approaching when progressive communities will require a severe and actual test before issuing a license to drive an automobile; and familiarity with traffic laws will be one of the cardinal points in that test. A mental test ought to be included.

There are hundreds of youths and grown-ups as well, now operating cars, who if subjected to a competeive examination couldn't even qualify for a place in a home for the feeble-minded Yet these people are turned loose to endanger the lives of others.

The overwhelming majority of motorists try sincerely to obey the law. They are themselves endangered by the fool at the steering wheel; and they should, in self-protection, rally to the aid of the courts in effort to eliminate permanently the unfit drivers and those whose main idea of an automobile is a vehicle in which to go from nowhere in particular to nowhere else in particular as rapidyl as possible, with nothing to do when they get there—Birmingham News.

TEACHERS' EXAMINATION

The regular teachers' examination will be held here in Clanton on December 17-19, 1923 beginnig Monday morning at 9 A. M.

Every applicant not personally known by me must be identified by some reliable white person.

Any applicant who does not live or teach in this county will not be permitted to take the examination unless they present a permit from the State Dept. of Education.

All applicants for second grade certificates must present satisfactory evidence of having completed 9th grade work. Every applicant for a first grade certificate must present evidence of having completed the high school course of study.

Pre Normal and Provisional certificates may be substituted in lieu of papers on certain branches of study when applying for certificates of higher grades on the same basis as certificates of the same rank issued by examination.

An examination will be given on Monday, December 17, for those persons who wish to teach piano and public school music. The fee for either of these certificates is $2.00.

Third grade certificates will be issued from this examination as heretofore.

Those applicants submitting an unexpired third grade certificate need not report until 3 o'clock Monday. Those submitting un-expired second grades need not report until noon Tuesday.

Respectfully,
HOWARD L. FOSHEE,
County Supt. Education.

A WONDERFUL SCHOOL

Mr. W. T. White, farmer and merchant at Benson, was in our office the other day.

We got to talking about the new agricultural school at Isabella and found that Mr. White was an enthusiastic believer in that enterprise. He says Prof. Caldwell is doing a most wonderful work for the boys out there and that the results are already apparent.

Prof. Caldwell is not only making a most thorough and comprehensive job with his class of boys, but is also teaching a class of farmers two nights per week and they are absolutely carried away with the service.

An educational institution conducted like this one is a great blessing to any community and is sowing seeds in the minds of the young men that will bear much fruit in dollars and cents when these boys grow up.

Yes, We Have No Hams, No Chickens, No Turkeys—Nothing Much At All!

One of Birmingham's big stores is advertising "Smithfield hams" at 60 cents a pound—and selling them at that price. Anybody can make a Smithfield ham. Originally the recipe came from around Smithfield, Va., but it is no secret any more The United States Department of Agriculture will furnish the recipe to anyone who wishes; tell him how to cure hams and bacon in a dozen different ways.

It is practically impossible to buy first-class home-cured hams and bacon in Alabama. It is impossible to buy enough chickens and eggs in Alabama. The great bulk of the butter consumed in the urban communities comes from other States. Much of the turkey consumed here is out of cold storage and probably from Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Tennessee. Most of the canned goods used in this State come from Maryland and New York and California. Most of the meal from distant States. The list could be expanded indefinitely.

What is the matter? Why, nothing in the world except that it is too easy to live down this way, that is, provided not much in the way of a living is wanted. The average ruralite has a patch of turnip greens, a patch of collards and a bank of sweet potatoes—maybe a few pigs and a few scrub chickens; perhaps a cow also, and is perfectly willing to go through the Winter with that sort of fare. He hasn't the energy or the ambition to branch out, to increase his herd of hogs, and put up some first-class home-cured meat and smoked sausage, or to raise poultry for the market. He is satisfied to vegetate along, living from hand to mouth in preference to exerting himself. If our climate were more severe it would be better. As then the natural indolence and disinclination to work would yield to [illegible] and every opportunity be seized upon.

The hope of the State is in the schools, and in the agricultural training of the boys and girls. When they are educated to a desire for better things than a log cabin and a diet of collards, greens and potatoes. They will begin to earn in order to have those things, but as long as rural people are merely satisfied to have a roof to keep the rain off and course fare with which to fill their stomachs, probably it is asking too much of them to expect them to exhibit enterprise, initiative and a realization upon [illegible] abundant opportunities.

Yet, there is a good deal of growling and lamentation at hogs selling for around $6.75 each for medium size couple of twelve-pound Smithfield hams from such a hog would bring, say, about $14.40; with the shoulders and bacon and lard, and so on, not counted. Or even, as good country hams lard and bacon, the hog would yield four or five times as much as if sold to shippers. But, all that takes work, and energy, and apparently the work and energy of the average farm dweller are priceless, for they do not endeavor to cash in on these dormant qualities.—Birmingham News.

The government experts have discovered a way to make syrup out of sweet potatoes. We can get our "long sweetening" from potatoes now and the moonshiner can have more sugar for his industry.

THE "BLOC" AT WORK

The "progressive bloc," under the leadership of Senator LaFollette, is showing its ability to tie up legislation, hold the lower house helpless [illegible] failed to elect a speaker [illegible] the vote that neither [illegible] Coolidge could be elected.

The people applaud and some content his mode of legislation. It is, to say the least of it, negative service, but we very materially doubt the wisdom of their tactics. In this fight they are [illegible] against for more political preferment, wanting a strong hand in making committee appointments.

Why not allow legislation to proceed, and then, by throwing their vote with which ever party was proposing laws that conformed to their views, they could have almost a controlling influence on the future of the country.

By wisely and judiciously exercising this power they could, perhaps, be of real service to the farmer and the other laboring classes. As for negative service, it cannot really benefit any one, except a few office seekers.

THE NEW M. E. CHURCH

Builder W. S. Price tells us that, given about two days, the brick work on the splendid Methodist church structure will be complete.

A temporary, or sub-covering, has already been put on and work on the interior is not interfered with by the rainy weather.

This is indeed a beautiful building, large and commodious, embracing all of the modern features that are required to take care of the different activities of the church work, and not only that, it has been built with an eye to the future and is large enough to meet all of the demands of our growing population.

When completed it will certainly be beautiful enough to demonstrate the old saying that "a thing of beauty is a joy forever."

QUITE SICK

The many friends of Mr. Elliott Littlejohn will be sorry to learn that he is saill quite sick.

Mr. Littlejohn had an attack of flu several months ago, followed by a severe relapse into pneumonia since which time it has seemed to be impossible for him to rally and regain his health. We extend to him our sympathy.

CHRISTMAS NEXT

It looks like it ... another.

Last week the calendar called us to date up on Thanksgiving and we poor folks turned our pockets wrong side out in the race to keep up with the proverbial good cheer that custom demands that we put on the table that day.

We all got by some way or other but before we had time to line those same pockets again with nickles, the inexorable hand of time flashed Christmas day in our face, and now we have got to start out on another period of scrimping and saving in order that we may properly hold up our corner on that occasion.

But that is all right. These periods of rest and relaxation are worth a good deal to lots of folks.

It does good for the tired business man and the jaded farmer and laboring man to stop, now and then, and take stock of their condition. To relax from the daily strain and look about them and see what their neighbors are doing. It also affords them an opportunity to get acquainted with their families.

So get ready to "pet out" for Christmas goodies and gew gaws without flinch. Come up to the taffy pull and be a game sport at the feast. Let yoru hearty laughter and jovial gaity set the pace for the kids. Make them all believe you are having the time of your life—even if you don't see how you are going to meet the bills on the first.

Go to it and let joy be unconfined.

When Uncle Sam tramped the railroad tracks during Federal control, he packed a heavy load, and the wear and tear of the road left him (and the roads, too) considerably tattered and torn.

Under Government operation, the railroads were operated at a loss of $1,300,000,000. While some loss was inevitable, the actual figures have proved appalling, and to thoughtful people they should present a warning not to be disregarded.

Despite the aftermath of the Federal control, and in the absence of any conditions which indicate that a similar experience would not result from another trial, there are people who are advocating "Government Ownership" and more drastic legislation regulating the railroads.

As Government property, the railroads would no longer pay the $300,000,000 taxes which they now pay, and they would be pitch-forked into national politics, with all the evils sure to follow and, under the additional legislation proposed, railroad service would deteriorate and utterly fail to meet transportation requirements.

Shall this condition be brought about? Shall Uncle Sam be forced to "tramp the tracks" again?

Underslung Wheelbarrow Useful to Handle Cans

Anyone who has tried to carry a large filled milk can or to push it in an ordinary wheelbarrow, will appreciate the usefulness of the underslung wheelbarrow shown in the drawing.

The frame of an ordinary wheelbarrow is used, but the regular body is removed. A platform is suspended under the frame, by means of flat brackets, so that it comes to within a few inches of the ground. The rear brackets are made in two pieces, and slotted as indicated, so that the platform can be adjusted to suit the height of the user. The platform itself is made of one-inch boards held on each side by lengths of angle iron. The center of gravity is so low that the load can be easily balanced to prevent spilling.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Expensive Equipment Is Not Necessary for Dairy

Contrary to common belief, expensive barns and equipment are not necessary for the production of clean milk, says the dairy department of the New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

When in the udder of the cow, milk contains no dirt and few, if any, bacteria. It is during and after milking that contamination takes place. The three most common sources are, dirty teats and udder, dirty pail and other utensils, and a dusty barn.

A little care eliminates all of these factors which make for dirty, unwholesome milk. The farmer with the simple equipment should find it easier to exercise care than if he had a lot of complicated equipment.

The three precautions recommended are that the teats and udder of the cow be cleaned with a damp cloth before milking; that all utensils be sterilized in live steam or boiling water, and that a small top pail be used.

Milk drawn under these conditions will be free from dirt and will contain only a few bacteria. In order to prevent these bacteria from multiplying, the milk should immediately be transferred to the can and cooled to as near 50 degrees Fahrenheit as possible. Straining of such milk is unnecessary.

Alfalfa Most Excellent Feed for All Dairy Cows

The farmers are indeed fortunate to have at their disposal the alfalfa crop.

Of all the rations which are fed to dairy cows, alfalfa hay heads the list from the standpoint of value. Its feeding value is due to its high protein content and to its palatability.

In the West, alfalfa is our cheapest roughage and for this reason some farmers are inclined to feed it alone to dairy cows. This is expecting too much from this great feed, says R. W. Fairbanks of the Colorado Agricultural college. When fed alone it makes an unbalanced ration as it is too high in protein and too low in net feeding nutrients. The animals cannot be kept up in health and vigor and they will fall off in production when limited to alfalfa for feed. Add to alfalfa a variety of grain, and during the winter a succulent feed for an excellent dairy ration.

Cooling Cream Promptly After Separated Is Best

The necessity of cooling milk immediately after it is drawn is pretty thoroughly understood by most dairymen. Too often, however, the farmer selling cream fails to realize that there would be a corresponding improvement in his cream if it were cooled promptly after separating. The most efficient cooling can be obtained by use of a surface cooler, over which the cream is passed in a thin film, while water is circulated through the inside. Ordinarily the volume of cream is insufficient to justify the use of such a cooler. In that case it should be put in a tall, cylindrical can of the shotgun type and set in a cooler until thoroughly cooled.

Study in Honey Color Problems

Three Government Bureaus at Washington Examine Over 450 Samples.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Problems involved in the commercial handling of honey have led to a series of studies in which two other bureaus in the United States Department of Agriculture have co-operated with the bureau of entomology, which maintains a special bee-culture laboratory at Somerset, Md.

Work on color grading of honey, which has been carried on recently by this laboratory in co-operation with the office of grades and standards of the bureau of agricultural economics, has been completed. More than 450 samples of typical honeys have been examined for light transmission by the spectrophotometer. This is the most extensive study of colors of honeys ever undertaken.

Suitable Color Holders.

It has been difficult to devise suitable color holders for the color grades which have the proper opacity and are color permanent in solutions. When models for these grades have been devised, duplicate graders will be deposited with the several inspection offices of the bureau of agricultural economics, and directions will be issued for the manufacture of graders for the trade. It is hoped that this will reduce the number of controversies between buyers and sellers of honey as to its proper color.

Coloring Materials.

The work on the coloring materials in honeys of various types, undertaken by the bureau of entomology in co-operation with the carbohydrate laboratory of the bureau of chemistry, has now reached the stage when it is possible to undertake routine analyses of the samples of honeys from different plant sources collected for the purpose. Five plant pigments have been isolated from honeys examined, occurring in varying proportions in different honeys. The economic purpose of this work is to determine whether there is any reliable correlation between the color grade of honey and its suitability as winter stores for bees in long confinement. Determinations are also being made of honey dextrins.

Area Plan of Wiping Out Dread Disease of Cattle

In the interests of improved live stock throughout the surrounding country, the First National bank of Petersburg, N. D., is not only actively supporting the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign, but is aiding in financing it. An officer of the bank, in a recent letter to the United States Department of Agriculture, states that there are now over 60 pure bred sires in the immediate vicinity, most of them shipped in by the bank. In addition the bank has arranged to ship in 13 carloads of breeding ewes from the West to place among its customers, and along with the ewes there will be distributed pure bred rams of four leading breeds.

The relatively low price at which pure bred live stock is now available has encouraged officers of the bank in their activity, thus laying the foundation for herds and flocks of good quality that will be valuable assets to the community later.

Wheat After Soy Beans Particularly Desirable

The idea seems general that a soybean hay crop removed from a piece of land leaves it in particularly desirable shape for wheat sowing as far as fertility is concerned. Such is not the case. When soy beans are removed as hay there has been, practically speaking, no fertility added to the soil by the legume while, on the other hand, both phosphorus and potash have been removed. Wheat on land from which soy beans have been removed as hay will respond to a 2-12-6 fertilizer in a very satisfactory manner and some such fertilizer should be used. Only by turning under the beans is there any appreciable addition of nitrogen to the soil and wheat will always respond to a small amount of nitrogen when following soy-bean hay.

Commercial Horses Have High Advertising Value

While dealers are complaining that there are not enough good heavy draft horses to go around, surveys made by the Horse Association of America show that the quality of commercial horses is improving. Competition in trucking has brought out most forcibly the fact that a good horse will render better service, last longer, and have a much higher turnover value than a cheaper one. And furthermore, commercial concerns have learned that good horses have a high advertising value.

European Corn Borer Is Increasing Infestation

Considerable increase in the degree of infestation by the European corn borer in Ohio has been noted during the past month in the infested territory, states a report to the United States Department of Agriculture. One field has been observed which yielded as high as 17 per cent of the stalks infested. No definite indication has yet been found that the insect will be two-brooded this season under Ohio conditions.

Mexican Bean Beetle Continues to Spread

Report Infestation in Three More Ohio Counties.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

From three more counties in south-central Ohio—Ross, Jackson and Gallia—reports have been received of Mexican bean beetle infestation, in addition to other counties previously reported to the United States Department of Agriculture. In some instances the insect has damaged the foliage of beans considerably. In Thomas county, Georgia, the Mexican bean beetle is now known to cover at least 250 square miles. Last year in this county the insect covered only 16 square miles.

A special field agent in Mexico is making frequent shipments of a tachinid parasite of the immature stages of the Mexican bean beetle to the Birmingham laboratory and to the Estancia (N. M.) laboratory. Several hundred parasites have been received at each place. Control of the insect by spraying with magnesium arsenate has been successfully demonstrated in practical field tests on over a hundred acres of beans at Newport, Tenn. Good control has also been obtained by several truck growers about Chattanooga, Tenn., co-operating with the Mexican bean beetle laboratory.

Two Roads Around World in Modern City Streets

If the modern paved streets of 290 leading American cities which, in the first national census of city paving ever made in this country, have reported officially their paving yardages this year to the Asphalt association, New York, were merged into a single great highway 18 feet wide that highway would more than twice encircle the globe. The survey, the results of which have just been announced, shows that, with an average of 18 feet of width, there are 56,974.8 miles of paved streets in American cities of 10,000 or more population. This mileage by far exceeds that of every other country in the world.

These 290 cities, which include all but three of the cities of 10,000 or more population and which comprise 65.8 per cent of the 53,898,385 urban population of the United States, report a total of 601,653,547 square yards of pavement.

Plan for Feeding Mash to Hens in Self-Feeder

Just putting out a self-feeder or a trough of good mash is not enough. Most hens like the grain better than the mash, and if allowed too much grain will not eat enough mash.

For hot weather eggs, hens ought to eat, by weight, fully as much mash per day as grain. (This is one of the big secrets of high production.) Make them do this. Keep down the grain. Do not feed grain at noon. Make the morning feed of grain very light, or omit it entirely. Put extra mash out in troughs under the trees, where the hens stay during the day. Have water close to the mash.

Green Feeds in Winter Needed by Laying Hens

During the winter months it is often something of a problem to keep any green feed before a laying flock, especially the hens to be used for settings next spring, or for heavy egg production. Either fresh buttermilk or skim milk takes the place of green feed to some extent, but even so, many poultrymen use sprouted oats, or some other such green food, to get good results.

Don't Delay in Buying Poultry-Breeding Stock

Don't wait until the last minute to buy males for your poultry breeding pens. If you do, the best will be gone and you'll have to take what's left. A breeder sells by process of elimination, disposing of the best first. So the earlier you buy, the better will be the stock you get.

Plow Under Legumes for Green Manure Past Year

Over 652,000 acres of legumes were plowed under for green manure in 1922 by farmers following the advice of agricultural extension workers on methods of building up soil fertility, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture.

MYSTERY DIAMOND IS SOLD

Stone Weighing 44 Carats Carried to England at Time of Bolshevik Revolt Changes Hands.

Carried to England from Russia at the time of the Bolshevist revolution the mystery diamond known as the "Princess Mary" has at last changed hands, the purchaser being a resident in the north of England. The price paid has not been divulged, but its late owner, Gordon Nathan, last year withdrew the diamond from auction, as the highest bid did not reach $10,000.

The diamond is a stone of yellow tint, with a Maltese cross on the back, and was named the "Princess Mary" because before her wedding a proposal was made to present the stone to her. It weighs 44 carats and is thus almost as large as the famous Hope diamond Mr. Nathan thinks the value of the stone will appreciate.

PRISON SHAPED LIKE EAR

Tyrant of Syracuse Constructed Cave So That He Could Hear Conversations of Suspects.

The Ear of Dionysius was the name given to a celebrated cavern near Syracuse in Sicily, said to have been constructed by Dionysius the Elder, tyrant of Syracuse, and used by him as a prison for suspected persons. This cave was 250 feet long and 80 feet high. It was fashioned in the shape of a human ear, and was so constructed that the faintest sounds were conveyed from all parts to a central chamber, corresponding to the tympanum or drum of the ear. There this tyrant secreted himself, sometimes, it is said, for days, and listened to the conversations of the unfortunates imprisoned within.

The workmen who built the dungeon were put to death to prevent them from divulging the use to which it was put. A whisper at one end could be distinctly heard at the other, by putting one's ear close to the rock, while the tearing of paper sounded like a series of explosions.—Detroit News.

You woke up this morning with a pain in your chest and a feeling of tightness and wondered if you might have taken a severe cold. Then you looked for a bottle of liniment and rubbed till the skin was blistered and wondered why you didn't get any better.

Well, the liniment couldn't get at the seat of the trouble, which was inside. You have a deep-seated cold and probably are threatened with pneumonia or pleurisy. You have got to get something inside of you—right into your circulation to reach the inflammation that is going to become congested if you don't hurry up and stop it.

Cheney's Expectorant goes right to the spot—dispels the inflammation, soothes the congested tissues and opens up all the air passages and makes breathing easy. The pain will disappear and you will feel easy in no time. You had better keep a bottle in the house for use in emergency.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Great Britain Is Disturbed by Information That Germany Is Arming for War.

JOHNSON'S KEYNOTE SPEECH

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GREAT Britain is just realizing the truth of what France has been asserting for months, namely, that Germany is rapidly and systematically preparing for a war of revenge. The British government, press and public are viewing the situation with considerable alarm. Seemingly authentic reports state that since October, 1922, three months before the occupation of the Ruhr, the Germans have been recruiting, training and rearming large numbers of men far in excess of the stipulations of the Versailles treaty. France is informed that Germany already has enough cannon to equip from forty to sixty divisions, and that her factories are working overtime turning out more armaments. For a long time the Berlin government has kept the allies from checking up on the strength of the German forces, and the allied military commission has been unable to function. A Reuter's dispatch says:

"British officials, however, feel that Germany is not able at present to arm the large number of men she is training, in the event of mobilization, with the necessary artillery, owing to the French being in possession of her principal industrial and munitions area in the Ruhr."

It may well be that the rest of the world will yet admit that the French occupation of the Ruhr was wise, expedient and justified.

It has just been revealed that the Germans on Jan. 10 arrested a French captain ten yards beyond the Swiss-German frontier on charges of espionage, and Berlin has determined to put him on trial in Leipzig next January. The French are arresting Germans as hostages.

FOR the time being the German government is in the hands of the various nationalistic parties, and the Socialists and Communists are in eclipse. President Ebert first gave the vacant chancellorship to Dr. Heinrich Albert, whom Americans remember as the obnoxious chief of propaganda connected with the German embassy in Washington during the early years of the war. It was evident he was to hold the place only until Stresemann could return, and he found it impossible to form a ministry that would be acceptable. Ebert tentatively decided to dissolve the reichstag, but changed his mind and appointed Adam Stegerwald chancellor. This former premier of Prussia began to get together a cabinet based on a coalition of all the right wing parties, but he, too, failed, and the job was given to Dr. Wilhelm Marx, leader of the Catholic party and national head of the Catholic School association. Dr. Stresemann agreed to take the portfolio of foreign minister and the new cabinet was to be backed by a coalition of the Catholics, the German People's party and the Bavarian People's party, with the Socialists promising benevolent neutrality.

It was predicted that the new government would follow rather closely the foreign and finance policies of Stresemann and would treat the Communists and Socialists with severity. Already General von Seeckt had ordered the Communist organizations in Germany to disband. Longer hours of work will be instituted and the industrial magnates will be helped to reopen their plants in unoccupied Germany.

Berlin's Communists, under alleged orders from Moscow, undertook to hold "hunger demonstrations" in several parts of the city, and even tried to build barricades just back of Kaiser William's old palace. The police attacked them in force, with tanks, armored cars and machine guns, and soon put them to rout.

Official announcement is made in Warsaw that the Polish government has protested to Germany against the return of the former crown prince and also against the stopping of the activities of the allied military control commission, asserting that Poland's security is threatened.

FRANCE and her allies are disputing over the disposition of the payments to be made under the recent Franco-German industrial accord. The factory and mine owners wish all payments in kind and taxes collected to be applied to the account of Germany with the reparations commission. The French insist that the net receipts shall be handed to the commission only after the costs of the forces of occupation in the Ruhr have been deducted. The British and Italians assert all payments must go to the commission for apportionment among the allies, and they expected that America would take the same view since she has been promised $25,000,000 for the cost of the army of occupation at Coblenz.

Belgium, having demanded in vain that Germany pay an indemnity for the murder of a Belgian officer last year, seized a lot of railway cars and engines to make up the amount asked; but Berlin had more important things to worry about. It is said the Belgian government hopes to take home most of its occupation troops within a few weeks.

In some parts of the Ruhr last week there were what were called hunger riots, but authentic reports from the region show there is no shortage of food there to excuse them. Not only are the crops in the Ruhr the best since 1912, but food is being shipped into the Ruhr at the rate of about a thousand carloads a day. Figures compiled mainly from German statistics show that Germany is the only country in the world where food prices, figured on a gold basis, are still lower than before the war.

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON actually launched his pre-convention campaign last week in Chicago, where, speaking at a dinner of real estate men, he laid down his main planks. He declared himself in favor of a soldiers' bonus act because it was a solemn pledge which must be kept. He held that if the computations of the Treasury department are correct, this need not prevent the reduction of taxes advocated by Secretary Mellon. Said he:

"In round numbers 13,000,000 are paying taxes on incomes under $10,000. Only $30,000 pay on incomes exceeding $10,000. By reducing in the manner that has been suggested the taxes of these 13,000,000 we would reduce the government's revenue $140,000,000. There is, according to figures of the secretary of the treasury, a surplus of $300,000,000. Upon the basis of every computation this surplus is sufficient to justify the tax reduction immediately to the 13,000,000 of our people most needing it and to pay also the money required under the adjusted compensation act."

Lower freight rates, extension of cooperative marketing and development of waterways were suggested by the senator as aids to agriculture that could be effected.

Coming to the subject of foreign relations, the senator declared his opposition to any policy that would commit this country to "undisclosed European adventures." He alluded to the proposal for a reparations conference, made by the national government, as "a transparent subterfuge contrived by gentlemen who, having notoriously tried and having notoriously failed, to get us into the politics of Europe directly through the League of Nations now wish to get us into the politics of Europe through the indirect road of a participation in European economic affairs in a conference called by governments and consisting of the appointees of governments.

"There are alternative policies. The one is intervention in Europe to save Europe and bring peace and order—an intervention dictated by conferences in which we are but one of many. The other policy is our own, frankly and openly avowed, doing justice to all, wrong to none, neither asking nor receiving benefits or profit, retaining our independence of action uninfluenced by secret conference, undirected by a majority of foreigners; in short, an American policy."

ILLINOIS Democrats are grooming a favorite son for whom they may capture the state delegation against Al Smith, McAdoo or any other candidate. He is Justice Floyd E. Thompson of the state Supreme court, who is held in high esteem. He is only thirty-six years old. George E. Brennan, leader of the Democratic party in Illinois, says of Justice Thompson: "He is a man of marked ability and high character. His record is a remarkable one, and his friends consider him presidential timber beyond a doubt. If Illinois is to enter a native son in the presidential race, Justice Thompson is entitled to serious consideration."

CONGRESSMAN GEORGE H. TINKHAM of Massachusetts, Republican and one of the most consistent foes of the prohibition amendment and the Volstead act, is ready to introduce in congress a resolution calling for an investigation of the activities of the Anti-Saloon league, especially in New York and Missouri. In a statement issued by Mr. Tinkham last week he asserted that "vast sums of money have been used to influence public opinion in various ways, now entirely unsuspected by the American people, directly to control elections" and "to pay professional organizers and lobbyists."

He also said the Anti-Saloon league and some of its state departments and subsidiaries have "openly and flagrantly violated the national campaign contributions law and the corrupt practices laws of several and certain of the states."

TWO coast guard cutters shelled and captured the schooner Tomako, one of the most notorious of the rum-running vessels, off the New Jersey coast, and in her hold was found William McCoy, called by the government agents the "rum smuggling king." He had pockets full of money and defiantly asserted that he and the schooner were within their rights, being taken beyond the three-mile limit. The Tomako was flying the British flag and her seizure is condemned by the London press as illegal, high-handed and unjustified and as having "only too much in common with the fanaticism and fury which have accompanied the prohibition movement in the United States."

UP IN Ottawa a conference between the United States and Canada was held last week for the purpose of devising means to stop the smuggling of liquor from the Dominion into this country. The details of the meeting were kept secret but it was asserted that the Canadian cabinet was in full sympathy with the requests and proposals of the United States. However, some of the things suggested are so far reaching that parliament will have to deal with them. It is understood that the United States is asking the refusal by Canada of clearance papers to liquor-laden vessels, the right of search on the lakes, and extradition of bootleggers.

REPRESENTATIVES of anthracite consuming states met at Harrisburg, Pa., on the call of Governor Pinchot, considered his plan for regulation of the industry through a joint commission to be formed under a compact of the states, and adjourned without action except to call on Pennsylvania to start things by repealing its coal tax and passing remedial legislation. Governor Silzer of New Jersey was the severest critic of the Pinchot plan.

EDWIN P. MORROW, who retires from the governorship of Kentucky in December, will then succeed R. M. Barton on the railroad labor board, serving as a member of the public group. Mr. Morrow was offered the place last spring but asked to be permitted to serve out his term as governor, so Mr. Barton was given a recess appointment by President Harding.

FRANCE is considerably exercised over the reported Italo-Spanish understanding by which, it is supposed, Italy aims at supremacy in the Mediterranean. A counter agreement between France and Greece is suggested, and the attention of the United States is called to the alleged fact that Spain is working for an influence over Latin America that would be a virtual defiance of the Monroe doctrine.

BIG ORCHARD IN VERMONT

Privately-Owned One at Bennington Occupies 3,600 Acres and Has 65,000 Trees.

Vermont lays claim to the largest privately-owned orchard in this country. It is located at Bennington, being the property of Edward H. Everett of Old Bennington. In this planting there are more than 50,000 apple trees and 15,000 trees, partly of pear, plum, quince and cherry.

The area occupies more than 3,600 acres of land at the base and on the eastern slope of Mount Anthony, and extends over a large portion of Carpenter hill. It is understood that the ultimate goal is 100,000 fruit trees. Some of the rows of trees in this orchard are almost a mile long.

The orchard trees are set out in large divisions and the divisions are subdivided into blocks lettered after the alphabet. Some of the blocks are so numerous that the manager has had to double back on the alphabet in the same division. Every row of trees is given a letter and every cross row is given a number. In this way each tree has its specific identification.

Different blocks in the orchard are insured against damage by hail, likewise against damage by fire.—Detroit News.

Restrictions of Plebeians.

Roman commoners were called Plebeians and were originally forbidden all political rights. They were for the most part poor, and not allowed to intermarry with the Patricians. They served in the army without pay, were sold into slavery for debt, and could even be cut in pieces for distribution among their creditors. Finding their conditions intolerable, the Plebeians in 495 B. C. repaired to Mons Sacer, near Rome, where they resolved to build a new city; but this step so alarmed the privileged classes that they granted to the Plebeians the right of choosing annually from their own number two magistrates, called tribunes, with power to protect them against aggression of the Patricians. After the lapse of about 200 years the disabilities of the Plebeians were almost entirely removed.

A TRIP TO THE SOLDIERS' HOME

On Sunday, Nov. 25, quite a crowd from the Baker School house and West End went down to Mt. Creek to the old time singing at the home It was most of, the crowds first trip.

Arriving about 10:30 o'clock, we went to the [illegible] where the singing was in progress. The leaders for the morning were T. J. Baker, J. A. Blankenship, J. Bice, Mr. Moore and others. The singing lasted until 12 o'clock, then we had an hour and a half for looking and walking about, after eating our lunch. We first went to the hospital, where there were several sick. After shaking hands and talking with those in there we went to the mess hall. The old men, the ones that are able, at the ringing of the bell march to the hall to eat. One can but wonder at the difference in their walk now and when they were on the battle field fighting for this land of ours. Some wear coats with but one sleeve in use, others with stiff knees or one leg and some, worse than all, blind, being led by the others. It seems to make those old men so happy for anyone to speak to them; they all seem to love children. I heard one say to a little boy "You are all young now and happy, but some day you too will be old like us." We next went to the cemetery. The white tombs are sad reminders of how these dear old soldiers are going to join their comrades and receive their rewards. The graves are in rows; all in one row that were made each year from 1912 to 1923. One grave was made last Friday. One soldier died early Sunday morning. One soldier told us therg was one buried every ten days; said there were only [illegible] as though they would be here to see many more suns rise and set. But they are well taken care of. The head nurse seems to be so good to them. I know it is no easy task to wait on and attend to the wants of these old men for some are so helpless and seem childish. [illegible] Miss Belle George; said she [illegible] We told him Miss Belle was [illegible] "Well, I havn't heard from her in a long time. I thought she was not living." These old men like to joke each other. We were told that they very often fall out with each [illegible] almost fight.

The singing in the afternoon was [illegible] The same leaders excepting Mr. Lewis Henderson. Those songs of old [illegible] to suit the soldiers. Some of them would join with their feeble [illegible]

Among those that went from Baker [illegible] were T. J. Baker, J. E. [illegible] Ed Culpepper, Bud Foshee, John Baker and wife, Bud Littlejohn and family, Mr. York and family, Mrs. Dunlap, Jim and Nancy; Billie Burke and sister, Mrs. Callie Hayes and daughter, Luther Williams, Fannie Vance. From West End: J. Z. Mims and family, Mrs. Bud Jones and S. A., Mr. Vance and wife, Mrs. Scroggins and others from Clanton. Everyone arrived home tired but not regretting the trip at all.

WHAT DO WE CARE?

Our race can not possibly have any concern with what the atoms of matter, out of which our earth is formed, were doing in the eternal past [illegible] man, as we know him, took charge. The Bible carries us back 7000 years to Adam, the first man, and Eve, the first woman of our race. We believe every word of the Bible account of creation just as it is written down, but before that time this old earth may have been made over a dozen times and as many different races have lived out their existence here. That does not conflict with the scriptural account at all.

Our history is complete back to the first man of our race. [illegible]

All dining cars operate at a loss-For your Comfort

The next time you order a meal in any dining-car, look carefully over the prices and compare them with what you would have to pay for the same meal in any first-class restaurant. Item for item, you will find that dining-car prices are as low as, or lower than, you would pay for the same quality of food and service elsewhere.

In this connection it is interesting to know that no railroad derives sufficient revenue out of its dining-cars to meet the cost of their operation. The average revenue per meal on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, for the year 1922, was $1.15; whereas, the average cost per meal, including provisions, pay roll, linen, china, glassware, silver, fuel, laundry, accomodations for crew, repairs and smaller items such as printing, cleaning, lighting, etc., totaled $1.59 or 44c more per meal than the revenue derived.

All American railroads conduct their dining-car services for your convenience and comfort entirely, in order that you may save time in travel and be afforded every accommodation while en route.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has earned a reputation for the superiority of its dining-car service, and the fairness of its prices.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 3 CLANTON, ALABAMA, DECEMBER 13, 1923. NUMBER 14

ONE CHRISTMAS HAS GONE WRONG

Izzy Einstein has not got a thing in the world on Sheriff Littlejohn and his keen nosed deputies when the atmosphere begins to be laden with odors that remind of the days when Volstead burst into the limelight and snuffed out the joy in the lives of so many hard boiled souses.

The wind veered around to west by northwest the other day and pretty soon this bunch of sleuths began to scent the zephyrs like well trained bird dogs on a windy field.

In just no time at all their flivver disappeared in a cloud of mud and smoke as they breasted the breeze.

Way out close to the Bibb county line a woman went out hurriedly in the back yard and emptied a gallon jug. Right here the keen nosed sleuths came to a dead point. An investigation flushed a single bird, but that did not satisfying them. It looked like a scattered covey to them, so they began to circle and scent the breeze. Tom himself located the real covey. They were bored down in a deep stump hole and when flushed there were 25-gallon jugs, one 10-gallon keg and three 3-gallon jugs of the real sparkling dew of the mountains.

Righ. here was where one misguided fellow lost his Xmas cash and many more lost their Xmas jug.

A still was destroyed on this trip and one Ross Ford came back to inspect the inside of the county bastile.

Just as we said at first, Izzy Einstein is a mere piker when compared to Sheriff Littlejohn and his cohorts.

Quit making it, boys, for they'll scent you out if you go down in the well.

LIKE MOTHER USED TO MAKE

Mr. Tom Kemp is one of the younger men but he has not forgotten some of the famous arts of our fathers.

He sent us a package of real sausage last Saturday morning, the very aroma of which brought to us visions of the old smoke house back on our father's farm and the delicious viands that used to grace the table in "hog killing" time.

The making of real sausage is almost a lost art, but Mr. Kemp has remained faithful to the traditions of other days and has in no wise forgotten the process of making the old time delicacy to perfection.

We extend to him our grateful thanks for the treat as well as for the demonstration to us that our memories of old time sausage were not overdrawn. These proved that real sausage are the "piece de la resistance" on any bill of fare.

TRUE TO FORM

President Coolidge has demonstrated his fitness for, and loyalty to the G. O. P. in the same time honored way of his predecessors.

Those colored delegates from the south look good to him with a nominating convention just around the corner.

HIGHWAY MASS MEETING HELD

Every Beat in the County Except Beat 13 Was Represented. The Entire State Highway Commission Was Present.

We [illegible] assembled at the court house than were present Saturday at the Highway Mass Meeting, but we have never seen a more representative body of Chilton citizens nor one more widely scattered over the county than those who met Saturday to listen to what the State Commissioners had to say on the subject of road building.

The full board of County Commissioners were present in their official capacity and acted favorably on the resolutions that were submitted by the Highway Board, authorizing the state to go forward and contract good roads in the various counties without delaying the work waiting on the slow process of Federal aid.

Chairman John Rogers of the State Highway Commission was the first speaker to take the floor.

He impressed us as being the right man in the right place as he proceeded, in a clear, deliberate and straight forward manner to go into the inside details of the plan of building Federal aid roads. He explained how our road bonds are sold, and, most important of all, he explained how the principal and interest on these bonds is paid and why it is legally impossible to ever use one penny of the regular state tax money in liquidating any part of them.

He also told us why and how it was that several counties in the state have already had one or more Federal aid road projects and why other counties have had none. These fortunate counties were financially able to match the Federal aid money on their own hook, and did so, before the state bond issue was finally straightened out so the state could cover the amount. Had these counties not been able to do this, Alabama would have lost utterly her apportionment of the first Federal appropriation that was made. If it could not have been matched in Alabama, our quota of this first road money put out by the government would have automatically returned back into the Federal road fund and been divided up among all of the states again.

This arrangement not having been generally known to the people at large has caused much bitter criticism of the road Commission in the past and we are glad of the opportunity of being able to put many of our readers right on this matter, for we too, have been feeling like a grave injustice was being perpetrated by some one.

The intention of the Road Commission now is to proceed, with the use of state funds alone, to build first class graded and graveled roads from county seat to county seat, making the road bed, the culverts and the bridges permanent and giving our people one present service. At the same time, they will continue to match each Federal appropriation, as it becomes available and build Federal aid trunk lines through the state.

The reason of this is that the Federal appropriation of each year, when matched by the state, dollar for dollar, would only finance the construction of about 3 miles of road to the county of such roads as the Federal government requires. In other words, the Federal aid plan is too slow and too expensive to ever furnish the present generation in Alabama with anything approaching an adequate road system.

All of this valuable information and a great deal more, was given out by Chairman Rogers in his splendid address. We wish every citizen of Chilton county had listened to his complete summing up, and explanation of, the much misunderstood highway situation. It would have done a great deal of good

Associate member, Scruggs, of the State Commission, being present, was also called upon for a talk.

Mr. Scruggs seems to be more of a technical road building engineer than he is a public speaker. He endorsed all of the facts brought out by Mr. Rogers and then proceeded to go into some of the technical difficulties and delays in road building.

He did not seem to be absolutely positive in regard to what finale our decision of the B & M highway was in but upon direct inquiry, he gave it as his opinion that the route from here to the Shelby line was definitely settled and that it will go up on the east side of the railroad. He thinks that survey has been finally adopted by the Federal engineers and that it will probably be in a shape to advertise for bids within the next 60 days. He was assured by Judge Reynolds and by the board of county commissioners, that they stand ready, at any time, to secure the right of way immediately when they were furnished with the necessary information as to where they were to secure the right of way. They told him there would be no delay, on their account, in letting the contract for the right of way would be ready.

State Commissioner Suttle arrived on the scene rather late, but he was privileged on to tell us something.

He said he was not a public speaker and that appearing before the public was the most disagreeable part of his job. He heartily endorsed the idea of independent road building by the state and gave it as his opinion that in that way only could the present generation hope to see Alabama get out of the mud

Our worthy mayor, Dr. V. J. Grace, the livest good road wire in this section, made a few remarks next. He shot point blank at the bulls eye and drove the cross every fire. He was not interested so much in the style and technique of road construction as he was in wanting to know when Chilton county was going to hear less and see more of this good road proposition. He told the Commission he did not blame them much for being a little tardy in giving us a road. Said we deserved it because we had never gone after it.

The Doctor made some telling points and drove them home with a sarcastic wit that was inimitable. The Mayor knows what he wants when he wants it.

Judge Reynolds and the county commissioners then proceeded to go into the proposed vehicle tax question. Mr. F. A. Gulledge moved and spoke to the proposal of putting a graded tax "on everything that had a wheel on it." This provoked a heated and at times, an amusing discussion but the motion was lost by a big vote.

The road tax matters also produced a good deal of discussion, but we think the Board of Commissioners stood pat on a lumber, log or tie wagon and a general tax, as well as a $5.50 road tax or 7 10-hour days work.

EXTENSION GROUPS MET LAST SATURDAY

On last Saturday the University Extension class under Dr. E. G. Howe and the Jacksonville Extension group under Miss Turner met at the county high school. There is much interest being manifested in these courses. They offer the teachers a chance to get credit toward a degree or toward a higher degre. There are seven in the University group who are taking credit toward a Master of Arts degree.

The Normal courses are on methods of teaching, while the University class is studying the World war and the period immediately following.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for the many acts of kindness and love tendered us through the sickness and death of our dear father, L. W. Henley. May the richest blessings of God lighten their pathway through life is the prayer of

THE CHILDREN.

IN BAD HEALTH

A host of friends who know and appreciate Mr. H. A. J. Harris, will be saddened to learn that his health is not so good as we could wish.

He had two quite serious attacks last week, but we are glad to state that he is getting out again now though still quite feeble.

Mr. Harris has been a citizen of Chilton county for more than 30 years and has made many friends here.

BOX SUPPER

There will be a box supper given at Providence School House (Beat 10) [illegible] night, December 15th. Proceeds for benefit of school. Cake to the prettiest box (?) Good time for all.

HAS RETURNED

Mr. M. Laude, the popular manager of the "Leader" department Store, has just returned from an extended trip to the northern and western markets where he purchased an enormous stock of brand new merchandise to replace the one recently consumed by fire.

The Leader will be located for the present at the present stand, next to the railroad and for a long time to come as the "Candy Store."

Mr. Laude will move his new stock back to his original stand about January 1, or as soon as the workmen can complete the work of replacing the havoc done by the fire.

LIKE IT USED TO BE

Mr. W. J. Little of Route 6 was in to see us Monday and among other interesting things he gave us a few cotton memories of other days that are not only interesting but point a very important moral today.

He has the receipts for 2 bales of cotton he sold in 1898 that weighed right at 1000 pounds together and brought him less than $40 for the two. He also sold another bale that year for 3.85 per pound.

Now that was back in the days when a surplus of something like 10,000,000 bales was carried over from year to year.

Plant smaller crops of cotton and keep the surplus always at the vanishing point if you want to get a good price and make money out of cotton.

PRESS GIVES THE FACTS

The country weekly and small city daily give the people the facts.

The institution of the freedom of the press is so firmly entrenched in this country that any attempt to curtail it instantly arouses public resentment.

People demand facts; facts can be given only through a free and untrammeled press.

No better recognition of this can be found than in the fact that, when a dictator [illegible] any part of the world, his first action is to muzzle the press.

No dictator can progress without the aid of censorship of the press and of news dispatches.

If you want to buy your Christmas Goods right, see Upchurch Drug Co.

CHRISTMAS IS NEARLY HERE

One need not refer to the calendar to know that Christmas is drawing near.

The occasional clandestine flight of a sky rocket, the lonely crash of a fire cracker and the graceful soaring of Roman candle missles in the evening [illegible] tell their own story—Christmas is almost at hand

Well, let's make it a happy, but a sane Christmas. Put out all of your grouch, make friends with all of your enemies—if you can—and get your system ready to give out all of the Christmas cheer that you can, not only in money but in kindness and sympathy to the unfortunate and down hearted

This should be a day of gladness, but not of rowdiness and madness. We can not do homage to, nor show honor, to the One in whose memory we observe the day, by rowdiness and drunkeness.

Think it over now in time and make your arrangement to observe Christmas in a glorious blaze of gladness and thankfulness but not in a vile show of unseemly debauchery that is a disgrace both to God and man.

ROMANCE AND CRIME MIXED

A Former Chilton County Young Man In the Toils. Too Many Wives and "Borrowed" Car Does The Trick.

One of the most spectacular arrests that has been made in Clanton recently occurred here Monday.

A Mr. Mack Culp, who [illegible] in the Pletcher neighborhood, is the main actor in this romance in real life.

It seems that in years gone by Mack was pretty widely known [illegible] school teacher. Later, he married a young lady of Tuscaloosa and brought her back to his native heath and apparently settled down for [illegible]

Evidently a home on the [illegible] possess any poetic charmes for him, for he next got in the [illegible] doing too much writing [illegible] another man's bank check and for this freak of his deft fingers, he was awarded a term at Flat Top Atti[illegible] the mandate of the law in kind, he is next spoken of as having won him a new helpmeet which he appropriated by getting the young girl to elope with him.

After this stunt rumor has it that he duplicated this [illegible] getting another time or two, but, as he had sought new pastures [illegible] tures, his exploits were soon forgotten.

His latest performance, and the one that is doubtless destined to give him another acquaintance with the [illegible] a convict, took place right recently.

In his wanderings to and fro he found himself some 60 miles [illegible] Lakeland, in the Land of Flowers.

Here he evidently [illegible] of a fair maid from that land [illegible] shine and he put his nimble wits to work in framing up a scheme by which he could successfully carry out this latest matrimonial venture.

A new 5-passenger Stevens car looked good to him so he commandeered it, took his trusting [illegible] away to the haunts of his childhood, perhaps relying on the [illegible] native state that "Here We Rest."

Such was not to be the case, however, for soon the wires had traced him to his rendezvous and the faithful minions of the law rudely broke in on his happy repose and he, the car and the girl were escorted here to the county bastile.

He was placed in [illegible] stored in the Carter Garage and [illegible] lowed to have her liberty.

VERBENA'S ANNUAL FIDDLIN' CONVENTION

The date has been set—December 20, Thursday—just five days before Christmas. That will make a kind of a big Christmas gift of a lot of fun to fiddlers and audience. And it is a fine time for fiddlin', too—just the right time of the year to make the merriest [illegible] And Verbena intends to have the best one of the whole list this year. Verbena is proud of the big successes that the previous conventions were, and she wants to make this one a bigger, better and livelier one.

Verbena make it so? Well, say, boys! It is you fiddlers that turn the trick, isn't it? You did it last year, and the year before, and we all had a [illegible] out it, too. And you can mighty be sure that everything will be [illegible] pretty on that Thursday night before Christmas when all through the house and community there will be fiddlin'

Whenever a feller has a lot of good fiddlin' up his sleeve, you can always count on it that he is a good fellow. They are just that way. And the next best fellow to him is the one who likes fiddlin' Some folks say that these days are just as good as the old ones in every way, but when we get them out to the Fiddlers' Convention, and they hear those shuffling strains of "Old Hen Cackled," "Arkansas Traveler," "Leather Breeches," "Happy Heine," "Old Dan Tucker" and a hundred others, including the horn pipes, reels, [illegible] barn dances—well, they just try to find out more of the old times, and wish that they could bring some of them back.

It is meet that we keep alive this distinctly American folk-type of music It is not so common now as once it was. And the fiddlers' who come out and give us the opportunity of hearing this music for the first time, or of renewing our hearts in the old time melodies, are conferring a great favor on us. We are glad to have them. Prizes will be given again—liberal, big, handsome prizes, as at the Convention last year—for all varieties of stringed instrument music. Fiddles, banjos, mandolins, guitars individual or in orchestra. Verbena will furnish the prizes and the fiddlers will be Verbena's guests

Fiddlers, please write the Fiddling Committee, Verbena, Ala., that you will be there, and tell them about any other fiddlers you know.

THE BIGGEST TURNIP EVER

Mr. J. R. Short of Maplesville, Route 2, was in our office Tuesday and had with him the two largest purple top turnips that we ever met in our checkered career

They were grown on ordinary upland Chilton dirt and one of them weighed full 9 pounds and the other only a little less.

That kind are all right provided you lived near a saw mill where you could have them cut down to ordinary pot size. It would take a whole hog to furnish pork for one of these mammoth turnip

Mr. D. M. Martin of the Maplesville vicinity was in the city Saturday Sorry to say that he was rather under the weather physically.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Eptiomized Form.

Furniture for the new annex to the Huntsville post office, as well as new furniture for the old work room, will be shipped from Washington early in January, according to information received by Postmaster S. H. Murphy from the postal department. There are to be further improvements made in the building, a contract having been let for the construction of storm doors at the main entrances, and it is declared that when all improvements now set in motion are finished this office will be one of the most conveniently equipped of any its size in the S[illegible].

The Alabama Public Service Commission has received notification from the interstate commerce commission of an application for a certificate of convenience and necessity made to the national commission by the Muscle Shoals, Birmingham and Pensacola [illegible] for construction of a railroad from Russ[illegible]brough in Wilcox county, to Jasper. The communication, addressed to the [illegible] invited any representations which the state desired to make relative to the application and a copy of which was enclosed.

Finding of the body of George Whitehurst, 60, floating in Mobile river about nine miles north of Mobile ended the mystery of the latter's disappearance on November 25, from his work as bridge tender on the Louisville and Nashville railroad bridge. There was a peculiar coincidence in connection with the finding of the body of Whitehurst. Robert Edwards, who was hunting for the body of his brother, Ellis Edwards, found the body of the missing bridge tender. Edwards was drowned near there recently.

Cleo Childress of near Eva is the champion corn grower among the Boys' Club of Morgan County, according to an announcement by J. C. Ford, county farm agent. Childress was credited with having raised more than 112 bushels of corn on one acre of ground at a cost of 40 cents a bushel. He used eight loads of stable fertilizer, 1,200 pounds of acid phosphate, 400 pounds of nitrate of soda and 100 pounds or kainit.

As the weather will permit J. C. Ford, Morgan county farm agent, is holding organization meetings throughout the county among the boys and girls on the farm, the objects of such effort being to arouse interest and inspire effort among the young people in better and more poultry, more pigs, more corn and more cotton. It is the purpose of Mr. Ford to establish at least 10 farm clubs this winter.

Gadsden's claim for the location of the Alabama School of Trades and Industries will be presented by J. C. Inzer. Louis Loveman and A. C. Reich, who were named a special committee for that purpose by the Gadsden Chamber of Commerce. They were instructed to offer such inducement as they may see fit, with assurance that the chamber and business community would stand behind them.

Leon Layfield, 17, of Pritchard, has been charged with the murder of Melvin Brantley, 19, whose body with eight bullet holes in the head, was found in a marsh east of the Louisville and Nashville railroad tracks, north of Chickasaw Bogue bridge.

C. Ernest Jones, state senator for Barbour county, was acquitted in federal court of having used the mails to defraud. The jury in the case was out less than two hours.

The farmers of Madison county are [illegible] the growing of wheat, a crop which they are being advised to devote more acreage to in the future.

[illegible] are [illegible] Masons in Alabama according to a statement by Grand Master J. F. Spearman.

More than four times as much business is being done by the Jefferson county probate office as was done five years ago, Probate JJudge J [illegible] says.

The Tennessee, Alabama & Georgia railroad has started condemnation proceedings to secure right-of-way across the city of Gadsden for its extension to Margaret, in St. Clair county, where it will connect with other roads into Birmingham.

The building committee for Weenona Hanson Hall, the new dormitory to be erected at Woman's College for accommodation of 100 additional students are making plans for immediate erection of the building. Ground will be broken for the new dormitory before the Christmas holidays and work will be pushed to completion for the 1924 college [illegible].

Judge Pelham Algee, in the circuit court at Talladega, ruled that convictions of a lawyer in the federal courts did not disbar him from parctice in the state courts. The opinion was delivered as the outcome of the disbarment proceedings instituted against D. Henry Riddle some time ago, convicted in the federal courts of using the mails to defraud.

Probate Judge Sam High, of Asheville, is authority for the statement that the St. Clair County part of the Birmingham-Gadsden Highway will be thrown open to traffic June 1 1924. He declares that the road will be completed by that time and that it will be one of the best in the state. It will be the last link in a paved road between Gadsden and Birmingham.

Alabama City is going out after industries and is prepared to offer them a number of inducements, the latest being exemption from the payment of provilege tax. The city council has passed resolutions promising to exempt every factory locating within the corporate limits from paying license for a period of five years.

C. E. Dennis, the water cress magnate of North Alabama, has begun demolishing the old skinner building on Clinton and Green streets in Huntsville and will erect a large brick building which will be especially adapted a sa shipping headquarters for his business, which is gathering water cress and shipping it to all parts of the United States.

Great activity in prohibition law enforcement during the month of November, with 190 arrests and destruction of 123 stills over the state, was noted in the monthly report of Major T. K. McAdory, chief of the state law enforcement department, submitted to Gov. William W. Brandon.

Clarke county farmers are rapidly becoming enthusiastic about winter legumes. Their present enthusiasm is due to a series of six winter legume demonstrations conducted during last year under the direction of E. O. Calhoun, county demonstration agent, and the Clarke county farm bureau.

The state sureties commission at the state capitol received an application from the Albany-Decatur Oil and Gas Company for cancellation of its permit to sell stock, and the discharge of the company. The concern was organized to drill for oil, and was authorized to sell 2,894 shares of stock at $25 each some time ago.

Interest amounting to $32,760 annually has been saved by the state of Alabama through investment of the highway sinking fund in state good road bonds, as provided by recent act of the legislature, according to State Treasurer George W. Ellis.

Birmingham shippers were saved $3,923 in errors discovered and 514 freight claims were paid, representing $7,827, through the November activities of the Birmingham Traffic Association, according to report of Charles E. Jones, secretary of the organization.

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 16

WORLD-WIDE MISSIONS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:9-15; 28:30, 31; Rom. 15:18-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—Rom. 1:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Preaching by a Riverside.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Crosses the Sea.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul's Ambition.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul's Aim and Methods.

The Gospel having broken the confines of the Jewish city and country, the middle wall of partition being aboilshed, the time came for it to leap across the Aegean sea and begin its conquest of another continent. Christianity thus ceased to be an oriental religion and through the centuries has been mainly occidental.

I. Call to Macedonia (Acts 16:9-11).

1. The Vision (v. 9). Being hemmed in on all sides, a vision was given to Paul of a man of Macedonia pleading for help. This made plain to him the closed doors about him. The Spirit as definitely leads in the closing of some doors as in the opening of others. In finding the divine will we should look both ways. Before there can be any great forward movement there must be a vision. The great achievements of men are the products of visions.

2. The Advance (vv. 10, 11). As soon as the divine way was known they moved forward therein. Visions must be quickly translated into aggressive actions or else they are blotted from our skies. They neither questioned the wisdom of God nor delayed action. This is characteristic of all of God's true servants. With a straight course Paul moved out of his own country to the strategic center of a new continent.

II. The First Convert in Europe (Acts 16:12-15).

The missionaries first went to Philippi and spent several days in studying conditions there. The Jewish element in this city was comparatively insignificant, so much so that they could not have a synagogue. Therefore, the devout people were accustomed to worship by the riverside. To this humble gathering Paul came and preached to the women assembled there. A certain woman from Thyatira, a proselyte, believed his message and was baptized. The work of the Lord thus had a very humble beginning, but it was destined to transform all Europe and the world. The steps in Lydia's conversion are worthy of note for they are typical.

1. Attendance at the Place of Worship (v. 13). Usually those whom God is calling are found at the place of prayer. Lydia was seeking the heavenly light. God sends many an inquirer to the prayer meeting.

2. Listening to the Preaching of the Word of God (vv. 13, 14). It is highly important that at every prayer meeting the Word of God shall be spoken, so that the inquirer after God may find the light.

3. Her Heart Was Opened by the Lord (v. 14). Only the Lord can convert a soul. It is our business to preach the Word of God and it is God's business to open the heart of the inquirer. No one is ever converted against his will.

4. She Was Baptized (v. 15). Everyone whose heart the Lord has opened desires to confess Him in baptism.

5. Her Household Believed Also (v. 15). This was as it should be. Real conversion cannot be concealed.

6. Practiced Hospitality (v. 15). Those who have experienced God's saving grace are at once disposed to have part in His work by rendering aid to His ministers.

III. Paul Preaching in Rome (Acts 28:30, 31).

Paul continued his labors in widening his testimony to the world amongst thrilling experiences. In spite of beatings, shipwrecks and imprisonments, we find him near the close of his life in the imperial capitol city. Though a prisoner he continues to preach the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the providence of God, he had liberty to preach the Gospel to all who came to him.

IV. Paul's Aim in Preaching the Gospel Was World-Wide (Rom. 15:16-21).

His heart's transcendent desire was to so preach the Gospel that the Gentiles might become obedient to the faith. In order that this might be accomplished he pushed out into unexplored regions, so that the light of the Gospel might shine into the darkness of the heathen world. May we follow his example, for there is much work to be done.

Prayer.

Bring your plans, your purposes to God's throne. Test them by praying about them. Do nothing large or new—nothing small nor old, either—for that matter—till you have asked there, in the silence of the secret place, "Lord, what wouldest Thou have me to do?"—Alexander Maclaren.

DOGS LIKE MUSIC

Howl With Pleasure at Tunes, Says Doctor.

Veterinarian Declares His Pet Liked Piano and Would Always Be on Hand for a Concert.

Why does a dog howl when he hears high-pitched music?

Is it because the notes strike against his delicate hearing apparatus with such force as to cause him pain?

Or is it because he likes the sound of music and feels the urge to join in with his own voice?

The first theory is that of a New York man. He wrote an article recently in which he sought to prove his theory. A dog fancier in Staunton, Va., was the first to take issue with the New Yorker. He was followed by a host of dog lovers in this city and in adjoining states.

Here, in part, is the article written by the New York man:

"A dog can pick up sounds which makes no impression whatever upon our ear drums.

"This, of course, means that these organs are exceptionally sensitive and it is this that leads up to the howling of dogs while certain kinds of music are being played. The high, piercing notes of the violin or cornet strike against the dog's delicate auditory apparatus with such force that they cause acute pain and he gives vent to his feelings by telling the world that he is being hurt, just as a human being would cry out if some one stuck a pin in his ear."

The New Yorker's explanation is "interesting but not convincing," says P. L. Tracy in a letter written from Staunton:

"When a dog is struck with a club or a stone we are certain he is hurt," argues Tracy. "He doesn't howl, but yelps, emitting an entirely different sound than the mournful tones he 'looses' at hearing high-pitched music.

"If the pain caused by the music on sensitive membranes is acute, why doesn't the dog yelp as he does when there is no question about the presence of acute pain, and why doesn't he run off?"

Dr. James E. Chamberlin, widely known veterinarian, was consulted.

"It is my conviction," the doctor said, "that dogs, especially thoroughbreds, highly enjoy music. I once owned a dog that would rush into the parlor of my home when anybody began playing the piano. Whenever a high-pitched note was reached he would begin 'singing.'"—Washington Herald.

Certainly a Sad Story.

This is rather a sad story, so let my gentle reader prepare to shed a silent tear. Even those who do not come under the category of "gentle" may well pause awhile and wonder on the moral.

It concerns two boxers who, after waiting months for a fight that would bring them into the limelight, each got his chance and each got beaten. After their fights they compared notes.

"Rum thing," said one. "I got a bout, and now I'm blessed if I can get about!"

"Same here," nodded the other, gloomily. "I got a round, and now, dash me, if I think I'll ever be able to get around again!"

OLD ROME'S COPS

Ancients Had Traffic Laws to Curb Speed Fiends.

Drastic Action Was Necessary Centuries Ago to Protect Pedestrians From Reckless Drivers.

Historians tell us that 19 years before our era traffic conditions in Rome and reckless driving about the city had attained such proportions that drastic laws had to be enacted to curb the scions of wealthy families to whom a fine meant no more than it does to a young man in modern New York.

Late at night these young bloods would come driving into town from the outlying inns beyond the gates where wine, women—and possibly song—were plentiful. They showed utter disregard of the narrowness of the streets and the rights of pedestrians. Collisions were frequent and often fatal. One Mark Antony, who later figured in the headlines of the day as being involved in the affairs of a foreign queen named Cleopatra, was disfigured for life by a scar received in one of these youthful escapades.

Most of us have formed a mental conception of Rome in its heyday as a city of one or at most two-story houses surrounding a group of imposing civic buildings. This impression was gathered from the familiar views of Pompeii—the only Roman city (thanks to having been buried overnight) which was found pretty much as the Romans left it. But Pompeii is no fair sample. It was to Rome what Asbury Park is to New York—a provincial city of 20,000 inhabitants and a bathing resort where middle-class Romans owned or rented houses during the hot season. The upper story of Pompeiian houses was usually built of wood, which either burned away in the conflagration or decayed beyond recognition in the 18 centuries they spent underground. Rome was no more built like that than it was built in a day.

If the streets of down town New York were originally laid out by cows those of Rome were surveyed by goat herds. As the city grew their width did not increase. Often that width was only eight feet.

The Via Sacra, the Broadway of the city, was but 24 feet wide. Consequently we read of an ordinance passed in 14 B. C. limiting the height of tenements to 70 feet, and a century or so later of another providing that no building could be built higher than 60 feet along its frontage but allowing a proportionate increase in height toward the rear. When we passed a similar ordinance here in New York some five years ago we had no notion that we were only following hoary precedent.—New York Times.

Too Close for Comfort.

A number of sportsmen were relating their most thrilling experiences.

"I've just returned from hunting in the Rockies," said one. "One day I struck the trail of a bear and I followed it for hours before giving it up."

"What made you quit," said one of his audience, "after putting in all that amount of work?"

"Well, to be frank," said the sports man, "it appeared to me that the trail was getting altogether too fresh."

COOLIDGE TO FOLLOW VIEWS OF HARDING

President Outlines Policies in His First Message to the Lawmakers.

IS OPPOSED TO A BONUS

Against the League of Nations, but Favors the Establishment of a World's Court of Justice—Does Not Want Further Railroad Legislation.

Washington.—President Coolidge, in his first address to the congress, said, in part:

Since the close of the last congress the nation has lost President Harding. The world knew his greatness and his humanity, his greatness and his character. He has left his mark upon history. He has made justice more certain and peace more secure. The surpassing tribute paid to his memory as he was borne across the continent to rest at last at home revealed the place he held in the heart and affection of his people. But this is not the occasion for extended reference to the man or his work. In this presence, among those who knew and loved him, that is unnecessary. But we who were associated with him could not resume together the functions of our office without pausing for a moment, amid his sorrow, recommitting ourselves to the service of our country. He is gone. We remain. It is our duty, under the inspiration of his example, to take up the burdens which he was permitted to lay down, and to defend and support the wise principles of government which he represented.

Foreign Affairs.

For us peace reigns everywhere. We desire to perpetuate it always by granting full justice to others and requiring of others full justice to ourselves.

Our country has one cardinal principle to maintain in its foreign policy. It is an American principle. It must be an American policy. We must look to our own affairs, conserve our own strength, and protect the interests of our own citizenship. But we recognize thoroughly our obligations to help others, reserving to the decision of our own government the time, the place and the method. We realize the common bond of humanity. We know that not resume the law of service.

Our country has definitely refused to adopt and ratify the covenant of the League of Nations. We have not felt warranted in assuming the responsibilities which its members have assumed. I am not proposing any change in this policy, neither do I desire to develop incident, so far as we are concerned, is closed.

World Court.

Our foreign policy has always been guided by two principles. The one is the avoidance of permanent political alliances which would sacrifice our proper independence. The other is the peaceful settlement of controversies between nations. By example and by treaty we have advocated arbitration. For nearly 25 years we have been a member of The Hague tribunal, and have long sought the creation of a permanent World Court of Justice. I am in full accord with both of these policies. I favor the submission of such a court intended to include the whole world. That is, and has long been, an American policy.

Russia.

Our diplomatic relations, lately so largely interrupted, are now being resumed, but Russia presents notable difficulties. We have every desire to see that great people, who are our traditional friends, restored to their position among the nations of the earth. We have relieved their intolerable destitution with an enormous charity. Our government offers no objection to the carrying on of commerce by our citizens with the people of Russia. Our government does not propose, however, to enter into relations with another regime which refuses to recognize the sanctity of international obligations. I do not propose to barter away for the privilege of trade any of the cherished rights of humanity. I do not propose to make merchandise of any American principle. Wherever the American flag must go wherever the sanctions of our government go. But while the favor of America is for sale, I am willing to make very large concessions for the purpose of rescuing the people of Russia. Already encouraging evidences of returning to the ancient ways of society can be detected. But more are needed.

Debts.

The current debt and interest due from foreign governments, exclusive of the British debt of $4,800,000,000, is about $1,000,000,000. I do not propose any change of this debt, but I see no objection to adjusting in accordance with the principle adopted for the British debt. Our country would not wish to assume the role of an oppressive creditor, but would maintain the principle that financial obligations between nations are likewise moral obligations which the sanctions of faith and honor require should be discharged.

Fiscal Condition.

Our main problems are domestic problems. Financial stability is the first requisite of sound government. We cannot escape the effect of world conditions. We cannot avoid the inevitable results of the economic disorders which are reached by all nations. But we shall diminish their harm to us in proportion as we conform to sound principles of public finances to a secure and endurable position. This we can and must do. Upon that firm foundation rests the only hope of progress and prosperity. From that source must come relief for the people.

This being accomplished by a drastic but orderly retrenchment, which is bringing our expenses within our revenues, the weight of this has been the determination of the American people, the main support has been the courage of the chief executive authority, and the effective method has been the budget system. The result has involved real sacrifice by department heads, but it has been made without flinching. This system is a law of the congress. It represents your will. It must be maintained, and ought to be strengthened by the example of your observance. Without a budget system there can be no fixed responsibility and no constructive scientific economy.

Tariff Law.

The present tariff law has accomplished its two main objects. It has secured an abundant revenue and been productive of an abounding prosperity. Under it the country has had a very large export and import trade. A constant revision of the tariff by the congress is disturbing and harmful. The present law contains an elastic provision authorizing the President to increase or decrease present schedules not in excess of 40 per centum to meet the difference in cost of production at home and abroad. This does not, to my mind, warrant a revision of the whole law, but does mean, and will be so administered, that whenever the required investigation shows that inequalities of sufficient importance exist in any schedule, the power to change them should and will be applied.

Shipping.

The entire well-being of our country is dependent upon transportation by sea and land. Our government during the war acquired a large merchant fleet which should be transferred, as soon as possible, to private ownership and operation under conditions which would secure two results: First, and of prime importance, adequate means for national defense; second, adequate service to American commerce. Until shipping conditions are such that our fleet can be disposed of advantageously under these conditions, it will be operated as economically as possible under such plans as may be devised from time to time by the shipping board. We must have a merchant marine which meets these requirements, and we shall have to pay the cost of its service.

Public Improvements.

The time has come to resume in a moderate way the opening of our intracoastal waterways, the control of destructive floods in the Mississippi and of the Colorado rivers; the improvement of the waterways from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico; and the development of the great power and navigation project of the St. Lawrence river, for which studies are now being made to secure the necessary treaty with Canada. These projects cannot all be undertaken at once, but all should have the immediate consideration of the congress and be adopted as fast as plans can be matured and the necessary funds become available.

Railroads.

Criticism of the railroad law has been directed, first, to the section laying down the rule by which rates are fixed, and providing for payment to the government and use of excess earnings; second, to the method for the adjustment of wage scales; and third, to the authority permitting consolidations.

It has been erroneously assumed that the act undertakes to guarantee railroad earnings. The law requires that rates should be just and reasonable. That has always been the rule under which rates have been fixed. To make a rate that does not yield a fair return results in confiscation, and confiscatory rates are of course unconstitutional. Unless the government adheres to the rule of making a rate that will yield a fair return, it must abandon rate making altogether. The new and important feature of that part of the law is the recapture and redistribution of excess rates. The constitutionality of this method is now before the Supreme court for adjudication. Their decision should be awaited before attempting further legislation on this subject. Furthermore, the importance of this feature will not be great if consolidation goes into effect.

The settlement of railroad labor disputes is a matter of grave public concern. The labor board was established to protect the public in the enjoyment of continuous service by attempting to insure justice between employees, or the companies. If a substantial agreement can be reached among the groups interested, there should be no hesitation in enacting such agreement into law. If it is not reached, the labor board may very well be left for the present to protect the public welfare.

Department of Justice.

As no revision of the laws of the United States has been undertaken since the commission or committee should be created to undertake this work. The Judicial council reports that two more district judges are needed in the southern district of New York, one in the northern district of Georgia, and two more circuit judges in the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Eighth circuit. Legislation should be considered for this purpose.

The national government has never given adequate attention to its prison problems. It ought to provide employment in such forms of production as can be used by the government, though not sold to the public in competition with private business, for all prisoners who can be placed at work, and for which they should receive a reasonable compensation, available for their dependents.

Prohibition.

The prohibition amendment to the Constitution requires the congress and the President to provide adequate laws to prevent its violation. It is my duty to enforce such laws. For that purpose a treaty is being negotiated with Great Britain with respect to the right of search of private vessels. To prevent smuggling, the coast guard should be greatly strengthened, and a supply of swift power boats should be provided. The major sources of production should be rigidly regulated, and every effort should be made to suppress interstate traffic. With this action on the part of the national government, and the co-operation which is usually rendered by municipal and state authorities, prohibition should be made effective. Free government has no greater menace than disrespect for authority and continual violation of law. It is the duty of a citizen not only to observe the law but to let it be known that he is opposed to its violation.

The Negro.

Numbered among our population are some 12,000,000 colored people. Under our Constitution their rights are just as sacred as those of any other citizen. It is both a public and a private duty to protect those rights. The congress ought to exercise all its powers of prevention and punishment against the hideous crime of lynching, of which the negroes are by no means the sole sufferers, but for which they furnish a majority of the victims.

Regulatory Legislation.

Co-operation with other maritime powers is necessary for complete protection of our coast waters from pollution. Plans for this are under way, but await certain experiments before they are perfected. Maritime laws prohibiting spreading oil and oil refuse from vessels in our own territorial waters would be most helpful against this menace and should be speedily enacted.

Laws should be passed regulating aviation.

Revision is needed of the laws regulating radio interference.

Army and Navy.

For several years we have been decreasing the personnel of the army and navy, and reducing their power to the danger point. Further reductions should not be made. The army is a guaranty of the security of our citizens at home; the navy is a guarantee of the security of our citizens abroad. Both of these services should be strengthened rather than weakened. Additional planes are needed for the army, and additional submarines for the navy.

Education and Welfare.

Our national government is not doing as much as it legitimately can do to promote the welfare of the people. Our enormous material wealth, our institutions, our whole form of society, cannot be considered fully successful until their benefits reach the merit of every individual. This is not a suggestion that the government should, or could, assume for the people the inevitable burdens of existence. This is no method by which we can either be relieved of the results of our own folly or be guaranteed a successful life. There is an inescapable personal responsibility for the development of character, of industry, of thrift, and of self-control. These do not come from the government. They grow from what men themselves. But the government can and should always be expressive of steadfast determination, always vigilant, to maintain conditions under which these virtues are most likely to develop and secure recognition and reward. This is the American policy.

It is in accordance with this principle that we have enacted laws for the protection of the public health and have adopted prohibitions in regard to drugs and intoxicating liquors. For purposes of national uniformity we ought to provide, by constitutional amendment and appropriate legislation, for a limitation of child labor, and in all cases unless the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal government a minimum wage law for women, which would undoubtedly find sufficient power of enforcement in the influence of public opinion.

Immigration.

American institutions rest solely on good citizenship. They were created by people who had a background of self-government. New arrivals can be admitted to our capacity to absorb them into the ranks of good citizenship. America must be kept American. For this purpose it is necessary to continue a policy of restricted immigration. We may well to make such immigration of a selective nature with some inspection at the source, and based either on a prior census or upon the record of naturalization.

Veterans.

No more important duty falls on the government of the United States than the adequate care of its veterans. Those suffering disabilities incurred in the service must have sufficient hospital relief and compensation. Their dependents must be supported. Rehabilitation and vocational training must be completed. All of this service must be clean, must be prompt and effective. It should be administered in a spirit of the broadest and deepest human sympathy. Investigation reveals many present defects of administration or need of legislation, orders will be given for the correction and revision of administration, and recommendations for legislation should be given the highest preference. But I do not favor the granting of a bonus.

Coal.

The cost of coal has become unbearably high. It places a great burden on our industrial and domestic life. The public welfare requires a reduction in the price of fuel. With the enormous deposits in existence, failure of supply ought not to be tolerated. Those responsible for the conditions in this industry should undertake to reform and free it from any charge of profiteering.

The report of the coal commission will be before the congress. It comprises all the facts. I approve the future deliberations and conclusions of the best talent and experience that ever have been made available for the production and distribution of fuel. I do not favor government ownership or operation of coal mines. But we need is for action under private ownership that will secure greater continuity of production and greater public protection.

Reorganization.

A special joint committee has been appointed to work out plans for the reorganization of the different departments and bureaus of the government more scientific and economical than the present system. With the exception of the consolidation of the War and Navy departments and some minor details, the plan has the general sanction of the President and the cabinet. It is important that reorganization be enacted into law at the present session.

Aided by the government.

Aided by the government, the business of the country has had an extraordinary revival, but there are still many. The nation is in the enjoyment of remarkable prosperity. Industry and commerce are thriving. For the most part agriculture is successful, eleven staples having risen in value from about $5,300,000,000 two years ago to about $7,000,000,000 for the current year. But range cattle are still very low in price, and some sections of the wheat area, notably Minnesota, North Dakota, and the west, have many cases of actual distress. With his products not selling on a parity with the products of industry, every sound remedy that can be devised should be applied for the relief of the farmer, who represents a character, a type of citizenship, and a public necessity that must be preserved and afforded every facility for regaining prosperity.

The distress is most acute among those wholly dependent upon one crop. Wheat acreage was greatly reduced and has not yet been sufficiently reduced. A large amount is raised for export which will meet the competition in the world market of large amounts raised on land much cheaper to cultivate and more productive.

No complicated scheme of relief, no plan for government fixing of prices, no resort to the public treasury will be of any permanent value in establishing agricultural prosperity. Simple and direct methods put into operation by the farmer himself are the only real sources for restoration.

Muscle Shoals.

The government is undertaking to develop a great water power project known as Muscle Shoals, on which it has expended many millions of dollars. The work is still going on. Subject to the right to retake in time of war, I recommend that this property with a lease for auxiliary steam plant and rights of way be sold. This would end a present burden of expense and should return to the treasury the largest price possible to secure.

Highways and Forests.

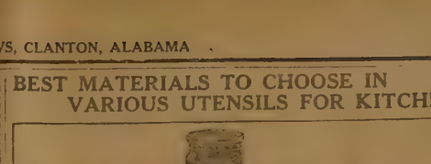
Highway and reforestation should continue to have the interest and support of the government. Federal aid builds good highways. I have made a liberal proposal in the budget for the continuing payment to the states by the federal government of its share for this necessary public improvement. Expenditure of public money contributes so much to the national wealth as for building good roads.

Reforestation has an importance far above the direct question of timber. A special committee of the senate is investigating this need, and I shall welcome its constructive policy based on their report.

Monroe Doctrine.

It is 100 years since our country announced the Monroe doctrine. This principle has been ever since, and is now, one of the main foundations of our foreign relations. It must be maintained. In maintaining it we must not forget that a great change has taken place. We are no longer a weak nation, thinking mainly of defense, dreading foreign imposition. We have grown powerful, and that has given us bring new responsibilities. Our duty then was to protect ourselves. Added to that our duty now is to help give stability to the world. We want idealism. We want that vision which lifts men and nations above themselves. These are virtues by reason of their own merit. But they must not be emotional; they must not be impractical; they must not be ineffective. America has taken her place in the world as an independent, sovereign, powerful. The best services that can be rendered to humanity is the assurance that this place will be maintained.

BEST MATERIALS TO CHOOSE IN VARIOUS UTENSILS FOR KITCHEN



Wise Choice and Careful Use Pays With Kitchen Utensils.

It would be difficult to advise any housekeeper to choose kitchen utensils exclusively of one material or another, as each different material has its special uses, its advantages and disadvantages. One usually needs, for example, aluminum or agateware saucepans; several baking dishes of earthenware, with possibly a set of individual ramekins or custard cups; an iron skillet and muffin pan; some steel paring and carving knives; glass measuring cups; and wooden cutting boards.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives in brief form the following characteristics for the various materials used for kitchen equipment:

Aluminum Is Durable.

Aluminum is light in weight and color. It does not rust, and is very durable. Disadvantages are that it is darkened with use, and affected by alkalies and acids. Alkalies, such as washing soda and strong soaps, injure it. Aluminum should be cleaned with weak acids such as dilute vinegar, sour milk, or a fruit acid; it may be secured with whiting or fine steel wool.

Earthenware heats evenly. It is less noisy in use than metal, and comes in a great variety of shapes. Baking dishes of earthenware may be used for both cooking and serving. It has drawbacks in that it chips and crackles, and is heavy to handle. The glaze which protects the porous clay underneath is easily crackled by changes of temperature and careless handling; then the dish absorbs fat, moisture and dirt, and cannot be kept clean.

Enamel and agateware are smooth, easily cleaned; attractive in appearance, not affected by acids or alkalies; good for storing as well as cooking foods, if well cared for. The glaze chips, exposing an iron or steel surface which may be affected by water and acids and thus injure food. The chips themselves may get into food and be swallowed with it. Always handle gently, otherwise the glaze cracks. Toughen new pieces by filling with cold water, bringing slowly to the boiling point and letting the water cool in the dish. In poor grades the metal foundation sometimes breaks easily and causes the enamel to crack and chip.

Glassware Is Smooth.

Glassware is smooth, unaffected by foods, and shows what is happening during the cooking processes. It is suitable for storing food. Ordinary glassware is easily broken and chipped. A special kind is made for baking. To toughen ordinary glassware, cover it with cold water, bring slowly to the boiling point and cool in the same water.

Iron and steel grow better and smoother with careful use. Iron takes and keeps an even heat. It is heavy, and rusts easily, thus losing its smooth surface. To prevent rust, cover new utensils with fat and bake it in; keep them in a dry place. When storing for a long time, cover with paraffin or an unsalted fat, or wrap in newspaper.

A well-tempered steel knife takes and holds a sharp edge. In the best knives, the steel extends through the length of the handle and is fastened to it by rivets. When the knife is merely stuck in the handle it soon works out. Clean steel knives by scouring with bath brick applied with a moistened cork, then wash and dry. Keep the handles out of water as much as possible. Store where the cutting edge will not be hit or rubbed by anything hard. Keep knives sharp.

Tin is not affected by weak acids or alkalies unless the plating is injured. It is light in color and fairly inexpensive. Tin melts easily; it scratched the surface underneath rusts. There are two kinds of tin, plain tin and block tin. In both there is a plating of tin on an iron or steel foundation. Plain tin is light in weight, easily bent, and cools quickly. Block tin is heavier, more durable, and holds the heat longer. Great heat on empty tin makes it warp and also melts the plating.

Wood is less noisy and less hard than metal. It is, however, absorbent; it warps, cracks and darkens. It is useful for spoons, butter paddles, cutting boards, chopping bowls, potato mashers and rolling pins. Wood makes comfortable handles because it does not press so hard against the hand or transmit the heat so quickly as metal. It is good for cutting and chopping boards because it dulls the knife less than a harder material. In cleaning do not soak; wash quickly, using a scourer rather than soap; rinse and wipe dry; use as little water as possible. Rub down occasionally with sandpaper or steel wool. Store in a cool, dry place.

Caring for Utensils.

Proper care and storage of utensils mean longer and better service. Scraping and scouring scratch metal and chip glaze. If food is burned or stuck on, soak or boil in a solution of washing soda unless the dish is aluminum. Wipe off soot and grease with soft paper. Wash utensils in hot soapy water, rinse in hot water and dry thoroughly. Exceptions are, gears and bearings in egg beaters, ice cream freezers and other mechanical utensils, which should be wiped clean rather than put into water and should have a drop of oil occasionally. Cooking dishes, pitchers, milk bottles and jars are best cleaned with suitable brushes or mops. Store utensils by hanging or putting on convenient, accessible, and well-spaced shelves near where they are to be used. Keep them where it is light and airy, not in dark, unventilated cupboards.

VARIOUS WAYS OF COOKING RABBIT

Sausage Fat Will Give a Particularly Nice Flavor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Before cooking, a rabbit should be washed carefully in cold water and patted dry with a clean towel, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It may then be stuffed and trussed if it is to be cooked whole, or cut into 8 or 10 pieces. Young, tender rabbits may be simply dredged with flour, salt and pepper and fried in fat, like fried chicken. Sausage fat gives a particularly good flavor to fried rabbit.

Many dishes may be prepared after stewing rabbit till tender. For a rabbit pie the meat may be cut from the bones in large pieces, the broth thickened and the whole served with either a pastry or biscuit crust. Any broth not used makes excellent soup. For rabbit salad the meat may be mixed with celery in the same proportions as chicken salad—two parts of diced cold cooked meat to one part of chopped celery and one-half part of salad dressing. Boiled rabbit may be served as a stew by adding potatoes, carrots and onions when the meat is partly cooked. The liquid in which the stew is cooked should be thickened.

A spiced rabbit stew appeals to many persons. The seasonings consist of 6 slices of bacon, chopped, a minced onion of medium size, 2 teaspoonfuls of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper, and 1 tablespoonful of cloves in a bag, all covered with boiling water and stewed slowly together till the rabbit is tender. A brown sauce is made separately and poured over the rabbit, which is then simmered 2 hours.

Grandmother Knew

There Was Nothing So Good for Congestion and Colds as Mustard

But the old-fashioned mustard plaster burned and blistered while it acted. Get the relief and help that mustard plasters gave, without the plaster and without the blister.

Musterole does it. It is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. It is scientifically prepared, so that it works wonders.

Gently massage Musterole in with the finger-tips. See how quickly it brings relief—how speedily the pain disappears.

Try Musterole for sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

The proposition for a Federal aid highway through Chilton county still seems to be rather nebulous.

The desire to get something for nothing has ruined many fine men and filled many a penitentiary ward.

The tariff question is like the ghost of Banquo, it won't down. It will be a campaign issue in spite of all the politicians can do.

Some of the leaders in Congress feel pretty sure of passing the Soldiers Bonus Bill even over the veto of the president.

The acid test of staying by a fellow in adversity as well as prosperity is where you learn whether you have any friends or not.

God preserve us from ever becoming so warped and biased that every honest endeavor made by others looks as crooked as a snake.

The "community chest" is the answer to the disgust people have accumulated by having to be deviled by these never ceasing "drives."

The nearer we get to the time of nominating the next presidential candidates the more it looks like a promising field for dark horses.

If the western wheat farmers will depend more on their farms and less on congress for a living, we feel like they would be more prosperous.

The man who is afraid to own his honest convictions fails to enjoy 95 per cent of the freedom that belongs to him as an American citizen.

When it comes to charity, we would gladly divide our last bite of bread with a hungry dog, but these long distance "drives" don't appeal to us any

Who is going to organize that Underwood Club in Chilton? We notice that a club is to be organized in each county. Get your name on the slate, boys.

To the peanut kind, there is more work and less rest, more hustling and less money in playing politics than in any other profession we know of —except loafing.

The movement to stop allowing the various committees in congress to dictate all legislation is in the right direction, but if the bloc is able to hold the stand patters to their promise it will be the first time on record.

Cotton seems to be flirting with the speculators now. The last estimate of 9,500,000 bales sent the price down again. None of the farmers should grumble if they get caught. They had a chance at 30 cents and better.

The County Commissioners told the Highway Board Saturday that they were absolutely ready to furnish deeds for the B and M highway right of way just as soon as they could find out where it was located.

Uncle Jim Baker says, God put the clay under the bottom to hold up the soil, sand and gravel and that when we try to put it on top to make a road we always fall down because God knew where it belonged and put it in the right place to start with.

According to the Chicago Tribune, 37 is the total fatilities from football in the United States this season and 153 total disability injuries. That is still not quite as frightful as the casualty lists of the great war. Evidently the boys need a heavier armament than spiked shoes.

A SURPRISING STUNT

To our most unqualified surprise the Union-Banner delivered itself last week, of a baseless fabrication of a disordered brain that would cause Baron Munchausen to turn pale with envy.

Can it be possible that the clever editor of that erratic sheet has been steeped in the putrid floods of prejudice until a clean and honest appreciation of political peace and righteousness causes his very soul to sreth in mental agony at the prospect of a purged electorate and an honest election?

The article of ours that seems to have convulsed him with terrible spasms of vindictive hate, has been commended to us by, perhaps, more people, of both political factions, for its spirit of absolute fairness to everybody than anything else we have written on the political situation in Chilton county since we became editor of the News. There is not a sentence nor a sentiment contained in that article but what must strike a responsive chord in the heart of every honest, honorable and progressive citizen of the county. The mere fact that it appeared in the columns of the Chilton County News, the organ of the Democratic party in Chilton county, is the only reason why the pitiful vials of wrath were poured out on it by the Union-Banner.

Can the editor brush up his accommodating memory sufficiently to recollect just a few of the vile epithets that were recently hurled at good honest men in a political campaign and then ask "who it is that has been at each other's throats" in the county? Then can he strain that most accommodating organ of his and delve back through the events of the departed years, and still ask that question?

Yes, he can do all of that, and ask such questions as the above, with a blatant semblance of innocence that would almost cause satan to hang his head in shame.

Such flagrant attempts as that to contort the meaning of a sentiment that is so true and so palpable to every sane person who resides in, or near, Chilton county is a pitiful effort to pander to a lust for misrepresentation and a desire to say something that will cause his backers and party adherents to feel like he is making a game fight even if he does not say anything—he covers a lot of space.

With customary disregard for facts, the editor takes the ground, apparently, that large investors would as soon put their capital to work in a community wedded to perpetual strife and bitterness as in a community where harmony and good fellowship prevailed. That proposition is too foolish to merit even a passing comment, and we feel like that even the editor of the Banner knows that in his heart. That break of his was just another successful attempt to fill up space without saying anything.

One can but infer from the peculiar ground taken by the editor of the Union-Banner in regard to the election contest, that a ballot cast for Judge Reynolds is above suspicion and that it is the rankest villiany and blackest breach of respectability to even question them. We hope never to reach the pass in our loyalty to any man or party where we are willing to barter our self-respect to that extent that we can see no wrong in evil no matter where it crops up. Esau though being dead yet liveth in spirit.

Now, as to this election contest, Editor Wyatt, nor any other person has ever read a single line of editorial matter in the Chilton County News that even hinted at the result. Editor Wyatt makes a vain attempt to "measure our corn in his half bushel." We do not doubt that if he had been in our shoes that he would have made more foolish boasts and blatant charges of corruption and fraud than could have been catafoged in a full series of the Congressional Record, but that is only another evidence of his prejudice and narrowness. For instance, when the contest was first suggested he shouted himself hoarse with cries of "Let 'er come." His joy at the prospect seemed to be unconfined. Why this wonderful change of front?

An impartial reading of this latest manifesto of Editor Wyatt places him in a rather peculiar situation. Is he willing to go on record as being in favor of allowing everybody to vote, whether they are qualified or not, just so they vote his way? That is what he very broadly implies and, we do not doubt for a moment but the wish is father of the implication.

Now, we would like to say to the Editor of the Union-Banner, that all citizens who are worthy the name, realize the inevitable truth that all people do not see things alike, but, so long as they do not attempt to interfere with the rights of others, they are entitled to their opinion, and the laws of this great country is supposed to protect them, therein, and the narrow pated fish who tries to coerce, browbeat or boycott them into a different frame of mind is not entitled to either the respect or consideration of real people.

Editor Wyatt, after all of his dire predictions as to the fate of the democratic voters before the bar of the contest, makes us wonder why he is so wrought up over the mere fact of its approaching climax. Why not be an honest liberty loving citizen and emulate the Chilton County News in your desire for a thorough cleansing of the polling list, no matter who rises or who falls?

It is a sad and pitable thing for a man, and especially a young man, with all of life's possibilities before him, to allow his system and his very soul to become so shot full of evil prejudice that he loses all confidence in humanity and can never see anything but a sinister motive of evil in every honest and commendable effort of his fellowman to aspire to higher and more honorable altitudes.

When you look at the world through colored glasses you can not hope to see things in their true light.

Now, Bro. Wyatt, lets get together on this contest proposition. Come up higher out of the slime of mere party politics and meet us on a plane of fairness, where we can welcome, with unfeigned pleasure, the prospect of having our ballot boxes purged and our electorate put on an honest footing of merit. Surely you favor an honest ballot and are true patriot enough to be willing to accept, as final the will of a majority legally expressed. That is all the democratic party is looking for, and as largely the major part of the tax payers, they do not feel like they have violated the faith nor confidence of any one, worthy the name of citizen, in asking the legally organized courts of the country, in a perfectly legal manner to pass on this election and establish its validity or otherwise, by due process of law provided.

Can't you broaden out and "brighten the corner where you are" sufficiently to recognize that even democrats have rights before the law of the land and a perfect right to exercise the rights just the same as any one else—even though they do happen to live in Chilton county?

In future you will be saved from the humiliation of falling in to such a grevious error as you did this time by remembering that the editor of the Chilton County News very often speaks without bias and prejudice, especially so on matters so far reaching as an eelction contest.

"SILENT CAL" HAS SPOKEN

Reads His Message to Congress Last Thursday. Is a Typical Bid for The Nomination.

The long protracted silence of President Coolidge was broken last Thursday when he delivered his first message to Congress.

All in all, the message is concise, clear and to the point when you first read it over, but upon closer examination, you find that it is shrewdly worded in a manner that makes it easily construed in more ways than one.

For instance. In his reference to the Muscle Shoals proposition, at first sight you will take his wording as an almost straight forward endorsement of the Henry Ford bid, but, just as he bids adieu to his subject, he injects a little joker that would entirely block the acceptance of the Ford offer, or any other offer for that matter, until after the next election, at least. That is when he suggests that a joint committee be appointed to "investigate" the Muscle Shoals question.

Now, of course, President Coolidge is aware of the fact, just as the rest of us are, that Congress has done little else for two years but "investigate" the Muscle Shoals matter. If they do not have all of the data now that could possibly be obtained in regard to that much discussed question, the further consumption of time and money in attempting such investigation is worse than folly. No, Mr. Cooldige that is such a palpable "stall" on your part that it will fail to pass muster, even before the proverbially gullible American people.

The demand of the American Legion for a bonus for the soldier boys was summarily dealt with, by the president, without gloves. He merely said he "did not favor a soldier bonus."

In that, at least, he adopted no subtrefuge nor camouflage. His puritan ancestry was ably demonstrated by the direct frankness with which he disposed of that issue. The American Legion can not fail to understand his meaning.

The message is doubtless a pretty good insight into the character of the man. While it has more the earmarks of a political platform than of a presidential message, at the same time, it is a fair bid for the support of all stand pat republicans.

TEACHERS' EXAMINATION

The regular teachers' examination will be held here in Clanton on December 17-19, 1923 beginnig Monday morning at 9 A. M.

Every applicant not personally known by me must be identified by some reliable white person.

Any applicant who does not live or teach in this county will not be permitted to take the examination unless they present a permit from the State Dept. of Education.

All applicants for second grade certificates must present satisfactory evidence of having completed 9th grade work. Every applicant for a first grade certificate must present evidence of having completed the high school course of study.

Pre Normal and Provisional certificates may be substituted in lieu of papers on certain branches of study when applying for certificates of higher grades on the same basis as certificates of the same rank issued by examination.

An examination will be given on Monday, December 17, for those persons who wish to teach piano and public school music. The fee for either of these certificates is $2.00.

Third grade certificates will be issued from this examination as heretofore.

Those applicants submitting an unexpired third grade certificate need not report until 3 o'clock Monday. Those submitting un-expired second grades need not report until noon Tuesday.

Respectfully,
HOWARD L. FOSHEE,
County Supt. Education.

ENTERTAINMENT AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

The entertainment given last Friday in the high school was a glowing success in every respect.

The entertainment was excellent, the attendance large and the receipts very satisfactory.

The ladies who directed the entire affair, Miss Johnson, Expression teacher at the High School and Mrs. Middleton, the music teacher there, both deserve the highest praise for the splendid character of the entertainment and for the arranging of a program that seemed to be a winner with every member of the large audience.

It is to be hoped that this very capable caste will see fit to offer more of these enjoyable treats in the future.

HIGH SCHOOL OFFICE BURGLARIZED

Some time during last Saturday night some night marauder broke out a window in the office of the High School and entered and robbed the place of several articles.

Some boxes of candy that had been left over from a recent entertainment were taken and, perhaps, some other articles.

If you can report the miscreantnt with evidence to convict to Prof. Ira Pegues, the principal, he will be glad to make it to your interest to do so.

CHILTON DEFEATS ISABELLA SCHOOL

In a fast clean game, the boys from Chilton County High School defeated the fast team from Isabella last Friday afternoon. This is the first game for the local team. The team showed up well for so little practice. In the first half, Isabella held Clanton to a low score, namely 10 to 6, but in the second half Clanton came back with a determination to prevent Isabella from scoring as well as a desire to ring up some points for themselves. Both teams played good basketball and both showed a clean spirit in athletics. Score for Clanton: Nivens 2, Franklin 2, Ruffin 2, Thompson 7, Burnett 12. Score for Isabella: L. Smith 2, Williams 4.

Lineup for Clanton: Nivens, center; Mullins and Franklin, guards; Jones and Burnett, forwards; substitutions, Ruffin for Nivens, Thompson for Jones, Lewis for Franklin, Calloway for Mullins.

Lineup for Isabella: L. Smith and O. Web, forwards; E. Williams, center; H. Smith and J. Martin, guards; substitutions were T. LeCroy, L. McCrow, J. Hayes. Referee: George Wyatt.

Dr. C. C. Wilkerson and wife drove through from Atlanta, Ga., in their Durant car last week, leaving their at 1 p. m. and sleeping at home that night. He said the roads were all right until he crossed the state line, but he does not brag much on the Alabama variety.

AMERICAN LEGION ON POLL TAX

MOBILE, Ala., Dec 7—State Commander F. Taylor Peck of the American Legion, in a letter to the posts in Alabama Department urges Legionnaires to pay their poll taxes. His letter follows:

Americanism, watchword of the American Legion, implies citizenship, and full citizenship in this country includes the right and duty to vote and to do jury service when called upon to serve.

Here in Alabama Americanism must be something more than a word It must take on the active aspect, and the American Legion must see that it becomes an effective force instead of a passive ideal.

Every member of the American Legion between the ages of 21 and 45 years should pay the poll tax that is required of all who would exercise the full privileges and assume the responsibilities of citizenship. The amendment and act excusing former service men from the payment of this tax has expired. Unless the required $1.50 is paid before the First of February, the man or woman of poll-tax age has no real voice in the government under which we live, no vote in the selection of public servants and no part in the execution of our laws; and these are the only legal weapons with which Americanism can be preserved.

Important, also, is the fact that this poll tax money goes directly into the school funds of the counties where collected; and the American Legion is committed to the cause of public education as a great first step towards an enlightened Americanism.

Election of Officers

During the present month every post of the American Legion will be caled upon to elect officers for the coming year. The future of the Legion in this state depends in a great measure upon the selection of Post Commanders. Adjutants and other officials who are in accord with the ideals of our organization and who are willing to work.

It does not always happen that the men best suited for these important places are the most popular men in their posts. In making the seelction of officer material, efficiency before popularity should be considered. Where both of these qualities can be found in combination and put to work the post will prosper. Your state officers can accomplish but little without the assistance of effective officers in charge of the units that compose the Department.

Greater Membership

December is the month when the posts throughout Alabama should intensify their work for new members. Those who enter during this month paying the regular annual dues required by their respective posts receive a receipt for dues paid until January 1, 1925.

The influence of the American Legion and the power of the organization to make itself felt in Alabama and throughout the United States depend upon the numerical strength of the Legion as expressed in active members clothed with the full dignity of citizenship. While the Legion is not a political organization, it recognizes no other method of righting public wrongs than through the ballot and the orderly process of courts and laws.

ANOTHER RECORD SHATTERED BY A STUDEBAKER STOCK CAR

Beats Los Angeles Limited from Salt Lake City To Los Angeles by One Hour and Ten Minutes

Breaking the record of the famous Los Angeles Limited from Salt Lake City to Los Angeles by one hour and ten minutes, a stock 1921 Studebaker Special-Six, driven by D. A. Jenkins of Salt Lake City, has established a motor car performance mark that is causing wide-spread comment among motorists along the Pacific Coast.

This is the fastest that man has ever traveled overland between these two cities. It is one hour and fifty eight minutes—almost two hours—faster than the best previous motor car record.

The Arrowhead Trail over which the record was made winds through many treacherous mountain passes and traverses hundreds of miles of desert roads. For this reason, and because no attempt was made to wait for ideal road and weather conditions, the feat is all the more impressive to those who are familiar with the route.

No Water Added to Radiator

Even more remarkable than the speed attained was the endurance displayed by the car. Despite the fact that its cooling system was naturally subjected to severe test over the mountain and desert roads, no water was added to the radiator during the entire run. The American Express Company sealed the filler cap at Salt Lake City and broke the seal at Los Angeles. When checked in at Los Angeles, the motor was running as smoothly and as quietly as it was when it left Salt Lake City.

The run, arranged by the T. W. Naylor Company, Studebaker dealers in Salt Lake City was timed and authenticated by the Western Union.

The distance of 853 miles was covered by the Special-Six in 23 hours, 43 minutes. The best previous automobile record was 25 hours, 41 minutes and the time of the Los Angeles Limited is 24 hours, 50 minutes.

ANCHOR DOWN YOUR HOUSE.

When people get to driving up and loading a truck load of shingles in the very heart of town and appropriating them without leave of license, its about time to securely fasten down your house or they will drive off with it some night.

That's what they did Saturday night at the Jones Hardware warehouse. They loaded up 16 crates of fine red wood shingles and carted them away to parts unknown.

NOTICE

There will be some changes made in my business on the first of the year and I am very anxious to get as much all my outstanding indebtedness collected and paid before this date as possible. To this end I especially request that all persons owing me, on mortgages, notes or open accounts, whether the amount be large or small, arrange to settle with me the earliest date possible.

Prompt attention to this request will be greatly appreciated.

Colonel G. C. Walker and Mr. J. R Hardy spent Sunday and Monday visiting relatives, friends and old acquaintances at Rockford.

Railroads Are Operated For The Public Good

Railroads, necessarily, are run for the public good—their charters are granted by the public on this condition; and if they fail in the performance of this obligation, they forfeit their rights as common carriers.

While railroads must serve the public, they must also serve their many thousands of individual bondholders and stockholders. "The laborer is worthy of his hire" and if he does not get "his hire" he will not long continue to labor.

For many years, especially during the prolonged calamitous period of Government control during and subsequent to the World War, the railroads of this country have been burdened and hampered by needless handicapped by many legislative restrictions and regulations; inspired, in the main, by self-seeking demagogues; but, to some extent, by well-meaning people who were uninformed as to railroad conditions.

Unless railroads are allowed to run their business under reasonable Governmental regulations, they cannot operate efficiently and economically.

Unwarranted legislative interference and regulation result in conditions from which the public suffers, as well as the railroads.

The L. & N. Railroad fully recognizes its obligations to the public and is honestly and arduously striving to meet these obligations. With the other great railroads of America, it is asking intelligent and fair-minded consideration and co-operation at the hands of the public, in order to be able to serve the public to the best advantage, protect its investors and maintain its own existence under its charter rights and privileges.

"What have you said?" he whispered. "La Casa—in the Grenadines? You are Louise L'Estrange? You—are the child of the refugees from Martinique?"

"Monsieur?" she answered wonderingly: "Surely! How could you know?" And then she stepped nearer with a cry that rang: "Monsieur de Almonaster!"

He took her hands, and, bowing, kissed her finger-tips. A great light was in his eyes—the glitter of an incredible triumph. The girl flushed, and her own glance went from one gentleman to the other.

The elder was in rapt surprise. He took snuff gravely from a golden trinket [illegible]; and then regarded them with the air of one who knew everything, and planned everything, and was but merely watching the consummation of his desires.

Louise Lestron cried out joyfully again, coming closer to the younger gentleman. There was in it a swift relief, as if she hurried to his protection. The gamester had said he loved her . . . that he would claim his pawn . . .

"Monsieur de Almonaster, who befriended me eight years ago after the blacks massacred my family, destroyed our estate!"

"The very same. I went to Paris. I . . . visited Quebec after my three years at St. Cyr. I searched in the Indies ports—I sought word of little Mademoiselle L'Estrange, the orphaned girl of the slaves' revolt."

There was hardly need to guess at the reason for his search. The girl turned aside. The Captain Sazarac bent upon the younger man a look of odd remembrance.

"My name was changed a trifle—Anglicized, Monsieur, by the family of Colonel Carr. I am his ward." She hesitated and turned to the commander of the Seraphine. "You came to me at the hour of my deep despair, Monsieur. The night at the hotel—I broke with Carr's intrigues from that moment. And then—well, I knew too much for his safety. A discredited adventurer, his commission already recalled by his majesty's government, plotting with the malcontents of the Northwest and with the Spaniards across the Sabine against Louisiana. The conspirators seized me, hurried me upon the Genaron lest I disclose the truth to Mr. Langhorne, my nation's consul at New Orleans. Carr is in the pay of the Spanish king—an agent of the Holy Alliance that wishes to embroil England and America again in war, lest the United States grow too powerful in the West."

"I guessed as much," said Captain Sazarac absently, taking his snuff again. "Even before that night at the hotel, Mademoiselle—"

"That night!" queried Raoul. "It has been a mystery—you did not challenge Colonel Carr, as all the town expected. From that night, there was a change in you, Monsieur Sazarac!"

Monsieur Sazarac shrugged. Louise Lestron's glance upon him seemed to appeal to whatever chivalry there could be in a gamester of the packets.

Suddenly Raoul swept about impetuously and addressed the elder man.

"Monsieur! Do you recall the dinner at my country-seat? A confidence I made to you! A memory—a child—a lovely child—burned in the memory of a dreamer-schoolboy Paris—all the world could not make him forget!"

The other bowed. His faint smile came; the nonchalant voice flowed smoothly on: "I am twice honored. I am twice the chosen confidant. Monsieur Sazarac brings, with a sweep of either hand, two charming stories out of the thin air. He understands everything—does Monsieur Sazarac. He will now be the second jester of the Seraphine."

"Jean!" The young man started to him in hurt grief.

"I beg you!" The master's bronzed hand uplifted.

"Ah, Sazarac!" Raoul placed his fingers on the gold braid of the other's sleeve. De Almonaster seemed stunned by some resurging revelation that he had forgotten. He placed his arm quite about the other's shoulder.

"I will not speak," the flushed youth whispered. "I am in honor not to speak. Monsieur, can you understand me?" And he whispered even lower so that no accent might come to her wondering ears. "You are Sazarac, a gentleman who sails the Seraphine. You have stirred her deeply with some mystery of you . . . Monsieur Sazarac, she shall follow her heart into that mystery or not—as she chooses."

The two gentlemen parted silently. "Under what flag, Messieurs, is this ship?"

The two gentlemen looked oddly at [illegible]

"You are, in all honor, bound to send [illegible] back to New Orleans, Monsieur," [illegible] cried sharply. For even now, with [illegible] protecting arm of De Almonaster [illegible] by her side, she recalled Sazarac, the [illegible] . . . He had sworn to claim her, and he was here, standing apart with that faint irony in his smile.

"You will sail at once for New Orleans, Messieurs?" she repeated.

"Sazarac—at least," the master bowed, "will find welcome."

And even as De Almonaster stared at this evident madness, there came a step on the emperor's red-plushed staircase. The admiral of Cartagena, second in command upon the Seraphine, came to the tapestried portieres.

"Sir—" he broke in shortly, with a surly glance at Mademoiselle Lestron, as if this affair of the English woman was taking far too much of the hour. "The bullies are howling again. They swear to drag Jarvis from the brig and crown him an emperor of the last buccaneers—"

"[illegible] the captain said sternly. "What is this, sir?"

"The wind is picking—" said De Almonaster, turning from the port where now the royal curtain was fluttering. "Sir, a sailing wind!"

"That is it," grumbled Beluche. "The devils have smelled it. They have been waiting for it. They say they have stolen the lady for you, and kept their hands off a helpless prize out of tribute to—Sazarac. Now—"

"Monsieur Sazarac is returning to New Orleans!"

"Sir!" shouted Beluche, and then stopped. The eyes of Sazarac had turned upward to the open skylight above the emperor's cabin. He had thought a gleam of steel, or another eyeball had reflected the glitter of the crystal lamp. And then they all heard above, on the deck, the sound of bare feet retreating hastily, fainter and fainter.

"There was a spy from the fo'cas'le," muttered Beluche. "They wished to know . . . Perdition! You cannot mean New Orleans!"

"You will go forward, sir," returned the master quietly. "The fellow who laid above this cabin listening—you will find him, and lay him in double irons."

"Aye, sir!" But the old seaman turned pathetically at the foot of the stairs. "But name o' G—d! We might as well put our necks on the block in New Granada for the king o' Spain's men, as lay again to the Place d'Armes in New Orleans!"

"We are returning," said the other steadily, "for the peace of the seas between two nations. Eh, old brawler of the ports! Are you with me? You, Beluche? Bohon, Black Mike, Gorgio—Slit-Nose? Are they not with me?"

The old buccaneer watched the English woman out of hard, blinking, salt-reddened eyes.

"Eh, bien!" he growled at length. "A port for Sazarac! H—l's bells will ring for us! The young gentleman may save his neck, but you and I—Monsieur—Sazarac? Very well—it is for the English woman!"

CHAPTER XIII

Monsieur—of the Cannon Shot.

But that one hour's fitful cap of wind out of the south died ere the watch changed. The lady of the Genaron had been put safely away in the emperor's own suite; and whatever whispered conferences there were, fore or aft, upon the Napoleon ship, never a word of it drifted to her curtained ports.

"You Will Sail at Once for New Orleans, Messieurs?" She Repeated.

Mademoiselle Lestron saw the master but once; after her siesta in the cabin, which was hardly more endurable against the flat heat of the dead calm than the deck, he came to her under the awnings.

"You are comfortable, Mademoiselle, after this blistering day of calm?" Sazarac inquired gravely.

"Your black boys could not have done more—except to enlighten me!" Monsieur Sazarac of the Mississippi packets—are you a magic worker that, from a cardroom, you leap to command a gunned schooner?"

"With one trifle of a pause—upon the staircase of a house, a certain night." And after that he left her, the relenting, pretty speech unsaid upon her lips; and she was used to gentlemen awaiting her favor.

The sun was setting when Johannes came up from quarters and raised a moistened finger to feel the air. The heat had been a thing to thicken the blood in a man's skull that day.

That issue of the land breeze, which picks up in these latitudes after the sun goes down, hovered like a ghost over the lacquer table in the cabin of the emperor where there sat to dine with the lady of the Genaron, Beluche, the gold-braided admiral of Cartagena; Dominique, the alderman of New Orleans; the Count de Almonaster, and Sazarac who sat in the host's chair with the guest at his right.

The lamps of brass and crystal shone very bright, but there was one vacant chair among the gentlemen. Raoul glanced at it, seeing that their guest had done the same. The serving man seemed suddenly disturbed. He lingered by De Almonaster's chair:

"Monsieur—of the cannon shot—wished a place set for him, though he cannot come to tell the lady that he loves her."

Raoul glanced at Sazarac. The leader's eyes were on the vacant seat.

The ghost of the lost friend might have sat there, the sorry jester of the new waistcoat, so long the constraint grew among them. Mademoiselle Lestron looked curiously from one to the other; then to the admiral with the trappings of the gimcrack republic of the South, and the velvet-clad respectability of the alderman.

"What is the jest, gentlemen?" she cried. "The guest who cannot come!" She lifted her glass: "A toast to him, then—what say you all?"

The four gentlemen drank it after a curious pause, waiting for the cue of Sazarac.

"And now," growled Beluche, "to a wind against him—a wind o' death!"

"It is a phrase of the coast," put in Raoul hurriedly, seeing the sudden recoil of the smiling lady of the emperor's cabin from this grimness: "The hurricane month is upon us, after these calms. A wind—there must be many of the Spanish king's ships—heavy-gunned frigates—lying in the tides above us, helpless as we. Here's to a topsail breeze to take the Seraphine from under their clumsy feet!"

"Monsieur of the Cannon Shot Wishes a Place Set for Him, Though He Cannot Come to Tell the Lady That He Loves Her."

And as they were drinking this, and Mademoiselle was breaking into a chatter to cover the grotesque menace she could not divine, there came a tap at the door. A face showed there—a fair, young ship's 'prentice, whom De Almonaster remembered as being one of the English deserters.

He raised a warning hand past the black serving man. "A word, sir!"

"Yes, my lad? But what is this?"

The boy crept about to Sazarac's chair as if the master's protection must serve him.

"I am Clark, sir—from the Genaron. Bohon sent me from the wheel. He wished to report privately, sir. There is a light in the south—the steersman says it is a shore light. He does not like the drift in this tide sou'-sou'west, and he thinks the leadsman lies when he says we have more than eight fathom o' water."

"What is the meaning of this?" cried the skipper. "Bohon—why must he send a man in secret to me? Speak up, Clark!"

"He did not wish to arouse them for'ard, sir, and he does not trust the lookout or the sounding. He suddenly fears the watch have a mind to let the schooner beach herself, sir, on a spit o' sand—"

The master's hand had swung up, his face darkling. "What? Has it gone so far as this? They are out of control forward?"

"The dock officer, sir, has disappeared. Bohon is suspicious of something that he cannot put eye or hand upon." The lad stopped, as if he was not telling all. "And, sir, I would have a care how any of your party go above. It might be better if none suspect you are warned—"

The captain raised his hand: "Then, gentlemen, one at a time—to the steersman. Beluche, you follow! Clark, I count on you, sir!"

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Coolidge in First Message Favors Tax Reduction, Opposes Soldiers' Bonus.

TORIES LOSE IN ENGLAND

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

OUR national legislative mill reopened on Monday when the Sixty-eighth congress began its first session. Plenty of grist will be poured into its hoppers, but few if any laws will be ground out for several weeks. So slender is the present Republican majority that the group of progressives was able to block the organization of the house until assurance had been given that there would be opportunity for revision of the rules. Most of the group thereupon voted for the re-election of Speaker Gillett and the deadlock was ended. This took place on Wednesday, and the next day President Coolidge delivered in person his first message to the two houses.

Clearly and concisely, the President declared himself in favor of continuing our present foreign policy and therefore against the ratification of the covenant of the League of Nations. Said he: "The league exists as a foreign agency. We hope it will be helpful. But the United States sees no reason to limit its own freedom and independence of action by joining it. We shall do well to recognize this basic fact in all national affairs and govern ourselves accordingly."

Of the closely related question of American membership in the world court he said: "As I wish to see a court established, and as the proposal presents the only practical plan on which many nations have ever agreed, though it may not meet every desire, I therefore commend it to the favorable consideration of the senate, with the proposed reservations clearly indicating our refusal to adhere to the League of Nations."

Expressing earnest hope that the people of Russia will be restored to their position among the nations of the earth, Mr. Coolidge declared flatly that the soviet government would not be recognized by the United States so long as it refuses to recognize the sanctity of international relations, but he said he was willing to make large concessions, and that our government would offer no objection to the carrying on of commerce by Americans with the people of Russia. Concerning the war debts owed us by other nations, he said he did not favor their cancelation, but saw no objection to adjusting them as was done in the case of Great Britain.

Continuation of the policy of retrenchment and economy by the government was strongly urged, and so was the abolition of the right to issue tax-exempt securities. The President asked congress to avoid constant revising of the tariff law, promising to exercise his power to change the schedules whenever investigation showed this to be wise.

As had been predicted, the President whole-heartedly supported Secretary Mellon's recommendations for the reduction of taxes, saying that "of all services which the congress can render to the country, I have no hesitation in declaring this one to be paramount." He especially commended a decrease on earned incomes and further abolition of admission and message taxes. He also expressed opposition to excess-profits taxes.

After hearing this, congress waited expectantly for the part of the message dealing with the care of the veterans of the World war, and was not surprised when Mr. Coolidge closed that section with the words: "I do not favor the granting of a bonus." However, he declared himself in favor of much of the legislative program which the American Legion will present to congress.

Taking up the troubles of the wheat farmers, Mr. Coolidge said:

"Indirectly, the farmer must be relieved by a reduction of national and local taxation. He must be assisted by the reorganization of the freight-rate structure which could reduce charges on his production. To make this fully effective there ought to be railroad consolidations. Cheaper fertilizers must be provided. . . .

"I do not favor the permanent interference of the government in this problem. That probably would increase the trouble by increasing production. But it seems feasible to provide government assistance to exports, and authority should be given the War Finance corporation to grant, in its discretion, the most liberal terms of payment for fats and grains exported for the direct benefit of the farm."

Considerable space in the message was given to the coal problem. The President said he did not favor government ownership or operation of the mines, and continued: "The supply of coal must be constant. In case of its prospective interruption, the President should have authority to appoint a commission empowered to deal with whatever emergency situation might arise, to aid conciliation and voluntary arbitration, to adjust any existing or threatened controversy between the employer and the employee when collective bargaining fails, and by controlling distribution to prevent profiteering in this vital necessity."

PEACE between the "regular" and "progressive" factions of the Republicans in the house it is supposed will continue for 30 days, during which time the latter will have a chance to bring forward their proposals for the liberalization of the rules. They demonstrated during the deadlock over organization that they hold the balance of power, though they are few in number, but it is far from certain that they can line up enough Democratic votes to change the rules as they desire. The progressives voted, usually 17 strong, for Cooper of Wisconsin for speaker. The Democrats were solid for Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee, who thus becomes the minority leader. The leader of the majority is Nicholas Longworth of Ohio.

SUPPORTERS of President Coolidge for nomination next year were overjoyed last week by the news from South Dakota. In the Republican state proposal convention Mr. Coolidge was given the preference over Senator Hiram Johnson, his only opponent, by a majority of 28,039 out of 77,000 votes cast. Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas was the choice for vice president. The Democratic convention indorsed McAdoo by a vote of 39,018 against 5,072 for Henry Ford, and chose Judge James W. Girard of New York for second place on the ticket. The Farmer-Laborites were strongly in favor of the nomination of Senator La Follette. After the President's message was delivered the Hiram Johnson crowd felt a little better, for in it, as is told above, Mr. Coolidge declared himself flatly against the soldiers' bonus, while the South Dakota Republicans adopted a platform containing a strong bonus plank. This question may well develop into the deciding issue of the nomination campaign.

THE British parliamentary elections were held Thursday, and at this writing it appears that the Conservative party with its policy of a protective tariff has been defeated. Delayed returns from country districts may change this, but even then Prime Minister Baldwin would have a slender majority. The reunited Liberal party made considerable gains, and the Laborites, already the second in strength, won many new seats.

One notable feature of the election was the defeat of the women. They had a number of candidates, but only two appear to have won—Lady Astor and Miss Susan Lawrence, a Laborite. Arthur Henderson, one of the most prominent Laborites, lost his seat to a Liberal.

HAVING signed with the industrial magnates of the Ruhr an agreement for resumption of work and of payments in kind, and being urged by Belgium, the French last week began the virtual withdrawal of their forces from the occupied region. To start with, the occupation will be made "invisible," which means the troops will be withdrawn from the cities and towns to points outside. In addition, France is returning to German control twenty-one railway lines in the Ruhr and two repair shops. The French agree to recommend the most favorable action in the cases of railway workers who were expelled and rail employees in the occupied region will be paid the same wages as those in the rest of Germany. Altogether, the developments of the week indicated that Premier Poincare had adopted a conciliatory policy, and it was hinted that he might soon yield to Great Britain and America and consent to a discussion of the reduction of Germany's debt by the proposed committee of experts subject to the reparations commission.

Chancellor Marx so far is making good in Berlin, for he has induced the socialists to consent to the "enabling act" which gives him dictatorial powers if he needs them and thus may avoid the necessity of dissolving the legislative body. The socialists ceased to oppose the act on receiving a promise that any emergency measures should be submitted to an advisory commission of 21 deputies before being issued. It is reported that Germany has completed negotiations for a foreign loan of $125,000,000 to support the new permanent currency issue.

CIVIL war has broken out again in Mexico. In the states of Vera Cruz, San Luis Potosi, Chihuahua, Michoacan, Tamaulipas and Guerrero there is active rebellion against the government of President Obregon, the leader of the movement being Adolfo de la Huerta, the Co-operatista party's candidate for president. He and his helpers have told Obregon that they are revolting because the government is violating the sovereignty of the states and otherwise offending the institutions of the republic. Actually, it seems, De la Huerta's chief complaint is that Obregon is supporting Calles for election as his successor.

FEDERAL JUDGE WOODROUGH of Omaha has decided that prohibition agents are not civil officers in any strict or constitutional sense and are without lawful authority to serve search warrants.

Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition and tax cases, reports to Attorney General Daugherty that litigation over violations of federal laws is on the increase. Under the national prohibition act alone, she says, 49,021 criminal and 4,100 civil cases were begun during the last fiscal year—an increase of 15,389 over the previous year. Federal courts were unable to keep abreast of the number of cases brought, although 42,370 criminal cases were disposed of during the year, with 23,052 criminal and 4,064 civil cases left pending. Rum smuggling, Mrs. Willebrandt's report added, is "the most gigantic criminal problem the United States ever faced on the high seas."

NEWS from Russia is doubtful these days, but there has just come from Moscow a dispatch that is of vast importance if true. It says that Professor Joffe, Russian scientist, has discovered a method for making wire stronger than steel out of common rock salt. The discovery resulted after experiments in mutability of metals by structural chemistry. By submitting rock salt to high heat pressure before the elementary crystals began to decay he arrested the decay by changing the structural arrangement of the atoms and molecules, this change increasing the durability and ductability of the substance 300 times. It is stated that if the discovery can be applied to metals it will revolutionize the world.

ATTORNEY GENERAL DAUGHERTY has announced that criminal prosecutions will be begun as a result of the investigation, by his department and the special senate committee, of alleged irregularities in the conduct of the veterans' bureau under the former director, Colonel Forbes. Presumably the facts brought out will be placed before a federal grand jury.

Gen. Frank T. Hines, now director of the bureau, has sent out a call to the American Legion for aid in finding suitable employment for the rehabilitated ex-service men. There are approximately 71,000 men in vocational training, Director Hines declares, and within the next three months about 10,000 of these will complete their

Dairy Cow Should Have Best of Care in Fall

"Regular housing and barn feeding of the dairy cow should not be delayed too long in the fall," says T. W. Gullickson of the dairy division, University farm at St. Paul, Minn., "for unless she receives plenty of food and is kept in comfortable quarters a slump in her production is sure to occur with the change in season. A drop in production is always a serious matter, for it is well known to all experienced dairymen that when a loss of milk yield occurs it is almost impossible to bring production up to a high level again later, even if the cow is given the best feed and care.

"The stable in which the cow is to be kept should be cleaned and well bedded, broken windows and doors replaced or repaired, and the ventilation system put into working condition so that the change from outdoor and pasture life to that of the stable may be made as moderate as possible. The cow must be comfortable if she is to be profitable.

"The feed of the cow, always an important factor, is extremely so at this season. A splendid basis for her ration is found in the feeds that are usually grown on every dairy farm. Clover or alfalfa hay with corn silage furnish a very satisfactory roughage combination for the ration. It is economical to supply the hay in as large amounts as the cow will consume. Twenty to thirty-five pounds of silage, depending on the size of the animal, should be given from the first day of barn feeding for it will aid greatly in making easy the transition from pasture to dry feeding.

"In addition to the roughage the cow producing milk should receive some grain or concentrate feed. Corn and oats furnish an excellent basis for such a grain ration. It will usually, however, be found profitable to purchase other feeds to add to these. A combination of 300 pounds ground corn, 200 pounds ground oats, 200 pounds bran and 100 pounds linseed oilmeal will give good results. One pound of this mixture to every three pounds of milk produced is about the proper ratio for a Jersey or Guernsey cow, while the lower testing Holstein should receive only one pound for every four pounds of milk she gives. The quantity should vary from this rule with different individuals, some cows consuming a larger proportion of roughage than others and therefore requiring a trifle less concentrates."

Succulent Dairy Feeds Help Cattle in Winter

All dairy farmers know that their cows milk better and also are in their best physical condition on good spring pasture. It is necessary for the dairy farmer to remember this fact to realize that in order to get the greatest and most economical production from the milk cows and the most economical growth on the young stock he must imitate as nearly as possible June pasture conditions the whole year, says J. P. LaMaster, dairy chief at Clemson college, who reminds us that during the fall and winter months permanent pastures are dry and therefore do not have the stimulating effect always noticed during the spring season, when grass is tender and succulent and carries an abundance of desirable feed nutrients.

Important to Have Warm and Comfortable Barns

Unlike the beef animal, or other farm animals, the dairy cow is not blessed with a thick covering of flesh, says Horace M. Jones, extension dairy specialist at the South Dakota State college. Her substance goes into the milk pail and the natural protection of which she is thus deprived must be supplied in some other way. The only solution is to have a warm barn with no drafts and with a fairly even temperature. To make a barn warm does not mean the outlay of much money. Warm barns may be constructed or remodeled from old barns. Adding a layer of building paper, banking with straw, or building with sod will provide warm and comfortable quarters. The important features of light and ventilation must not be overlooked in the dairy barn.

Important Facts Found in Government Bulletin

Every dairyman should have "Blackleg: Its Nature, Cause and Prevention. Bulletin No. 1355," recently issued by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Cattle between the ages of six and eighteen months are affected especially by this rapidly fatal, infectious disease, but sucking calves and those past two years are rarely attacked. Such facts as these are brought out in the bulletin.

Valuable for Dairy Cows.

Alfalfa is exceedingly valuable for dairy cows and growing stock on account of its high protein content and its richness in mineral matter. For wintering brood sows it is also very desirable.

A TRULY GOOD MAN DEAD

Rev. J. E. Champion, the subject of this sketch, lived in the Pleasant Grove community, up near Jemison and was widely known and loved all over this part of the state.

For many years he has preached the gospel to the people in this section and has always served them faithfully in prosperity and adversity and in sickness and in health.

Many happy married people all over this country will fondly remember him as the man of God who united them in the sacred bonds of matrimony, and many families will be stricken with an extra sadness when they remember his gentle and tender ministrations and comfort to them in some sad hour when affliction brooded over their home.

Reverend Champion was a Baptist minister in whom there was no guile. Kind and considerate to his enemies, true and faithful to his friends, staunch in support of his Christian ideals and loyal, at all times to the God he so truly served, what more can be said.

He died last Saturday at his home and was tearfully and reverently laid to rest with Masonic Honors, attended by a large concourse of neighbors and friends the following day at the Pleasant Grove cemetery.

Truly his family, his friends, his community, his church and humanity at large have suffered an ereparable loss in his passing from "death unto life."

FIRE IN THE BEST SHOE SHOP

At 3:00 A. M. Tuesday the fire alarm was given and quite a crowd rushed down in town to find the rear end of the Best Shoe Shop in flames.

The proprietor, Mr. Wolfe, was away in Montgomery, having gone down there early Monday morning, to buy up a lot of fruit for his Christmas trade, as he operates a fruit and confectionary business in the same building. The store was locked up all day Monday and no person could get in, so there was no fire on the inside all day.

Mr. Wolfe lived in the rear end of the building and had quite a lot of expensive furniture, including an electric piano and an electric range, in his living department.

The fire originated in this part of the establishment and the fire fighters held it there. Nothing in the fruit, or business department, was damaged at all except by smoke and water.

The loss was quite heavy and we are not informed as to whether it was covered by insurance or not.

The origin of the fire is only speculative. Some believe it was fired from a back window while others rather incline to the belief that it was caused by crossed electric wires.

LETTER FROM DR. SAMUEL E. JOHNSON

We are printing below a letter we received from Dr. Samuel E. Johnson who is on a two-year cruise with Uncle Sam's naval forces:

Dear Sir:

I am enclosing a check for the paper for 1924. I don't think that it is quite due yet but as the paper is worth more I am sending the check to begin with the new year.

Please type write the address as it will travel between 5000 and 10,000 miles before I receive it, and probably one or two of them will go to the Philippine Islands and return before I receive it.

Very truly yours.

J. J. PICKENS LEAVES US

A large circle of friends are saddened this week by the fact that Providential circumstances have made it necessary for Mr. J. J. Pickens to bid us all good bye and go to the far distant northwest to make, perhaps, his future home.

The wife of Mr. Pickens was forced some months ago, to leave her many relatives and friends in this section and go to a higher and dryer climate for her health.

Mr. Pickens carried her to Denver, Colorado, and remained out there with her for several months. She seemed to improve in health, and, as all of his business interests were here, he left her at a sanitorium out there and returned to wind up his affairs, hoping that she would finally be able to come home. But her physicians are still afraid for her to make the change, so he is going to her out there.

Mr. Pickens is a live and hustling man of affairs and will hold his own in any country, but, at the same time we all deplore the sad necessity that calls him west.

He leaves the large men's class in the Baptist Sunday School without a teacher and his place will be difficult to fill.

With the very best wishes we are capable of making we bid Mr. Pickens a sad good bye.

GONE TO THE RIO GRANDE VALLEY

Quite a bunch of prominent citizens of Clanton and vicinity left Saturday night on an excursion to the wonderful Rio Grande Valley in South West Texas.

They are going to view out that section of country down there that has so suddenly sprung into notority as the Switzerland of America.

We could not obtain a full list of those going from here, but among the number are Messrs. C. B. Cox, H. F. Downs, Walter Popwell, John Patterson and Jas. Paterson. There are others from here and in Montgomery they will be joined by some 25 more now who are going on this trip to the far Southwest.

Some of them intend to extend their trip into old Mexico, provided the bullets are not flying too thick over there.

Mr. Cox says he is looking for a place where it don't rain all the time so he can build roads and if he finds it wet in that section he thinks he will look up Arizona where it never rains.

MRS. LETTIE CULP DIES

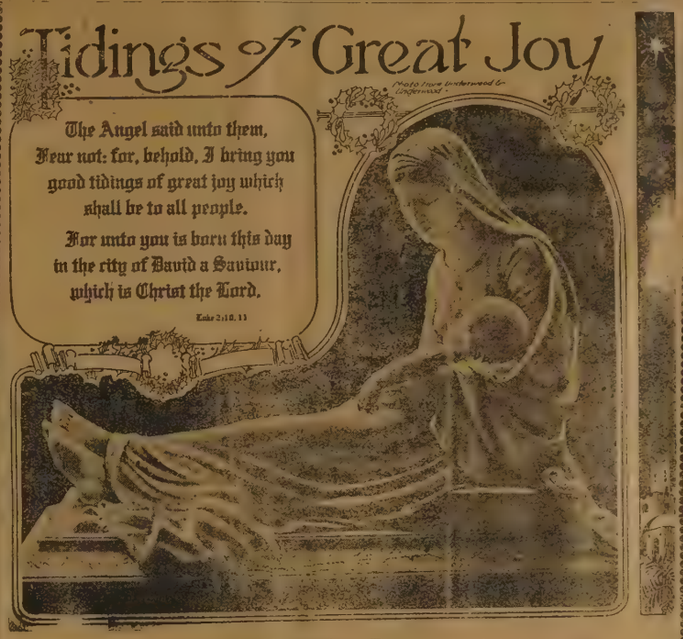
On last Monday Mrs. Lettie Culp, who lived out on Route 7 in the Mt. Nebo community passed over the dark river that divides time from eternity.

She was the widow of the late J. A. Culp, who died a few years ago and was in her 75th year of age.

The remains were buried at Mt. Nebo cemetery Tuesday forenoon, Rev F. A. Gibson officiating, assisted by Rev. W. S. Cox and Rev. Jones.

She leaves eight children, 4 boys and 4 girls, all of whom have reached the age of maturity.

Undertaker Martin, of Clanton, was in charge of the funeral.



Tidings of Great Joy
The Angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.
For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.
Luke 2:10, 11

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying.

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

AUTO AND BUGGY IN COLLISION

Late Saturday afternoon, as Mr. J. A. Burke and his daughter, of Route 7, were leaving town for home in their buggy they met Mr. Vernon Jones coming in driving his Ford.

Mr. Burke took the siding right in front of the home of Mr. Roper, in West End, but, for some reason, the vehicles did not clear and the car struck the front wheel of the buggy, throwing both of the occupants out, but, fortunately, neither of them were seriously injured.

Considerable damage was done to the buggy and one axle of the Ford was bent.

NO RURAL SERVICE ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Notice has been received from the Postoffice Department that rural mail carriers will not deliver mail on Christmas Day. Parcels and mail intended for delivery on rural routes should, therefore, be mailed earlier that no disappointment may come to those expecting mail on rural routes.

Regarding general delivery service at the postoffice at Clanton, Ala., on Sundays, I wish to call attention to the following from First Assistant Postmaster General: "Your attention is directed to the provisions of Section 282 and 283 of the Postal Laws and Regulations relative to the hours for transacting business at second class postoffices on Sundays. If it is the practice at your office to deliver mail to the general public on Sundays, it must be immediately discontinued." Patrons of Clanton, Ala., postoffice will take due notice, and goern themselves accordingly.

Very truly,
W. M. BEAN,
Postmaster.

SOMETHING NEW

During this week Mrs. C. L. Branch will open up, in the store building recently vacated by Mr. B. L. Jones, a real hot coffee, tea and chocolate parlor where you can get instant service at all hours of the day and evening.

She will also serve light and dainty lunches and confections to go with these steaming hot drinks when desired.

Mrs. Branch especially invites the lady shoppers from the country to call at her place and rest up while in town. Every comfort and convenience will be provided for her guests and she invites a call whether you spend anything or not.

We are glad to see the opening of this much needed establishment, not only for the opportunity it affords to secure a first class cup of hot coffee, tea or chocolate under quiet restful conditions, but as a rest room for the lady shoppers it should be especially appreciated.

We bespeak for Mrs. Branch the patronage of every reader of our paper and certainly hope that her new venture will meet with the patronage it deserves and will prove financially a success.

THE NEWS OFFICE GETS A FEED

Wednesday morning while the force in the News office were wondering what the bill of fare would be for dinner and making sundry long division calculations to determine in what cuasne direction a dime would go the furtherest, the entire matter was suddenly settled for us by the appearance of Mr. J. R. Short with a couple of those elephantine turnips for which he is famous.

They were so large that when we first beheld them, we thought that we must be asleep and that some monstrous Burbank imaginations were drawing fantastic dreams of impossibility in our mind.

Suffice it to say that the reality was more wonderful than any dream. The two turnips supplied both our families with all we could say grace over.

In behalf of the office force we wish to extend to Mr. Short our most sincere thanks, and may two bales of cotton always grow where he only expected but one.

OUR ADVERTISERS

This week the News is carrying quite a nice line of advertisements among the highest class mercantile establishments in the city.

You can not possibly need an article of whatsoever character or discription that is not included in the scope of the stocks represented here.

We are grateful to them for the liberal patronage and will be even more grateful to you if you will specialize a little this time and give them the benefit of your business.

You could not make us a Christmas present that would be more appreciated than by giving to these honorable and high class merchants your Christmas business.

You can do your paper an untold service by doing this and, at the same time feel assured that you are getting all that your dollar could buy anywhere.

These advertisers have the goods and they were bought to sell and the prices have been made to conform to a short crop. Call on them and tell them you saw their ad in the News.

MRS. M. L. WHITE ENTERTAINS FRIENDS

One of the prettiest affairs of the season for the recent brides, was the "honeymoon" shower given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. White for Mrs. R. L. Williams, Jr.

The White home on Second avenue would seem to need no further decoration, surrounded as it is by trees that are gay with autumn coloring, was beautifully decorated as a "pine forest.' Miniature pines, pine straw and blue birds everywhere, also gorgeous chrysanthemums and brides roses, lending their beauty and fragrance. The receiving line composed of Mrs. White, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. H. L. Davis, Mrs. H. W. Davis and Miss Gertie Mae Davis stood in the living room. The Brides' Book was kept by Mrs. John Armstrong and the cook book by Mrs. John Page. Little Misses Francis Davis and Priscilla Johnson dressed as blue birds carried the ribbons, which made the path, to the bride and told her to follow the path and find her way to happiness, which led her to a stately pine tree, where a beautiful blue bird was flying just above its nest with a message in its bill, telling her to look into the nest below where, lovely gifts were hidden.

A salad course with coffee was served. Assisting the hostess were Misdames, Cox, Hinkle, Hayes, Upchurch, McDavid, Elmore and Luckie.

CHRISTMAS GREETING

Before the News pays its next visit to your house you will have already eaten your Christmas turkey and even the crumbs will be about all disposed of, so we want to wait to each one of our readers personally our best and most sincere wishes for everyone of you that you may realize every wish of your heart this time and that this may be to each of you the happiest Christmas you ever spent.

May good cheer, good will and good fellowship be in every home and may each member of these homes vie with the other in seeing who can contribute the most real happiness to the general fund of that home.

May Santa Claus be especially generous and not forget to make every little heart that is throbbing, between hope and fear, in anticipation of that occasion of "good will to men," glad with a perfect fulfillment of its childish dreams.

Again extending to you each one the compliments of the season, the Chilton County News begs to wish for you all a Merry, Merry Christmas.

NOTICE TO TEACHERS

Owing to the length of the school term this year I am requested by Prof. C. R. Wood, Director of Extension of the State Normal at Jacksonville to announce to those teachers taking the Normal Extension Work that the dates for the meeting of this course has been changed so that the remaining meetings will come on the dates mentioned below, Dec. 22nd., Jan. 12th., and 26th. and Feb. 2nd.

Teachers will please take note of this change and be present at the next meeting, December 22nd.

Respectfully,
HOWARD L. FOSHEE,
County Supt. Education.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Eptiomized Form.

In the Phenix-Girard case the supreme court upheld the legality of the act extending the corporate limits of Phenix to include Girard, and abolishing the old government of Girard. A separate act providing that where the boundaries of a city are extended to include another town in another county, a commission form of government shall be established with a commission named by the governor, was held to be unconstitutional. The results of these decisions in the view of legal opinion, will leave Phenix and Girard consolidated minus their newly appointed city commission, and with the old aldermanic government of Phenix City, exercising authority over the enlarged town as the old government of Girard was abolished.

The Tennessee valley section of north Alabama was the leading cotton producing section of Alabama this year, according to an estimate by districts following the announcement from Washington that the total for Alabama was 600,000 bales. Production of cotton by districts as estimated by F. W. Gist, agricultural statistician for Alabama, follows: Northwest, 27,000; Tennessee valley, 104,000; mineral, 47,000; northeast, 55,000; west black belt, 45 000; east black belt, 77,000; east central, 90,000; southwest, 60,000; south central, 43,000; southeast, 97,000.

The 212 orphans at the Louise M. Short Baptist Orphans Home in Troy will be well remembered on Christmas morning. The B. Y. P. U. of the state asked for the privilege of adopting an orphan for Christmas. These requests came in to the superintendent, Rev. J. O. Colley, thick and fast, 60 being received in one day last week. A picture of the orphan adopted and name was sent to the adopter and Christmas packages will be mailed to them in care of the superintendent as early as possible.

The report of the Morgan county health unit for the month of November shows that during the month 500 pounds of meat were condemned, 296 laboratory examinations made, 27 venereal diseases treated and 10 sanitary drinking founts installed. During the months the department examined 800 public school children for physical defects. Out of this number, 772 defects were found and 100 have been remedied. The fall campaign of inspection among the school children has just been completed.

Road work in Walker county has been hampered recently by the discovery that one section of the local road law of 1907 in reference to prices fixed for day labor and for teams has never been repealed. The price of day labor was fixed at $1.50 per day and $3 for man and team. Of course, labor cannot be had at these prices nowadays, but the county commissioners have found a way to evade this handicap. Roads will be worked by contract, and the contractors will pay their road hands.

The Hartselle branch of the Morgan county court stands adjourned pending the outcome of a friendly suit, brought by S. A. Lynne, to test the constitutionality of the bill which created the court. Courthouse officials stated that for some time court action had been expected as to the validity of the law under which the Hartselle court has been operating.

Dr. R .T. Tyler, a member of the board of trustees of the Athens College, announced that a contract had been let for a $70,000 girls' dormitory to the Walker Construction company of Fayette, Ala. The building will be three stories, including the basement, and will accommodate 80 students. Work on the building will begin at once.

Altoona is erecting a 14-room house which is to be used as a home for the teachers of the public schools of that place. It is the second "teachery" to be built in the county, the first having just been completed at Gaston.

The Alabama public service commission will meet in Mobile Dec. 22.

Probably every rural school in Walker county has had one or more box suppers since the school begun and, according to county school officials, approximately $3,000 has been raised at the different schools.

Plans are being prepared for the construction of the first additional unit to the Birmingham Baptist Hospital, work to begin on or about Jan. 1, the first unit to cost approximately $400,000.

A peculiar accident occured in the Marylee community on Jasper route 4, when the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Chandler was playfully feeding some hay to a mule. The animal bit one of the little girl's fingers off. Joe Ford, who reported the accident, stated the child's finger is in such a bad condition more of it will have to be amputated.

A giant holly of a nearby forest is to be transplanted in Sansom park for the big community Christmas tree being promoted by the Axis club with the assistance of every religious and civic organization in Gadsden. A local forester will have charge of the work and he states the tree will live to be used for similar occasions in future years.

The [illegible] book is to have the smallest fireproof building in the world. It will be just large enough for one person of ordinary size and a roller top desk. The building will be on North Third avenue between Twenty-Second and Twenty-Third streets, and will serve as headquarters for checking, unloading and loading of freight cars.

If any of the heirs of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Romeo seek to break her will, they will automatically forfeit their inheritance, according to the terms of the will, filed in the Jefferson county probate office. The value of the estate is $30 000 and is divided among her six children, her husband being dead.

Authority to discontinue its freight and passenger agency at Maxine, Ala., and make it a prepay station, is asked by the Southern railroad in a petition filed with the public service commission. The commission also received a petition from the Central of Georgia asking permission to discontinue Peachburg as an agency station.

The tonnage fertilizer sold in Alabama in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1922, and ending Sept. 30, 1923, was the greatest since 1914, according to figures furnished from the state department of agriculture. The tonnage for the 1922-23 fiscal year was 436,786 tons, as compared with 295,429 in 1921-22.

The race for circuit judge in the eighteenth judicial district is looming up and promises to develop into a free fight for all with every county in the circuit furnishing one or more aspirants. A nominee will be selected next spring to fill out the unexpired term of the late Judge W. M. Lackey.

John Vinson, who claims to be physcultopractor, was fined $50 in two charges of practicing medicine without license in the county court at Albertville. He announces that he will appeal the case to the Marshall county circuit court and is prepared to go to the supreme court.

A report on available libraries in Walker county for the year 1923 has been made, which shows the following results: Thirty-three state and county aid libraries, 12 schools with individual libraries and 22 circulating libraries, all of which are being used by the children of the county.

Suspension of increased rates published by the Louisville and Nashville railroad and the Southern railway on canned goods shipped from the Pacific coast and other out-of-the-state points for distribution within Alabama, have been asked by the traffic department of the Mobile Chamber of Commerce.

The Tuscaloosa city commission has set Tuesday, January 18, as the date for the sale of $350,000 of the $500,000 worth of school bonds authorized in a recent election. This money will be used mainly for erecting a new high school building at a cost of about $280,000.

The concentration warehousing and reshipping privileges on cotton ordered by the Alabama public service commission effective Dec. 24, will become effective Feb. 1, 1924, according to announcement, application of order being postponed at the request of carriers.

At a special meeting of the city council of Eufaula to receive bids for the sale of bonds for the new $100,000 city school building these bonds were sold to Caldwell & Co. of Nashville, Tenn., and Birmingham, Ala., for 97, with accrued interest.

Birmingham's new court of common claims, created by special act of the legislature, was declared unconstitutional by the Alabama supreme court, in a decision reversing a former decision returned by Judge R. V. Evans, of the Jefferson county circuit court.

Seventy-three stockholders of the Tennessee Valley Country club voted unanimously favoring the issuance of bonds by the club to the amount of $[illegible] for further improvements. These bonds will be secured by mortgage on the club property.

The court of county commissioners of Marshall county has recently purchased several thousand dollars' worth of modern road machinery and equipment. Work is under way on the roads in all parts of the county.

A Chattanooga corporation is considering the erection of a $200,000 hosiery plant at Guntersville, which will carry a pay roll of $250,000 annually.

Judge Hugh D. Merrill announced that he would not accept the appointment as judge of the seventh circuit as the successor of Judge Agee, resigned.

The only new member of Congress from the south to receive appointment by the democratic caucus to a major committee was Representative Lister Hill of the Second Alabama district.

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 23

UNIVERSAL REIGN OF CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 9:6, 7; 11:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Ask me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."—Ps. 2:8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Christ, the Prince of Peace.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Promise of Peace on Earth.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christ's Kingdom, the Hope of the World.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Christ's Reign Means to the World.

The time is coming when Jesus Christ shall reign as King over the whole world.

I. The King (Isa. 9:6).

1. He is a Son of Man. "A child was born." The eternal Son became incorporated with the race in order to be its Savior and Lord. The King shall be of David's line, royal stock.

2. He is the Son of God. "A son is given." As the eternal Son of God He was not born, but given. This Son given is the mighty God, the everlasting Father. Being such, He will take the government upon His shoulders, assume all authority. He is wonderful. The world will marvel at Him. His kingdom will be different from all kingdoms because it will not be of this world. He is the all-wise Counsellor, therefore will make no mistakes in His conduct of the affairs of the kingdom. His kingdom will be a kingdom of peace. No hatred or fear will be known in His kingdom.

3. The King's Qualification (Isa. 11:2). The Holy Spirit shall rest upon Him in His sevenfold completeness. (1) "The spirit of the Lord"—that is a divine person proceeding from the Father and Son. (2) "The spirit of wisdom"—giving insight into all things, human and divine. (3) "Spirit of understanding"—that is the ability to see that which is of the highest and best. (4) "Spirit of counsel"—that is the ability to make plans. (5) "Spirit of might"—that is the ability to execute His plans. (6) "Spirit of knowledge"—that is the ability to perceive the will of God in all things. (7) "The fear of the Lord"—that is reverential and obedient fear.

4. The Character of the King (Isa. 11:3-5). Because of His divine anointing He shall be quick to understand goodness (v. 3). Because of this discernment the right will have recognition and the pretender to right shall be recognized and exposed. (2) He shall not judge after external appearances (vs. 3). (3) Shall not decide upon hearsay (v. 3). Each case shall be decided upon the basis of absolute and perfect knowledge. (4) He shall defend and avenge the poor and meek of all the earth (v. 4). The meek shall inherit the earth when the Messiah reigns (Matt. 5:5). (5) Shall smite the earth (v. 4). Those whom He smites are the ungodly inhabitants who are then in federation against Christ. The head of this federation is the Anti-Christ (II Thess. 2:8). (6) He shall have a zeal for justice and truth (v. 5).

II. The Nature of His Kingdom (Isa. 11:6-10).

This is a picture of the glorious Golden Age of which poets have sung and for which the wise men of all ages have longed and looked. There will then be peace, not only between men, but between animals.

1. The Wolf Shall Dwell With the Lamb (v. 6). The word "dwell" suggests intimacy as if the lamb should receive the wolf into its home. The only place and circumstance at present in which the wolf and the lamb dwell together is when the lamb is inside of the wolf.

2. The Leopard Shall Lie Down With the Kid (v. 6).

3. The Calf, the Young Lion and the Fatling Shall Be Together (v. 6). They are so gentle and peaceful that a little child can lead them.

4. The Cow and the Bear Shall Feed Together (v. 7).

5. The Lion Shall Eat Straw (v. 7)—no longer preying upon other animals.

6. The Sucking Child Shall Play Upon the Hole of the Asp (v. 8).

7. All Nations Shall Gather Unto Him (v. 10). The earth shall then be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

III. The Glorious Issue of the Kingdom (Isa. 11:10-12).

The glorious reign of Christ shall attract the Gentile nations. This is the real purpose of the kingdom, to attract the nations of the earth to Jesus Christ that they might be saved. The nations of the earth shall be brought to the place where they will recognize Christ because of the glory and perfection of His kingdom.

Our Gethsemane.

It is a great thing, when our Gethsemane hours come, when the cup of bitterness is presented to our lips, and when we pray that it may pass away, to feel that it is not fate, that it is not necessity, but divine love for good ends, working upon us.—E. H. Chaplin.

But One Book.

When Walter Scott came into the winter of his life, he said: "Bring me the Book." "What book?" he was asked. He answered, "There is but one Book."—The Wonderful Word.

DAIRY FACTS

Give Strict Attention to Feeding Dairy Cows

"In order to get economical production, farmers must pay strict attention to the feeding of their dairy cattle during the winter months, for feeding comprises more than one-half the cost of producing milk," says the dairy specialist at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture. "Home-grown feeds are the cheapest feeds the dairyman can get, and roughages, even at the high price of hay, are the cheapest of home-grown feeds. Alfalfa, clover and corn silage are the best milk producers; yet mixed hay and stalks can be fed to advantage if they are present on the farm.

"Those who have a supply of corn ears are fortunate. Corn and cob meal should furnish the basis of the ration. By the purchase of bran or oats and a few high protein concentrates a good milk-making ration can be compounded according to the following recommended proportions: Ten pounds of alfalfa or clover hay, 30 pounds of corn silage with all the bright stalks the cow will clean up daily, together with 600 pounds of corn and cob meal, 300 pounds of bran or oats, 200 pounds of gluten, 100 pounds of cottonseed meal, and 100 pounds of oil meal. The cost of this mixture will vary, depending upon local prices.

"If neither alfalfa nor clover hay is available it will be necessary to double the amount of linseed or cottonseed meal. If no silage or succulent feed is being fed, linseed meal should be substituted for the cottonseed meal. It is advisable also to feed beet pulp at the rate of three pounds per cow if silage is not available. The beet pulp should be fed when in a soaked condition.

"There is a distinction between cottonseed meal and cottonseed feed. Cottonseed feed contains a large proportion of hulls and has a very inferior feeding value, and should not be purchased if cottonseed meal can be bought.

"It is always poor economy to underfeed dairy stock; feed them enough to keep them in a good, thrifty condition. Cows in milk should be fed all the roughage they will eat and, in addition, one pound of grain daily for each three and one-half pounds of milk they give each day."

Uniform Laws Urged to Stop Spread of Disease

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

At the recent World's Dairy congress, held at Washington, D. C., Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, suggested to the delegates that efforts should be made to obtain some uniformity in the laws of the various countries regulating international trade in live stock. Some move of this sort is needed now, said Doctor Mohler, because of the great extent of international trade in live stock, and because of prevalence of destructive animal diseases in many parts of the world.

Certain fundamental features which probably would be desirable for all countries were brought out in the statement made to the delegates. It was suggested that each country engaged in domestic and foreign commerce in live stock and its products should establish a competent veterinary service, and failing to do this should have no right to expect its animals to be received in other countries; provisions should be made to prevent the spread of contagious diseases in the country, the introduction of infection from abroad, or the transmission of diseases to other countries; and there should be an international co-operative system of exchange of information in regard to animal health in the various countries.

All Insanitary Dairy Practices Unprofitable

Below are listed a few practices which are insanitary, injurious and unprofitable for the dairy farmer:

To milk cows that have dirty flanks and udders, so that at every movement of the milker, dirt falls into the milk pail.

To milk with wet hands, so that the milk, saturated with filth, falls into the milk pail.

To use separators and utensils which have not been thoroughly sterilized and aired.

Pouring freshly separated cream into previous skimmings before cooling.

Keeping cream in root cellars, pantries, kitchens, stables, back porches or in any room where bad air exists.—L. K. Crowe, Animal Husbandry Department, Colorado Agricultural College.

Rapidity Is One of Big Essentials in Milking

Tests have shown that rapidity is one of the essentials in milking a cow. Massaging the cow's udder with the hand excites nervous action which in turn stimulates action of the milk glands. The more rapid the massage movements, the greater is the nervous stimulation of gland action, and a greater amount of milk will be yielded. Not only is the quantity of milk increased, but the faster the milk is drawn the richer it is in butterfat.

MONUMENT OF OLD BRITAIN

Pile of Stones Found in Wheat Field Supposed to Be Part of Shaft Erected in 455.

In the year 1827 a citizen of London spent a holiday at Hollingsbourne in Kent, and under date of July 26 of that year he writes in his diary: "This morning about nine o'clock, in company with Mr. West and Eliza, started in Mr. West's chaise for Chatham. The principal object which arrested my attention on my way thither over Boxley hill was a large pile of stones in a wheat field by the roadside, and on inquiry found it was Kits Coty house.

"Antiquarians tell us that in the year 455 a battle took place between the Britons and Danes on the banks of the Medway at Aylesford, and the stones now remaining are supposed to be part of a monument then erected.

"Upon examination you see two immense stone slabs, each nine tons' weight, fixed on the end in the ground, and inclining toward each other. Another slab is between them for support, and one great stone, of more than twelve tons, lies as a roof transversely over all, making a kind of cell about seven feet each way and the same in height. The stones have no marks of the chisel about them."

The manner of rearing these piles was somewhat ingenious. According to antiquarians, a mound of earth was raised, ascending by a gradual slope. Up this the stones were conveyed on rollers, and dropped by the ends into holes which had been previously dug to receive them. The impost was then placed across them, and the earth removed nearly to the level of the ground; but for this device it would have been impracticable to have raised a stone (the greatest length of which, in the present instance, is twelve feet, and the thickness little less than two feet throughout) to the height of several feet, and this without any description of mechanic powers.

Today Kits Coty house stands as it did when this writer so carefully described it ninety-six years ago. In all probability, however, this cromlech had its origin long before the year 455, and it may even date back to the Stone age.

As to its name, it is possible that this monument was styled "Kits Coty house" (sometimes spelled "Kitts Coty house") during the Middle ages. A Kentish rhyme, of medieval origin, refers to "Kit" going to Canterbury, and it is not at all improbable that Kit was a popular name among the pilgrims who would travel along the Pilgrims' way (an old track running from Winchester to Canterbury), which crosses this very hillside only a few hundred yards down the hill.—Christian Science Monitor.

Agriculture Department Fashion Note

Most useful and attractive coats and sleeveless jumpers, with hats to match, can be made from veal skins, which can be tanned without the hair at a reasonably low cost, an Agriculture Department Bulletin says. Many useful and marketable articles are also made from lamb, sheep and goat skins. A club woman in northwest Oklahoma recently made herself a very beautiful horsehide coat which she believed would have cost at least $50 if she had bought it ready made. She spent only $9 for tanning and a small additional amount for the sateen lining.

HOLLAND LAND OF PLUMP CHILDREN

Dutch Government Demands They Be in Bed by 9 O'Clock.

Dutch boys and girls are in bed by 9 o'clock, at least in The Hague. A paternal government sees to it that they have to go to bed. There is nothing else for them to do.

The other night, says a writer, we dined at one of the largest restaurants in The Hague. Not a boy or girl was to be seen. No one was being treated by auntie or uncle, or dining with father and mother, just for once!

We went to see the film of "Monna Vanna," harmless enough surely, and preceded by one of those rollicking pictures in which people fall off roofs into tubs of water or get buckets of paint inverted on their heads. I missed the shrill shrieks of delighted children, hearing instead only bass guffaws. The notice confronted me as I went out:

"Children under eighteen not admitted."

In fact, children less than eighteen can go nowhere in the evening in The Hague. No theater will admit them; the restaurants and picture houses are closed to them, and very soon dancing will be forbidden to them.

Certainly the Dutch boys and girls look wonderfully healthy and happy. Going to bed early agrees with them. If their looks are any criterion. I can scarcely believe that there exists a thin Dutch child.

How, indeed, can they be thin when they drink so much milk?

School children begin the day with about a pint of new milk, warm in winter, cold in summer. With it they eat five or six slices of bread and butter. That keeps them going until they come home from school at 12 o'clock, when another pint of milk has to be drunk and five or six more slices of bread and butter eaten.

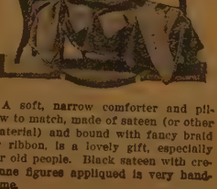
The big meal of the day, dinner, is eaten at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when school is over. After the home lessons are finished the school child drinks another huge glass of milk before going to bed.

"What happens if the children don't like milk?" I asked the mother of a large family, who was dispensing breakfast to her boys and girls.

I saw the children exchange glances.

"They have to like it," replied the mother, pouring out a glassful calmly, as she spoke.—London Mail.

Comforter and Pillow



A soft, narrow comforter and pillow to match, made of sateen (or other material) and bound with fancy braid or ribbon, is a lovely gift, especially for old people. Black sateen with cretonne figures appliqued is very handsome.

The Christmas Spirit

by Katherine Edelman

Who would not be merry, who would not be glad, when all over the earth there can be heard the jingle of Santa Claus' sleigh bells, the patter of his reindeer's hoofs and the chuckle of the jolly little man?

Who would not be merry when everywhere we see eager, expectant little children, their eyes and feet dancing in happy expectation of the joy which they know is coming?

Who would not be merry and glad at the sight of full stockings by the chimney, the gaily-ornamented tree with gifts on every bough?

Who would not be merry and glad at the thought of the gathering and feast that make Christmas a celebration of the home and of family ties?

Who would not be merry when everywhere we look we see men and women at their very best, filled deep with the spirit of love and giving—when everybody seems to have been touched by the magic hand of Christmas?

Who would not be merry when in every home there is happy whispering and planning and streets and shops are filled with a gladsome throng all bent upon the most unselfish mission in the world: to help bring joy to others?

Who would not be merry and glad when the whole country is radiating peace and joy and good cheer: when the Christmas spirit has spread itself like an encircling mantle over the nation?

Who would not be merry and glad and of good cheer in the conviction that some day, when the Christian citizen serves God in relation to his home his community and his nation, there will be literally "On earth peace, good will toward men."?

A half truth is often more hurtful than a black lie.

A deceitful friend is more dangerous than an open enemy.

If you live in a glass house you are setting a dangerous example—by throwing stones.

There are not enough fatalities in basket ball to make it figure much as front page stuff.

Bobbed hair, breeches, cigarettes and cuss words go into the make up of the average flapper.

Road and sidewalk building is taking a vacation—not for Christmas, however—but to accommodate the weather.

Don't say anything about it, please, but our country is always represented at the League of Nations sessions.

Spain and Italy have formed an alliance. Macaroni and onions. What a combination.

Any able bodied young man who [illegible] to commit suicide can now find enlistment in the aviation service.

The trouble with the fellow who tells all he knows is that he soon finds himself "out of soap" and has to go to lying to keep up the conversation.

If all of the days on earth were as horribly disagreeable as last Saturday and Sunday, death would be robbed of half its terrors.

Who will Al Smith give his New York delegates to at the convention It is conceded that he will have at least a half dozen.

It is whispered that Underwood will have an opposing Alabama candidate after the holidays. So much for the wisdom (?) of the Alabama legislature.

Money is a great thing but not worth half as much as good friends. It requires some effort and application to have either, however.

One good thing about wet Christmas weather is that it greatly reduces the fire risk from the indiscriminate use of fireworks.

Saw a lady the other day blessing a boy out about chunking a "poor harmless dog," and she had the hides off of about four "harmless" fox around her neck. "Consistency thou art a jewel."

It is said that Hiram Johnson has seads of money behind him in his race for president. If he has, "Silent Cal" better open up both his mouth and his friends' purse.

"Whipping the devil around the stump" is a fine art with some folks, but in the end the devil always swaps work with you.

"Possum parties" are all the rage in some of the elite social centers now. Utterly out of date. We used to have girl and boy possum hunts 40 years ago.

The indications are that this Christmas will be conspicious by the absence of the proverbial egg nogg. Gillespie got around in the wrong time.

Mexico is making arrangements to have their customary Christmas festivities. They are enjoying a full grown revolution over there again.

Congress is working 45 minutes per day so far this session. They are making short days on full pay. This ought to be a favorable time for union labor to ask for what it wants.

Alabama farmers could get rich if they were organized and had a co-operative market system established. Sugar cane syrup is worth $1.75 per bucket, wholesale, in Baltimore and cured sweet potatoes $2.25 per bushel in Philadelphia.

How strange. We find that a majority of the farmers have it in their heart to try for another bumper cotton crop next year. Providence saved them this year, but we never know when Providence is going to allow experience to learn us something.

WHAT'S IN A NAME

While the president and his republican backers strenuously disclaim any intention of [illegible] of Europe at this, or [illegible] the fact still remains that our government is now, and has been since the war, taking an active, and at the same time, a cowardly part in all the foreign deliberations by whatever name you may call them. We have been forced by circumstances to be represented on every international conference that has been held since the war, just as Woodrow Wilson realized from the first that we would have to be, but instead of coming out boldly and honestly, as befitted a great nation like ours, the venom entertained by the republican rulers for that great democratic statesman, has forced our country to sneak in to these world conclaves like a thief, and cringe and whisper the wishes of America like some craven pauper.

The United States has over seven billion dollars of borrowed [illegible] at stake in Europe and it is the height of superlative folly for politicians to cry "stay out of foreign entanglements."

We have not stayed out as yet and will not stay out as long as that seven billion dollar debt remains unpaid. Then, for the sake of decency, quit harping about a condition that is a palpable lie on the face [illegible] been ever since Hiram Johnson, and a few other post graduate politicians began preaching their so-called gospel of "isolation."

The part the United States has played so far in the awful tragedy across the waters has made it the target for more unkind abuse by the foreign nations than any policy they could have pursued.

The only sane thing for our country to do is to come forth honestly and boldly and go in to these world affairs, not only as a matter of business, but as a controlling influence in stabelizing world affairs, and putting the various nations on a business basis and policy that will end wars and create a self-interest and business amity between them that will tend to peace, happiness and prosperity for all the world. The way to keep out of future wars is to [illegible] to it that justice is done to all and that the only safety that awaits the world is a policy of understanding on a business basis.

JEFFERS GETS COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS

It is gratifying to us and to all of Congressman Jeffers constituents to note that he is already climbing [illegible] in the halls of congress.

Though comparatively a [illegible] as well as young congressman, his sterling worth and ability is already pushing him towards the top.

He is now the ranking democratic member on both the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President and Representations to Congress, and the committee on Reform in the civil service. [illegible] member of two other important committees.

Mr. Jeffers is destined to make his mark high up on the roster of public men who live close to the people and whose paramount [illegible] to serve his country and his constituents to the very best that is in [illegible]

The News congratulates him sincerely on his progress and will always follow his career with its very best wishes.

HOW ABOUT CHILTON COUNTY?

It is [illegible] that the [illegible] next week to repair the present B & M. highway from Marbury to Reese's bridge.

Chilton will then be alone in its glory as the only county along the line that has no highway.

If we can manage to get either to Calera or Marbury though they are not going to object to us using the highway in emergencies. That's fine.

Yayui Indian chief went down to tell President Obregon that his tribe were going to join the rebels. A firing squad replied to him [illegible] evidently other [illegible] rebellion over there if they can catch it.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

It is gratifying to see such an absolute unanimity among all of the large industrial concerns, as well as the large bankers and other leading spirits of the financial world in regard to the business outlook for another year.

The great iron and steel plants are already boasting of having orders already booked to carry them well over the first half of 1924.

The bankers claim that collections have been wonderfully good and that no tightness of the money market for any time soon is indicated.

The railroads are boasting of the biggest business they have ever enjoyed and that freight shipments are increasing so rapidly that it will require an [illegible] $4,000,000,000 to bring the equipment of the roads up to a point that they can successfully handle the business being offered.

The great packing companies report the biggest business they have ever done and with no prospect of a let up in sight.

The textile manufacturers are also highly pleased with their present business and very optimistic of the future.

Now, it looks like that such an array of expert opinion as this could not be mistaken, nor we don't believe they are and we feel greatly cheered by the prospect of this continued period of prosperity,

America is the greatest land on earth and seems to be especially blessed and taken care of by Providence. Let us not grow "chesty" over our wonderful good fortune, but rather, let us humble ourselves "before the great Ruler of all things and let our hearts breath a spirit of thankfulness with every throb.

ANNUAL MEETING OF TELEPHONE CO.

Monday morning the stockholders of the local Peoples Telephone Co. met at the court house in their annual session for the purpose of electing officers for another year and the transacting of any other business that might come before them.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

W. W. Fox, president; Dudley Coll[illegible]is, vice-president, G. C. Armstrong, sec-treas.

The same rules and regulations that have been in force the present year were adopted for another season.

The affairs of the company seem to be in good shape and the spirit manifested at the meeting indicates a determination to make the service constantly better and better.

THE DAY OF POLITICS

Have we one single really conscientious statesman in public life today? If so, where is he, who is he and what is he doing?

It is a sad commentary on our country today that the most sacred precepts and promulgations of our fundamental scheme of a free government, as incorporated in the original constitution given us by our forefathers, have become merely the powers used by our politicians in playing a selfish personal and party game of supremacy in being able to control the patronage and the spoils of office.

It has been years and years since any vital legislation was handled in our congress, by all parties, in a disinterested desire to do the "greatest good to the greatest number." The paramount, and in most cases, the only question ever discussed, or even considered, in the framing and passing of laws is: "How will it affect the vote? Will it be a winner at the next election?"

Class is weighed against class by the political law makers and laws are made accordingly. The republicans decided in the last campaign that "Big Business" could sway the electorate. They guessed right that time, and as a reward for "Big Business," for delivering the goods all of the legislation of the present administration has been shaped to please and enrich "Big Business' at the expense of the balance of the people.

If the farmer and the labor vote would combine in earnest and stick together they could easily control the elections and, in consequence, they could have such laws passed as pleased them, even at the expense of this same powerful boss, "Big Business."

The question of disinterested statesmanship is never involved any more in framing laws. All of our supposed constructive legislation at Washington is for sale to the highest bidder in votes these days.

That is why our country is losing its prestige abroad and the respect of its citizens at home. Big, broad, brainy statesmen like Morgan, Pettus, Ben Hill, Crisp, Thurmond, and numerous other who used to make their voices heard around the world in dissecting and vivvascting the glorious ideals of our country of freedom and made only laws that were just to all classes, have passed from the scene and the day of the political tradesman has dawned. Our country is for sale now to the highest bidder.

WALNUT CREEK NEWS

Sunday, Dec. 9., was our regular preaching day. We are always proud for our preaching day to come for we know that we are going to hear something that will do us good. We know when we see Rev. G. B. Golden take the stand there is something coming that will reach every heart. It is indeed a pleasure to hear him, so come on brethren and friends and get your part.

Our Singing Society also met Sunday afternoon, called to order by Chairman A. E. Powell, prayer by Rev. G. B. Golden. Directors for the afternoon were Prof. O. L. Devaughn, Grover Smith, two songs each; quartette by O. L. Devaughn and L. T. Grant; W. M. Devaughnand L. T. Grant two songs each; quartette by J. A. W Mims, Bessie; Mims, R. E. Powell Enoch Mims, Beatrice Mims, two songs each; quartette arranged by O L. Devaughn; Ralph Grant two songs. Closed with quartette by Chairman.

Organist for the afternoon were Miss Elveree Maddox, Mrs. Beatrice Mims, and Mr. Ralph Grant. We had a larger crowd than usual and extra good singing. We are certainly indeed proud to have Cooper quartette with us and cordially invite them back again. We also invite all singers and lovers of music to ome and take a part with us.

Dismissed by Bro. Golden.

READING TESTS GIVEN IN COUNTY SCHOOLS

Editor of the Chilton County News,
Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

Two weeks ago Miss Clara Pitts of the Dept. of Education, Montgomery, Alabama spent several days in our county giving reading tests to the 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th grade pupils in one-fifth of the schools of this county. I feel that the results of these tests should be known by the people of the county since Miss Pitts did not know any pupils of the county and her tests, therefore, were given with impartiality.

The schools were selected in such manner as not to give preference to the better ones, that is, she had me make an alphabetical list of all the schools according to the number of teachers employed then she took every fifth school from these groups. The one-teacher schools were Adams, Shestnut Grove, Culp, Free Springs, Lock Twelve, Mullins, Popwell, the two-teacher schools selected were Freeman, Mt. Pleasant, Providence, Vermont, the three and four-teacher schools selected were Concord, a three-teacher school, and Collins Chapel, a four-teacher school. The consolidated schools were Jemison and Stanton.

The score of each individual pupil tested in these schools was averaged to get the score for the school and the score for each school was as follows:

Jemison 74% of expected score.
Free Springs 72% of expected score.
Lock 12 71% of expected score.
Concord 64% of expected score.
Providence 62% of expected score.
Stanton 62% of expected score.
Mt Pleasant 62% of expected score.
Freeman 59% of expected score.
Mullins 59% of expected score.
Vermont 58% of expected score.
Collins Chapel 56% of expected score.
Culp 55% of expected score.
Popwell 44% of expected score.
Chestnut Grove 42% of expected score.
Adams 40% of expected score.

The median score for the county at large was 59% while the median score for consolidated schools was 67.5%, for three and four-teacher schools 62%, for two-teacher schools 58% and one-teacher schools 49.5%.

Now, as to the significance of these figures. Jemison, which is one of our best consolidated schools heads the list with the highest score, 74%, and Adams, a [illegible] the other extreme with a score of 40%. It seems to me that, this in itself is sufficient proof of the advantages received by the child in the large consolidated schools. There are two exceptions in the list which should be noticed, first that Free Springs, a small one-teacher school in the northwest part of the county made the second highest score, even higher than some of the large schools but this school also has the distinction of furnishing the pupil that made the highest grade on the county 7th grade examination by any pupil from a one-teacher school, therefore, they have either had splendid teachers in the past or the pupils of that community are exceptionally bright. Lock 12, another small one-teacher school stood third on the list but this school since it was first started several years ago, has had a nine months term every year, has one of the best teachers in the county and is the best equipped one-teacher school in the county so it should rank higher than those schools which have short terms and poor equipment.

The results of these tests are no reflection on the present teachers since they had not been there long enough when the tests were made to teach the children all that they should know for their age and grade and neither does it show so much the failure of former teachers to do their work properly but it does show that with the crowded course of study [illegible] and two-teacher schools of the county are not giving the boys and girls the advantages that they deserve. If better teachers could be furnished such schools, then the results would doubtless show up better than they do.

Miss Pitts will visit our county again in the Spring and give other tests to some of these same schools and [illegible] other school [illegible] county and I want to ask the teachers to especially stress the work in reading for the remainder of this term so that when the tests are made in the Spring, no school may fall below 50% and that some may go above 75% of the expected score.

I want to ask the trustees and patrons to cooperate with me and the Board in seeing that the schools of the county do more effici[illegible] year than they have been doing in the past.

Respectfully,
HOWARD L. FOSHEE,
County Supt. Education.

THE SHERIFF SAYS A WORD

Editor Chilton County News:

We are having numerous calls to go to box suppers and have been attending all we could, however we do not think it our duty. The trustees should look after their schools and when any disturbance occurs get warrant and we will do our duty then.

Yours truly,
T. J. LITTLEJOHN,
Sheriff.

Forcing the Issue

Mrs. Carter dropped in at the office for a few minutes' chat with her husband.

"John," she remarked, "I think you had better discharge that stenographer you have now. I am sure she has been trying to flirt with you ever since she has been here."

Mrs. Carter, when she said this thought the stenographer was safe out of hearing—but she wasn't! She stepped to the door of the private office and vented her indignation:

"Madam, I'll have you know that I wouldn't flirt with your old husband for a million dollars."

Mrs. Carter was aghast.

"Now, John," she exclaimed, 'you simply must discharge that girl, She has insulted you."—Kansas City Star.

The American Outclassed

The American truth teller was in form. "Talking of ants," he said, "we've got 'em as big as crabs out west. I've seen 'em fight with long horns which they used as lances, charging each other like savages."

"They don't compare with the ants I saw in the Far East," said an inoffensive individual nearby. "The natives have trained them as beasts of burdens. One of 'em could trail a ton load for miles with ease. They work willingly, but occasionally they turned on their attendants and killed them.'

But this was not drawing the long bar too far.

"I say old chap,' said the shocked voice from the corner, "what sort of ants were they?"

"Eleph-ants" replied the inoffensive individual.—London Tid Bits.

A RAINY CHRISTMAS

The weather man in giving out his dope for next week deals us rather an ugly hand out for the Christmas holidays.

He says it will be cold and rainy the first part of the week, then a little sunshine and the week will go out with another rainy blizzard.

There is some consolation however, in the fact that the weather man is noted more for his failures to hit it right than for his success as a reliable prophet.

SURVIVAL OF THE FULLEST

In the early days of the temperance cause its workers were always on the scent for total abstinence. Having heard of an old evidence as to the physical advantages of man who had attained the ripe age of 96 and had never touched a drop of liquor, a committee was rushed to his home to get his sworn statement to that effect. They had just propped him up in bed, and were guiding the feeble, trembling old hand along the dotted line when they were startled by a violent disturbance in the next room—scuffling of feet, falling of heavy furniture and breaking of crockery. "Good heavens, what's that?" asked a committeeman. "Oh," whispered the old man as he sank back exhausted from his effort, "that's father, he's drunk again."—Pacific Drug Review.

THOUGHTS FOR YOUNG FOLKS

The commandment says' "honor thy father and mother that thy days may be long on the land which the Lord, thy God, giveth thee."

Now listen. It is a proven fact that this command is observed in almost every Jewish family in the world unto this day. Now here is what ought to make the average gentile boy and girl set up and take notice. By going to any city you may choose and looking through the cemeteries you will discover very few headstones in the Jew cemeteries indicating the death of a young person. The monuments near all tell of people who died at a ripe old age. But in the gentile cemeteries you will discover an entirely different story. Nearly half of the head stones tell of the resting place of some young person.

These are the established facts and they seem to point very clearly to the fact that the commandant given seven thousand years ago is illustrating the absolute truthfulness of its warning even in our day

Gentile children are noted for their disrespect to their parents, and the cemeteries are gruesome reminders to the thoughtful of the effect of their disrespect on their longevity.

WHAT'S HE GOING TO GET?

The question that naturally suggests itself to the average man is, how much, or what, is Senator Bruce of Maryland, going to get for voting with the republicans, when his vote meant the election of the democratic aspirant to that committee job in Washington the other day?

Senator Bruce voted consistently for his party candidate until he saw that the next ballot was going to put him over, then he changed and voted with the republicans and elected their man, Cummins.

His home constituents, who elected him to congress, will doubtless want a better reason than the lame one he is putting out.

In making his choice of evils he evidently choose the greater and proved traitor to his own party at the same time.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS ADOPT ORPHANS

A plan worked out by Rev. J. O. Colley, Superintendent of the Baptist Orphanage at Troy, and Emmett Moore, Baptist State Sunday School Secretary for Alabama, offers the privilege to each Sunday School of adopting an orphan for one month at a cost of $15.00 or for as many months as each respective school may desire at the same rate. The word, adopt, herein meaning only that the school shall contribute funds enough to support an orphan for a month or more. The plan carries the idea of a Christmas program and a Christmas offering at which time the money can be raised.

Many letters of acceptance have been received by Rev. Colley and Mr. Moore and they expect to have all the orphans adopted for one month or more before the Christmas season is over. Two hundred seventeen bright eyed boys and girls without father or mother are being cared for in this new, well equipped institution.

Many Sunday Schools offer to adopt one orphan for a whole year at a cost of $180.00. The Superintendent of the Orphanage promises a letter from the adopted child to each Sunday School having a part in this wonderful [illegible]

Mrs. C. H. Vinson, her two daughters and little son, left on No. 3 Thursday evening last week to join her husband in Dequency, La., where they will make their future home.

Mr. Vinson and his son left some weeks ago and obtained good positions in the turpentine business over there and he is so well pleased with prospect over there that he has decided to make it his permanent home.

A PLEASANT CALLER

Editor Bullard, of the United Farmer, of Blytheville, Ark., was a pleasant caller at our office Saturday.

Editor Bullard is preeminently the man for the job, being an enthusiastic friend of the farmer and intensely alive to their very best interests.

He says the U. F. of A. is bound to stand the test of time and grow, with the years, to be the strongest real labor organization in the United States.

There is no doubt but what this splendid order gives the farmer his chance to become independent and prosperous if they will only unite and "stick to the boat."

ACCIDENTALL SHOT

We learn that Mr. Cary Robinson, who lives about 8 miles below town, in the Providence community, happened to the misfortune of geting a 22 calibre rifle bullet accidentally fired into his knee last Thursday.

We hear that Mr. Robinson at the time of the accident, was hunting about 7 miles up Hatchett Creek, over in Coosa county. He did not succeed in getting home and under medical attention until about 9:30 Friday night.

Dr. Gragg, who was called in Friday night, found the wound considerably inflamed and Mr. Robinson suffering a good deal of pain.

The doctor does not think anything serious will result from the wound, though Mr. Robinson will probably be "off his feet" for some little time.

Mr. Jno. Rogers, chairman of the Highway Commission, said in his speech Saturday that Chilton county, within 10 years, would be one of the wealthy counties of the state. He said we were bound to come out of the crack whether we wanted to or not.

CAN SOON MOVE HOME

Dr. Wilkerson is pushing the work on the large basement department of the new Methodist church as rapidly as possible.

When he gets it completed he is going to put the piano in and then his congregation will move in and hold their services there until the sumptious upper floors are completed.

This is a wise plan, for churches are like everything else, that is worth while—they prefer home to any other place.

Next spring, when this splendid building is completed we hope our Methodist friends will make a pull to get the next session of the annual conference to meet here just to show them that we have about the best church building in the state.

Dr. Geo. H. Thigpen, the splendid and faithful manager of the Masonic Home at Highland, Montgomery was a welcome visitor to Clanton one day last week.

"THE SKINNERS SKUN"

Sunday evening after the glimmer of the street lights were vainly trying to pierce the fog and mist of a wintry day, a lonely oil lamp shot its feeble rays out through a couple of uncurtained windows at a colored restaurant on North 6th street.

The ever vigilant eyes of Sheriff Littlejohn and Chief Retherford caught the glimmer and curiosity led them to look through the dirty window panes. On the inside, in plain view of the sidewalk, a bunch of colored card artists were engaged in an interesting "skin game." The glitter of silver and sombre green of bank notes added an additional charm to the scene and the two officers decided they would "get in the game." The door was rudely shoved open and the arm of the law reached out and gathered into its embrace the following colored wooers at the feet of fortune: Fletch McCall, Gink Pleasance, Ike Goldsmith and Cliff Oden. There were other onlookers in the room but they were allowed to go. The quartette named, we learn, have made bond and are at liberty.

CHRISTMAS
and the Railroads
"At Christmas play, and make good cheer,
For Christmas comes but once a year". —Tusser.
—and what is more instrumental in making conditions favorable for play and good cheer throughout the land than our railroads?
Christmas is the time for visiting and going home; the railroads make visiting and home-going feasible and a pleasure. Christmas is a time for presenting gifts, and for feasting and frolicking; the railroads are the mediums through which the exchange of presents between all sections of the country is made possible; the railroads make possible, too, the possession of nearly all the good things to eat and the things with which to make merry, that are part of the season.
The L. & N. Railroad is ready for Christmas—with numerous splendid trains, running on convenient schedules, for passengers who will make Christmas the occasion for a travel holiday; extra service in handling freight; every employee "on his toes" to help all patrons get the utmost in pleasure and cheer from the Yuletide season.
"The Christmas spirit" is in the air. And, through the medium of this advertisement, the 50,000 employees of the L. & N. Railroad send you their greetings and best wishes for a very Merry Christmas, and a bright and happy New Year.

CAPTAIN SAZARAC

"I could not stand wi' 'em, sir. They threatened me. They have freed Mr. Jarvis from the brig—he found drink at once for 'em—"

"Jarvis!" Sazarac was upon the companion-stairs, leaving them all in an astounded silence. The empty chair of the jester, to De Almonaster's eyes, seemed to hold a grinning, ragged wastrel of the rue Royale . . . and beyond the health drunk to him, the feast was untouched. The admiral of Cartagena hitched his sword-belt higher, nodded to them, and stole above. Clark was at his heels, and once aft, took the wheel from old Bohon.

"Now, then," said the master, "what do you know, Bohon?"

"It is the strange silence, sir. The ship is flat as a dead ship. Black Michel had charge o' the watch, but it is as if every soul had vanished after they gave me the last sounding. I had the lead out because we made out a spit o' land once at dusk, you remember."

"Beluche, you will come with me to see to this. The older men, surely the Baratarians are hot with the devil's wenches we shipped along!"

"It is plunder they came for, sir," grunted the admiral. "First, we must get to the arms room."

"They are watching that, sir," whispered Clark. "They smuggled ten muskets from some concealment, but they lack powder."

"Name o' the devil!" blustered the admiral. "Come! Lafitte's name with the old bullies! No more o' this Sazarac, I say!"

De Almonaster was with the two as they passed the mainmast. Then another figure slipped to them from the shadows. "It has come quick, sir," Nez Coupe whispered. "They must rid the ship o' the English woman, they say; and then ask you a fair word for a prize. If not that, death to Sazarac—"

"They need not wait—" laughed Sazarac. "Come—death to the first three men that show! Then a fair word to the rest! Monsieur de Almonaster, your pistols ready? Come, down the after-companion and to the arms room. How many are there of us to be trusted at the first?"

"I say you must be Jean Lafitte, sir," growled Beluche. "Jean o' the Black Petral for this night. Old bullies will come roaring to you, once this matter o' Sazarac and the English woman is done among 'em!"

"Well, then—Lafitte," he smiled. "Come, you all, with Jean again!"

"The arms room." Bohon moved like a shadow down the passage. "Once sure o' that, clear 'em to the deck and drive 'em howling! Burke and Crackley to be shot on sight, eh?"

"Aye," retorted Johanness. "Then we'll have the older bullies—they will balk, once they see the mettle in Lafitte's men."

"Come," said the commander. "In silence—"

A dim lantern showed the deck-beams over their heads as they crept along the waist. The arms locker was on the starboard side. Beside the door a figure beckoned to them in the shadows. It must be one of Nez Coupe's loyal ones; the little band stole on past the stowage rooms. Monsieur Sazarac had even turned to speak to the shadowy sentinel, when there came a rush of bare feet from either side. A hoarse shout broke. Steel rang on steel, a pistol exploded in the narrow passage. The rush caught the party with an impact that left no chance for weapons. A burly form hurled to Sazarac's shoulders, another dragged at his legs. De Almonaster broke his rapier at a vain thrust and went down under blows and curses.

It Was Plain He Was Trying to Enact the Part of a Swaggering Frigate Captain.

The affair was over with surprising quickness. There must have been thirty mutineers roaring, struggling in the passageway. Along they dragged the prisoners, and none fought back now, for it was useless.

The mutineers, a howling, disorderly pack, took the prisoners aft, and there, upon the quarter-deck, as one waiting to have honor done him, stood John Jarvis. Apparently he was drunk, or apparently he was posing . . . it was of no moment. Monsieur Sazarac shot him one black look and then would face him no more.

"The commodore!" yelled the brawlers. "The Emperor o' the Bottle, who swore he would yet sleep in old Bony's bed! Turn in to't, Mad John!"

The jester raised an unsteady hand as if he would speak, and then thought better of it. It was plain he was trying to enact the part of a swaggering frigate captain and making an absurd failure of it by a curious doleful humanness. It appeared that the jester was about to speak, to make effort at a leadership of the evil spew he had evoked . . . and then his gesture died away. He, himself, turned away, a ghost figure by the port quarter-rail.

For the English woman had come with Clark, the frightened English boy. There was first a jeer and then a crowding to see her.

"What is this, then?" she cried sharply.

"We are taken, Mademoiselle," returned the master quietly. "That is all there is to it." He turned sternly to John Crackley whose leer upon the English woman boded no good for her. "I demand safety for this lady. Let her return to her cabin. Do you understand me—respect in all things?"

"Eh?" grunted the other. "We'll see to that. Mates—" he glanced uncertainly at his fellows upon whom there had come a curious silence at the captain's assumption of authority, even at this pass: "The womnn—now—"

His voice was cut short by the tremendous explosion of a huge pistol upon the poop-deck above them all. A single figure was there, an unkempt, grotesque man who now was peering curiously into the muzzle of his smoking weapon. Every eye had been drawn to him with a start.

Jarvis' pale face, framed in his long, matted black hair, turned down to them.

"You see, I missed it—" he said plaintively.

"Jarvis," Burke, the deserter, croaked, "what's that?"

"The cabin skylight—at ten paces. Name, o' God! If I am to be commodore, I will need practice. Some of you kindly reload my pistol."

There was a shout of amazed laughter from them. The deck lamp showed the English woman staring up at him; behind her, the prisoners of the quarterdeck. He came to the low rail and looked down.

Not at the lady who once looked back at him on the Esplanade. She might have been an unseen spectator over the footlights, and he the chief player at the center of the stage, taking his cue from an invisible prompter.

Neither did his old friends of the rue Royale, and of the smugglers', wine-shops of years agone, appear to exist in his eye. He shrugged, with an open palm down to the conspirators.

"Io—Commodore!" They bawled up at him. "The word, Jarvis!"

The eye of Sazarac was coldly upon him. But to this friend of his old days, as irredeemable as these, he had the same blank stare as he had for Louise Lestron. As if they were not there—as if she was a mere ghost and he looking through her to the evil pack behind her.

Mademoiselle Lestron turned to the man she knew as Gaspar Sazarac, the gamester of Chartres street. "And this has come to you because of me, Monsieur?"

"It is worth a thousand mutinies. Never fear—the Spaniards hereabout are not all cutthroats. You—the ward of Carr, who is the secret agent of their king . . . why, what have you to fear from them, Mademoiselle Lestron?"

But old Beluche shook his head. It might be well at the Spaniards' hands for Mademoiselle Lestron of Quebec, and for the Count de Almonaster of New Orleans, descended from a line of Castilian viceroys of Louisiana; but for Jean Lafitte; for Beluche, of the Cartagenian rebels; Johanness, and the others who had harried the Mexican trade routes for thirty years—there was quick death in any port of New Spain for them all!

But she could not know. When the longboat was ready, and the crew made way silently for her, she turned to Sazarac with a sudden timid softness:

"Monsieur, something is due you from me! Could I not appeal to them—could you not regain command and sail with them—if I was put adrift?"

He smiled; but it was as if he did not care to look upon her. He was as one who had been given to see a beautiful vision, and before it had come an evil jester, a mocking voice to still the faint good he had sought.

De Almonaster had been watching. He followed her as the captain led the way. Near the rail the girl put her hand to Sazarac's sleeve.

"I am bewildered, Monsieur! It is as if you had given up much for me!"

"I have given much up for you," he answered quietly. "The wreck of years—wild evil, infamy, which—God willing—you shall never know!"

She looked back at Count de Almonaster. His face was averted, but he must have heard. He was even a trifle cold to her as he helped her to the ladder.

On his honor De Almonaster would not speak his old boy's love to her when her ever-questing eyes were going to the gamester, Sazarac—the mystery of Sazarac, the lure of Sazarac's promise that he would claim what he had won across Maspero's gaming table. She thought it very odd, even at this moment . . . the withdrawing of the two gentlemen from her interest, as if each was waiting, watching, for the other to conclude his play. Two rapiers drawn but withheld, perhaps, for the opponent to tie his shoe.

And with a sigh she followed. But her last glance back showed a glimpse down through the open skylight to the cabin of the emperor. The lamps were very bright there. She saw a slouched figure in the chair of the host. A pale tall man eating and drinking greedily as if with a rare appetite for the viands of the emperor's stores. He jammed his faded velvet cap closer over his eyes, and then his hand found something by the plate that had been next to Sazarac's—her own.

It was a bracelet which she remembered had become disengaged when she drank the health to the chair of the missing guest. The man lifted the gold trinket, examined it under the light—and kissed it. Then he fell to eating with rather the manners of the barroom.

The Emperor of the Bottle Was in the Chair of Sazarac.

The Emperor of the Bottle was in the chair of Sazarac . . . but after all, as was the way with him, when what he wanted was at his grasp, he could not take it. It was the same case as when he could not hit a window with his pistol at ten paces, or swagger his sword without the point catching in a hole of his stocking. He never would aim carefully enough, or wear his sword high enough . . . or love ruthlessly enough.

Outside he heard the splash of the oars waiting to take her away.

The lone guest in the emperor's suite could hear them descending to the longboat. There was a mutter when Johanness swung from the rail. But when old Gorgio, the sullen Catalan cutthroat of other days, the most bloody-minded of all the Black Petral's vanished crew, strode to the ladder, there was a yell.

"The old rib-sticker! He leaves us, master!"

Gorgio eyed them with fierce disdain. "I sail with men," he growled: "no pothouse lawyers! Who, o' ye all, ever put foot across a bloody deck, save Black Mike. Who, o' ye louts, sailed the old days with Jean and Pierre?"

There was a mutter, half amused, half of resentment, both from the exiles in the longboat and from the mutineers crowded at the rail. It suddenly appeared oddly clear to De Almonaster that not once, during the affair, had the name of Jean Lafitte been upon the lips of the most unruly of them all. It struck the count as very strange; he glanced at the girl on the seat before him, wondering why the air had not rung with the most notorious name of the decades. Jean Lafitte himself, standing upright in the bow, silently watching the dim mysterious shore of savage Campeche, with its unconquered Indians, and still more ruthless Spanish captains holding every point of refuge, must have wondered.

"Monsieur Sazarac!" the girl cried suddenly, as if, with her own courage, to inspire hope in all the castaways, "I am glad to go! I have a feeling that these are now true men all!—for whatever venture lies ahead, I have no fear!"

The watching mutineers had been so silent that her clear voice carried far. It reached the lone banqueter at the emperor's table.

"Sazarac," he muttered. "Still Sas-a-rac. I, too, have my honor—he can still play Sazarac—the elegant and chivalrous Sazarac—to the end."

For in that one thing the jester had ruled the outlaw crew. He had soberly and stubbornly pleaded and insisted; he had even pointed his rusty, empty horse pistol at their grinning heads and ordained that the English woman must not be told the truth of Sazarac. He had sat in their council to plead for her life and the honor of his friend when he knew the mutiny could not be averted. He had won, and he had sent her away . . . still under the spell of Sazarac, the protecting arm of Sazarac.

Why the Sober Man Did Smile

Boarding House Christmas Party Had a Very Happy Ending for Two

What He Asked and Her Answer Should Be an Easy Guess

'TWAS Christmas Eve at Mrs. Cummings'-boarding house. In the interval between two string beans, Miss Billings observed to the rest of the diners that it was nice to have friends at this season. No one denied it. Of the seven places at the table one was vacant, that belonging to Vesta Blaine.

"Miss Blaine," continued Miss Cummings a little wistfully, "always has such a delightful time at holidays. She has so many pleasant acquaintances. And of course," she hesitated to give emphasis to what was coming, "she is getting a good deal of attention from that young man."

No one had any comments to make. But a serious-faced man at the other end of the table seemed to be very grave indeed; he bent a concentrated regard upon his plate, as though the contents might yield some secret which he hunted.

"A real Christmas Eve!" chanted Vesta Blaine. Her eyes were like stars; her cheeks bright with color; she looked like a flower set down in a vegetable garden. The other boarders were a bit older, a bit more tired, a bit disillusioned; they drank their sunshine from the exuberant girl, and wondered how she could come home at night still bubbling with high spirits and fun.

"It's snowing!" continued Vesta, darting a smile at the sober man, who apparently was not aware of his good fortune, for he never looked up. "That soft sift of feathers that comes down like . . . like"—she hunted for an adequate simile—"like prayers of the angels! Only prayers are supposed to go up, aren't they!" she laughed at her own conceit. "The trees are like dreams behind white veils, and the street lamps are orange moons! I love it. Do pass me the butter, somebody. I'm hungry enough to eat shredded hairpins!"

Everybody did their best to make Vesta comfortable, even the scrap of a maid who waited on the table. Miss Blaine offered her pepper and salt twice, and the landlady asked if she preferred her roast beef well or medium done

"I'm going to a party tonight!" announced Vesta after a few mouthfuls to fortify her wants, "the very best party ever perpetrated."

Miss Billings smiled her interest and asked where.

"Oh, not very far from here; and"—she paused, looking around the table with a curious glance—"you're all invited! That's why it's the best party—because it's got the nicest folks coming to it!"

Vesta Blaine Went to the Front Door, Opened It.

What a bubbub there was then! Everybody asked five questions at once and none found out the answer. Miss Billings quivered with excitement. Mrs. Cummings waved the carving knife and nearly took off a slice from the sober man's nose. Finally, Vesta stood up, commanded silence, tapped importantly on the table with a silver spoon, and began:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you are earnestly requested, cordially invited and definitely ordered to clothe yourself in radiant raiment after dinner, and then wait for me in the hall. No one shall be allowed to say 'no.' Penalty for disobedience is so horrible I can't even mention it!"

And ready they were as soon as they could jump into their best and assemble in the hall. The sober man was the last to appear. He looked as though he did not dare stay away. That's the best that could be said about him. But the rest were laughing and talking in happy expectation.

Vesta Blaine went to the front door, opened it, made strange signs with her hands, and in there tramped a big, blustering giant of a fellow dressed like Santa Claus. He had a nobby pack on his back, and appeared to have every intention of unloading it at Mrs. Cummings' boarding house.

"This way," said Vesta and led him into the parlor. The rest followed.

"For mercy's sakes!" exclaimed Miss Billings.

"Gracious me!" breathed Mrs. Cummings. She did not know her own parlor—and no wonder. There was a big Christmas tree standing in the middle. It reached to the ceiling and blazed with small electric bulbs. More than that, there were seven single stockings suspended in a row from the mantle. Everybody squealed when they discovered their own.

Santa heaved down his pack and out tumbled a bushel of gifts, each wrapped up in paper and marked with a name.

"Each person pick up seven parcels and put them in the stockings. You'll find the names to correspond!" called out Vesta Blaine. "No lagging! A fine for being the last one!"

That parlor full of boarders resembled a small army of squirrels scrambling about in a heap of nuts. Everybody got in everybody's way; everybody laughed—even the sober man was guilty of a happy look around his eyes.

At last the seven stockings were bulging with gifts; they swayed gently back and forth in all the energy of their recent filling.

"Select your own stockings!" shouted Vesta Blaine like a general ordering his troops into battle, "and open your presents!"

It just happened by the merest chance that Vesta and the sober man

"How Did Anyone Know I Wanted That Book?"

were seated on the sofa together. They shook out their stockings into a mutual heap and began to untie the strings and rip off the seals.

"Look here," said the sober man sternly, "how did anyone know I wanted that book?" and he held out a thin, leather-bound volume toward Vesta.

"You said you did, once last summer," answered Vesta a little shyly.

"Caesar's ghost!" he whistled, "and you remembered?"

"Yes," nodded Vesta.

This affirmation seemed to concern the sober man very much.

"Why?" he asked after a moment's consideration.

"Oh," replied the girl, "I just wanted you to have what . . . you wanted to have!"

This afforded the sober man more food for thought.

"I didn't even know you were aware of my existence. I used to bet with myself that if it came to a pinch and you had to introduce me, you could not tell my name. You're so popular, and that sort of thing, that I thought—" he was unable to finish.

Vesta made a gesture as if she threw caution to the winds. "Listen to me," she said. "You're the most interesting person here; I hated not ever having a word with you about books. That's one reason I had this party. I hoped you'd talk to me a little. You always looked so bored when I came in, and I was sorry. I'm not so frivolous as I seem. My father—the man playing Santa Claus—is owner of the London Book Shop here; I'm working there just to learn something of the business. It's Dad who's really back of the party. I just did the suggesting. He's a perfect old dear. I wanted to try being a regular shop girl, so I came here to board, and it's been the greatest fun. I did not mean to deceive people too much, but really"—here she permitted herself a tiny gurgle of mirth—"Miss Billings got so frightfully interested in a man who was paying me such attention, and of course it was no one but Dad, who came now and then to give me some pleasure at the theater or a concert . . ."

She stopped from lack of breath.

The sober man beamed. You would never believe that an expression could change the way his did. It was like a dawning, a new light spread upon his face.

What happened after this is almost too confusing for description.

Santa unmasked and was introduced to everybody. Such a thanking and explaining! Such a happy, laughing group! Miss Billings discovered she could play the piano and Mr. Blaine swung out first with Mrs. Cummings, who fluttered like a girl at her first party. The rest whirled in with great fervor.

If anyone had been looking sharply for the happiest couple, I think Vesta and the sober man would have been selected. What he said to her is nobody's business, nor what she answered—and yet they seemed to have settled something very happily.

RECIPE FOR MAKING DIXIE RELISH

Putting Up Supply of Dixie Relish.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Club girls, under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture and the State agricultural colleges, put up a great many novel products according to standard "4H" recipes furnished by extension leaders. One of the most popular of these products, especially suitable for making in the fall, is "Dixie Relish." Here is the recipe:

Dixie Relish.

1 quart chopped cabbage or chayotes.
1 pint chopped white onion.
1 pint chopped sweet red pepper.
1 pint chopped sweet green pepper.
4 tablespoonfuls salt.
4 tablespoonfuls mustard seed.
2 tablespoonfuls celery seed (crushed).
¾ cupful sugar.
1 quart vinegar.

Soak the peppers in brine (1 cupful salt to 1 gallon water) for 24 hours. Freshen in clear, cold water for one or two hours. Drain well. Remove seeds and coarse white sections. Chop separately, and measure the chopped cabbage, peppers and onions before mixing. Add spices, sugar and vinegar. Let stand over night covered in a crock or enameled vessel. Pack in small sterilized jars and process in hot water bath for 15 minutes at 180 degrees Fahrenheit (simmering temperature).

SCHOOL LUNCH MUST BE MADE ATTRACTIVE

Quite Important to Avoid Unwholesome Foods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Growing children have special needs in the way of food. Even when they eat all their meals at home, it is no easy matter to see that they are properly fed, and when they eat part of their meals at school the difficulty is far greater. This is not because healthfulness and cleanliness are more important in this meal than in any other, but because they are harder to secure. It is not easy to keep food clean and attractive when it must be packed and carried in a lunch basket. Nor is it easy to prepare meals in schools which are not specially fitted for the purpose.

Supplying the proper kind of food at lunch must be considered in connection with the other meals of the day. Breakfast, dinner and luncheon or supper must together supply a large number of different substances, each of which has a special use in the growing and active body of the child. Some of these substances are best supplied by milk, some by cereals, and some by fresh vegetables and fruits and other food materials. The daily diet as a whole must therefore include a variety of food materials, but no one meal must necessarily include them all.

In the case of the well-nourished and carefully fed child it is more important, says the United States Department of Agriculture, that the school lunch should contain no unclean nor otherwise unwholesome foods than that it should be perfectly balanced, for what the midday meal lacks the other two can supply. In the case of the undernourished child, on the other hand, it is often very desirable to make up at the school lunch for what is lacking in the meals served at home.

Little Girl's Dress.

A little girl's blue silk dress is exquisitely made in a very simple and becoming style, with here and there a dash of cerise in appliqued medallions.

To Keep Flowers Fresh.

Hothouse flowers will stay fresh longer than usual if you put a few slices of white soap into the water in which they are kept.

Prick the Skin.

If you prick the skins of apples before putting them into the oven to bake, they will not burst and will retain their shape.

HINTS SUGGESTED ON BAKING

Ovens Are of Varying Sizes and Construction and Same Results Not Always Obtained.

Ovens of varying sizes and construction do not always bake in the same way, even though the thermometer may record the same temperature in every case. A joint will roast, or a cake or loaf of bread bake quite as well in a large, heavy oven (coal range, heavy "fireless" gas range) at a temperature 50 degrees lower than in a smaller, thinner walled gas-range oven through which a blast of hot air is rapidly circulating, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

The larger sizes of loaf, roll, muffin, potatoes and such usually require lower temperatures for longer periods, and the smaller sizes higher temperatures and shorter periods, other things being equal.

The shape of the loaf or roll is important. A half-pound sponge cake or angel-food cake baked in a Turk's head pan (center tube) stands a comparatively high temperature better than does the same weight of cake baked as an ordinary loaf.

The composition of the batter or dough largely governs the baking temperature. A plain loaf cake containing comparatively little sugar, egg and fat (i. e., a "cheap" cake) requires greater care and a more gradually applied heat than does a richer cake; it should, therefore, be put into a cool oven in order to get the best results.

SPECIAL CLEANING FOR LACE

Directions for Washing Curtains or Collars Given by Department of Agriculture.

Certain articles in the wardrobe and household require special cleaning if their use is to be properly prolonged. Among these comes lace. The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for washing it:

Measure before washing if, as in the case of curtains or collars, it is important to keep the original size and shape. Very delicate lace should be basted carefully on a piece of cotton cloth and washed on that to prevent straining the lace. Wash in lukewarm water and soap solution, squeezing rather than rubbing out the dirt. Bleach by setting in direct sunshine and keeping moist with soap or borax solution. Rinse thoroughly. Restore a faded cream or ecru color by rinsing in clear coffee or tea and stretching immediately; the color of the liquid as seen through a tumbler held up to the light should be the same as that desired in the lace. In drying, stretch on a padded board and pin into its original shape and size. Net or lace curtains may be pinned to a sheet on the floor or, better, placed on a curtain stretcher adjusted to the desired size.

Lace may sometimes be cleaned by covering it with warm French chalk, allowing it to stand overnight and then shaking thoroughly.

Right Marketing of Farm Produce

Of Benefit to Producers and Consumers, Says Department of Agriculture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The orderly marketing of farm products that is proving of direct benefit to both producers and consumers is being greatly stimulated by the improved marketing practices extended by federal market investigators during the past year, the United States Department of Agriculture announces. Among the improvements that have shown the greatest expansion are the inspection of farm products at shipping points, use of standard grades, increased use of warehouse facilities under federal supervision, co-operative marketing, and prompt distribution of market news.

The shipping point inspection service enables farmers to have their products inspected at loading points by state inspectors licensed and supervised by the Department of Agriculture. Co-operative arrangements for such service have been made in 25 states, providing inspection at more than 600 leading shipping points. Inspections during the past year totaled more than 72,000 cars of fruits and vegetables. Of this number, inspections in Colorado aggregated 25,000 cars; California was next with 18,000 cars; Idaho, 13,000 cars; Washington, 9,000 cars, and New Jersey, 1,500 cars.

Keeps Out Inferior Products.

The shipping point inspection service is exerting a large influence in keeping inferior quality products out of the channels of trade, in addition to providing shippers with an official record that is recognized in United States courts as prima facie evidence of the condition of the products, the department says. The result is better use of transportation, better distribution, lower cost of marketing, higher net returns to farmers, and a higher grade of food to consumers. The service is also tending to place marketable products on a shipping point purchase basis.

Tentative standard grades were prepared during the year for prunes, apricots, boxed pears and boxed apples, and studies were made looking toward the preparation of grades for sweet peppers. The total number of fruits and vegetables for which grades have been prepared was thus brought up to 17. Approximately 85 per cent of the national potato crop is now sold on the basis of the federal grades, the department says. The department's aim is to prepare grades for all farm products so that a common trade language can be evolved that will be understood in all parts of the country. Much confusion that has tended to increase waste and marketing costs has resulted from the use of a multitude of terms to describe the various grades and quality of farm products.

Use for More Warehouses.

There has been greater use of warehouses for farm products, and a larger increase in the number of warehouses coming under federal supervision under the terms of the United States warehouse act, than ever before, the department announces. Credit for this healthy development that makes for more orderly marketing as determined by consumptive needs is given largely to the bankers of the country who have indicated their willingness to lend money to farmers, the loans being secured by warehouse receipts. Demands are pouring in on the department for the licensing of warehouses for products such as potatoes, beans and broomcorn, and work in that direction is now being undertaken.

Approximately 10,000 farmer co-operative organizations with a membership of more than 1,000,000 farmers are now actively operating in the United States, the department says. As a result of the department's studies of co-operative principles and practices both in the United States and abroad, the principles of successful co-operation are now fairly well understood, and food producers all over the country are applying them to their business. The department is regarded as the leading authority on this subject, the information developed being widely disseminated through agricultural extension services, county agents, and the press.

Farmers Keep in Touch.

Extension of the federal market news service by telegraph and radio during the year now makes it possible for farmers anywhere to keep in daily touch with general crop and market conditions. More than 80 radio broadcasting stations dispatch the news over the continent, and by means of a leased telegraph wire system that stretches across the country from Boston to San Francisco into the Southwest and along the Atlantic seaboard, important market reports are dispatched 12 hours daily from and to the leading market centers for subsequent distribution among farmers and other agricultural interests.

These marketing services to farmers have been rendered more effective by the consolidation of the economic work of the department into the bureau of agricultural economics which includes the former bureau of crop estimates, farm management, and markets. The consolidation of the three bureaus, particularly as regards interrelated marketing activities, has made possible an enlarged service extending over the broad field of problems from farm organization to the study of retail distribution.

Hog Cholera Disease Difficult to Control

Sanitation and Preventive Serum Are Urged.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Approximately 4 per cent of the hogs on farms in the United States died of hog cholera last year. This appraisal of the ravages of hog cholera is made by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, for the year ended April 30, 1923, and is based on estimates of the bureau of agricultural economics. Losses were heaviest in Iowa, Nebraska, Indiana, Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, Georgia, Minnesota, and South Dakota in the order named. Each of these states lost more than 100,000 head of swine from the disease during the year, assuming that 80 per cent of the deaths from all causes among hogs is due to cholera. The total number of swine lost from hog cholera exceeded 2,250,000, valued at approximately $23,393,000.

The highly contagious nature of hog cholera makes the disease difficult to control. The preventive serum treatment combined with strict sanitation and thorough disinfection of premises after outbreaks, are the most effective control measures. The losses reported for last year are not so great as in 1913 and 1914 when the disease appeared particularly prevalent, but they were larger than department experts consider they should have been considering that swine growers have a preventive treatment which is effectual, if used properly before the animals become sick.

Some Excellent Ways to Get Grapevines Started

The grapevine is one of the easiest fruit plants to propagate, according to the horticulturists of an Eastern college of agriculture. Any amateur can grow them at home. For filling a vacancy in a vineyard the easiest and surest way is to leave a cane unpruned on a neighboring vine. In the spring lay the vine down and cover with 3 to 4 inches of loose dirt, that part which is in the place where a new vine is designed. By fall the covered part will have produced sufficient root growth to allow the parent cane to be cut away. If several plants are desired the entire cane may be covered with dirt. Nearly every bud will produce a plant. The following spring the plants may be separated with a sharp spade and transplanted.

For producing plants in greater numbers, cuttings are used. In the fall canes that grew during the year may be cut into lengths of two or three buds each. Canes should have the thickness of a pencil with joints 3 to 6 inches apart. Cuttings in bundles of 10 or 15 should be buried in the garden with the butt ends up, the ends being covered with 3 or 4 inches of dirt. When freezing weather comes on they may either be placed in moist sand in a cool cave or left outdoors and mulched with straw or other litter. This practice promotes the growth of callous over the cuts. In the spring the canes should be planted in nursery rows 6 or 8 inches apart in the row, with rows 2½ or 3 feet apart, one bud being left right at the surface of the ground, the other underground.

Apple Trees Need Plant Food for Proper Growth

Apple trees on thin upland or other poor soil are likely to need fertilizing.

For such orchards, F. H. Ballou, associate horticulturist, Ohio experiment station, recommends the application of a mixture of equal parts of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia, and acid phosphate.

He would apply these fertilizers very early in the spring just as the buds begin to swell. For a poorly nourished twenty-year-old apple tree, about ten pounds of the mixture is suggested. This is scattered evenly in a circle beneath and a little beyond the branches, but keeping a few feet away from the base of the tree.

For trees from five to ten years of age applications of from three to five pounds are recommended.

Fruit trees covered with a rich dark-green foliage and large twig growth probably need very little nitrogenous plant food.

Cost of Marketing Hogs by Co-Operative Scheme

Terminal charges, such as commission, yardage and feed, amount to about one-third of the total cost of marketing hogs by co-operative shipping associations. The United States Department of Agriculture recently made a study of 287 live stock shipping associations in the Middle West, and found that there is considerable variation in the shipping costs between organizations of shippers.

Anyone interested in studying the complete findings of the investigations may obtain them by writing for the report, Costs of Marketing Live Stock in the Corn Belt—1921. Copies are sent free.

Dead Leaves Make Fine Fertilizer for Garden

The dead leaves which seem to be lying everywhere at this time of year can be put to a double use. If raked and stored in a dry place they make excellent scratching material for the hens or bedding for stock, after which they make the best of fertilizer. Or alternate layers of leaves, chicken manure and dirt, in barrels, will make a valuable fertilizer for the garden.

ALABAMA REPUBLICANS SPLIT

At the meeting of the State Republican Executive committee in Birmingham a wide split in the party occurred.

"The black and tans," headed by O. D. Street, could not control the situation and deliver the delegation, hog tied, to Mr. Coolidge.

Hon. Pope Long and his "Lilly White" cohorts were on the job with all four feet in the air. They contended for a white republican party in the state as opposed to Street and his variegated bunch.

The result was that two tickets will be in the field next year when the presidential delegates are to be chosen.

Hon. William L. Chenault, has been selected and has accepted the job, of allowing his name to be placed on the presidential primary ballot in March. This arrangement was made to comply with that ridiculous resolution passed by the last legislature, not permitting the name of any candidate outside of the state to be placed on the primary ballot. Chenault is going to allow his name to be used and whatever delegates are elected for him on the "Lilly White" ticket will go really to Hiram Johnson.

Hon. Pope Long, the leader of the "Lilly White" faction for years, but who has lost favor under the Coolidge "black and tan" banner, is going to attempt to stage a come back this year on the Hiram Johnson band wagon.

It is said that Hiram himself will come to Alabama shortly to bouey up the "L. W." section in an effort to capture [illegible] part of the Alabama delegation. The lines will be tightly drawn between the Lilly Whites and the blacks and tans and Alabama republicans are going to be forced to tell the world whether they believe in social equality or not. Watch the issue.

GONE HOME

Mr. W. S. Price, the architect and contractor of the elegant new Methodist church here, left last Saturday for his home in Ozark to spend the holidays.

Owing to the bad weather, all work has been suspended on this fine structure temporarily except the cement basement floor. This will be pushed right on to completion under the supervision of Dr. Williams.

Mr. Guy Higgins has been in Billingsley this week pushing his large lumber business there.

BAR ASSOCIATION

By act of the recent legislature, all of the lawyers practicing in the State of Alabama were autonjtically organized into a State Bar Association.

One member from each judicial district is elected, under this law, by the bar of the district, to form a governing commission.

The lawyers of this, the 19th Judicial Circuit, have duly elected Col. Lawrence F. Gerald, of our town, as commisioner from this circuit.

They have done well in their choice, for Col. Gerald is recognized as an able legal adviser, who is a close and hard student and who keeps, at all times, abreast of every turn in the legal world. He makes it his business to keep always 'on to his job.'

FAMILY REUNION

There will be a family reunion at the home of Mr. B. McKee on Christmas, where all of the children and grand children are expected to gather around the old home fireside again.

One of the sons, Mr. Emmett McKee and his wife, of Tennessee, have already arrived and will spend some little time on their visit here.

THE WAY IT IS NOW

Every man who is found in the woods now without a perfectly good alibi is promptly locked up and a charge of selling, or trying to sell is booked against him.

To avoid disaster when you go hunting you better carry a properly certified certificate of good intentions and rabid antipathy to booze in all its forms.

WILSON-COX

Mr. Merritt Wilson and Miss Everlee Cox were united in marriage Tuesday, Rev. Doc Wells performing the ceremony.

That great policy of cutting down naval armament and junking the battle ships worked out all right. Every country had a lot of old hulls they wanted to sell for junk. The funny thing about it all is that the navies are all more formidable now than before the junking took place. "More ways to kill a dog than to choke him to death on butter."

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Prince went to Birmingham yesterday. Mr. Prince is one of the genial operators at the depot here, and he and Mrs. Prince belong to the happy class of newly-weds.

VOLUME 3 | CLANTON, ALABAMA, DECEMBER 27, 1923. | NUMBER 16

W. T. Hand Makes Statement

GIVES THE FACTS LEADING UP TO AND REGARDING THE ATTACK MADE ON HIM IN THE OFFICE OF THE PROBATE JUDGE

On Friday the 14th of December, 1923, I went to the Court House of Chilton County in company with Grover C. Walker, H. M. Simpson and J. Fritz Thompson about 9:00 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of examining the poll tax records of Chilton County. We entered the vault where the records are kept and in about three minutes Omer Reynolds came in and stated that he would like to put someone in there to watch, whereupon Mr. Thompson said "We don't care, you may get Pinkerton's detective agency and Bodeker's as well if you wish."

Mr. Reynolds looked at Mr. Thompson, who was seated at the table and said "I trust you, but here is Mr. Hand. He has been in here before looking at these books and gone out and made the statements that there had been some names rubbed off and I will send Mr. Gore in to watch."

I then said "Yes, I brought your Daddy in here and showed him where the names were rubbed off and showed him where I found an eraser in the books and he admitted doing the rubbing," saying "we did it because the names had been entered in the wrong beat." And the $500.00 reward that was put in the Banner I guess they thought that would scare that evidence away from the witness stand, but I think the eraser can be produced at the proper time, if needed. Reynolds said "Of course, we rub out mistakes when we find them" and then left.

I was standing at the table. Ex-Sheriff Gore came in and took a position just back of and very near to me, in fact, so near that the toe of his shoe would occasionally strike against my heel. I treated this offense in silence, occasionally moving my foot a little further away.

I had arranged to be in Columbiana that day on very important matters and my plan was to leave Clanton on L. & N. train No. 2, which was due at 10:27 A. M., and this fact was well known to the gentlemen that I had accompanied to the Court House. Mr. Simpson stated to me that if I wanted to catch that train I had about 10 minutes to get down to the depot, and I left.

I had proceeded to about the middle of the first street from the court house when I stopped and after a few moments of reflection I concluded to abandon my trip to Columbiana and went back to the vault in the court house, saying to Mr. Thompson as I entered that "under the existing circumstances here today I had decided to disappoint my Columbiana people and remain and help do the checking. Mr. Thompson said "alright sit down, we are glad to have you. None of us believe you are crooked." I replied "Neither do they." Mr. Gore said "Who?" Then I said "Not one of the bunch on the other side." Mr. Gore then stood and appeared in a rage and said "Tom Hand because I vote a Republican ticket you think I am not as good as you are and I am not going to be insulted by you."

I tried to explain to him that I meant no insult as did Mr. Simpson. Mr. Gore said "Tom Hand, if you say I am crooked you are a liar."

I then said "If you say I am crooked you are a liar" Whereupon Mr Gore hastily left the vault, looking back at me and saying "Just wait until I get back."

In about twenty seconds he returned with a party following closely behind him, whom I was later informed was Dewey Rockett. Coming up to me he said "You sit down over there and go to work before I wear you out with a chair."

Mr. Simpson interposed and said "He says he will drop it if you will, lets go to work."

I said "There will be two chairs wore out."

This ended the controversy and we proceeded with our work. From that time on there was from one to three watchers over us during the remainder of the day.

W. T. HAND

On Tuesday Dec. 18th, 1923, I went to the court house accompanied by Grover C. Walker about 9:00 o'clock, A. M. for the purpose of examining the poll tax records of Chilton County. Judge Reynolds and another man were standing at the top of the steps at the front entrance. As we drew near them they separated allowing us to pass between them, Judge Reynolds standing on my left. He then joined Mr. Walker and me as we went down the hall, walking slightly behind and to my left.

As we came to the door leading to the probate office, Mr. Walker entered, I hesitated that Judge Reynolds might enter, he in turn stopped still and waited for me to pass in, which I did, he following. At that time I did not see any other person in the hall or in the court house, except Mr. Walker, Judge Reynolds and one or two clerks of the office of the probate judge.

Mr. Walker went into the vault and as I came in he said, "Where are the books?" I said "I don't know, they ought to be here." Mr. Walker then went to the probate office followed by me and said "Judge, we want to get those poll tax records and we don't find them in the vault."

Judge Reynolds said, "they are back here, come right on I will show you."

He then led us back through his private office into the commissioner's room, he went directly to where the books lay against the wall on the west side of the room and near the north end of the row of small desks. Judge Reynolds appeared very courteous, addressing Mr. Walker, saying "If there is anything that you want at any time and you can't find it, all you have to do is to let me know what it is and I will get it for you."

Judge Reynolds gave Mr. Walker two of the books and Mr. Walker returned to the vault. Judge Reynolds was standing between me and the other book and about three feet from me. I did not discover any change in his attitude. I had not spoken a word since I left the vault that I can recollect. In about twenty seconds after Mr. Walker had left, Judge Reynolds, who had been casually moving one or two books from place to place, as best I remember, picked up the other poll tax record and laid it on the end of the desk near me, not a word had I spoken and neither had he since Mr. Walker had gone to the vault with the books. As I started to pick up the book, turning slightly on my right foot, Judge Reynolds without the slightest warning, hit me on the left side of the face a terrible blow, falling against me at the same time and said "You insult the ladies in my office, G—— D—— your soul."

The blow together with his weight took me completely off my balance. I excalimed "What do you mean Reynolds."

He forced me backwards as I tried in vain to regain my footing. Again he cursed me and dealt a glancing blow. I could hear the oncoming rush of footsteps from the adjoining rooms and hall back of me.

When we reached the door leading from the commissioner's room to the private office of Judge Reynolds the test had proved too great a strain for my physical condition and we went down just beyond the door and on the inside of the private office. About this time a mob rushed up to my left side and there was great confusion and much loud talking very near me. My vision was completely shut off immediately and I was in utter darkness and being roughly treated. In about one minute, as best I can recollect, some one of the crowd said "I think that is enough for him boys, lets let him up."

My arm had been thrown around Judge Reynolds' neck and my right hand clutched in his shirt collar in the early stage of the assault and I was still holding him tight against my breast. I don't think Judge Reynolds tried to hit me after the fall.

Judge Reynolds attempted to get up and I was clinging to him, then some of the party took hold and raised us up together. The first one that I recognized that I remember was Sheriff Littlejohn standing in about three feet of me to whom I said "Give me some protection here." He seemed indignant and with an angry look at me suddenly shouted, "I won't do it." About this time Mr. G. C. Walker approached and said "Men lets don't have any trouble here."

I saw standing about me the following: Sheriff Littlejohn, and to my best recollection, Jim Grant, Deputy W. G. Culp, Sam Pate, Omer Reynolds, J. Z. Mims, Dewey Rockett and Joe Gore and several others. We moved slowly toward the door leading from the probate office to the hall, the crowd was very close about me and there was much talking. I was being abused and Reynolds said to me "You come in here and tear leaves out of these books, you come in here and rub names off of the books, you come in here and steal rubber stamps from this office, you come in here and steal erasers, you come in here and insult the ladies in this office and if there was any manhood about you you would apoligize to them."

We were near the window to the probate office. I could draw no conclusion as to what might even form a basis for the charge, as I had never spoken to either of the clerks in regard to Judge Reynolds or any poll tax matters. I asked to [illegible] permitted to speak and when this privilege had been granted, I turned towards the young lady seated in the probate office and said "Will you please tell me when it was and what it was I said that insulted you?" She replied 'You said it and I don't want to discuss it," or words to that effect.

I said "I have not insulted the ladies in this office." Judge Reynolds said "You did do it, you and Pickens, you know you did it and you ought to apologize to them."

We then moved through the door into the hall, the men still close about me. Presently they gave back a few feet as I moved slowly toward the front door. I hesitated, looking back and saw Judge Reynolds about fifteen or twenty feet away. I raised my left hand toward him and said "Reynolds, do you think I am going to put up with this." Several of the men quickly gathered close around me again, and Judge Reynolds said "If you haven't got enough I will give you some more of it."

I did not utter another word and as soon as they would allow me to pass out I went to Dr. Napoleon Johnson's office, who dressed my bleeding left arm and examined my heart action. The left side of my body with stood the brunt of the attack, especially my shoulder side and hip. My side at the lower ribs seemed the most affected. If there was a bruise or pain on the right side of my body I did not discover it. I then found Mr. Pickens and told him of the accusation against us and he and I returned to the court house.

Mr. Pickens did not apologize as I know of but after he and Judge Reynolds had discussed the matter briefly, Judge Reynolds said addressing us "You were with Fritz Thompson or it was you and Fritz Thompson who insulted them. Mr. Pickens then left.

Judge Reynolds then made the "Broad Challenge" to any man who said he had ever rubbed a name off the poll tax books and I said " I am glad I have not said you did under that remark." He said "I can back up the statement." He said you admitted having the graser in your possession now." I said "I did not, the eraser is in the vault, unless someone has moved it."

Mr. Walker, Mr. Curry and I then examined the records until noon. I did not see fit to return after lunch to do any checking without someone to help me. I remained in Clanton during the afternoon, leaving on No. 10 at 5:20.

Sheriff Littlejohn approached me at the station and said "What was it you said that I said up at the fuss?" I replied "I asked you to give me some protection and you said "I won't do it." He was very courteous and said "I didn't say that." I said "Yes you did." He said "I remember your saying something to me, but I didn't understand what it was."

I had been requested by phone during the afternoon to come to Montgomery the next morning, so I did not attempt any further examination of the records the next day. Mr. Thompson did some checking at the court house, however, the next day and I saw him on the train the same evening. He advised me not to do any more checking at the court house.

The above statement in whole is the truth in substance, any other statement to the contrary notwithstanding.

I am now about fifty-four years of age and it has never been my custom to knowingly and willfully misstate facts and I am not going to begin to do so now.

Dr. Frank E. Nabors of Birmingham, stated, while making an examination of my condition Thursday following the [illegible] of that side." He pronounced my condition as very bad and instructed me to go to bed for several months.

I am not going to engage in a newspaper controversy in this matter and this is final.

DR. AND MRS. EZELL VISITING PARENTS

Dr. S. J. Ezell, wife and children, left Monday to visit their parents who live in South Carolina.

They did not trust to their car, however, [illegible] fashioned railroad way.

Dr. Ezell has never outgrown "Ma and Pa" yet and he gets awful homesick for the sound of their voice and the clasp of their hands at times.

BIRTHDAY BANQUET

Last Saturday night the [illegible] home of Mr. J. C. Jones was ablaze with lights, and the adjacent air was redolent with the sound of gaity and laughter.

[illegible] popular head of that home, Mr. J. C. Jones, was celebrating, with his [illegible] the fact that he had safely arrived at the fiftieth mile post on the highway of life.

He had, at his table, about 40 of his gentlemen friends and Col. J. O. [illegible] dleton, as toast master, kept the [illegible] and humor flowing and many were the expressions of good will and congratulations that were extended to the host.

The entire evening was perfect. Each guest was happy in the opportunity to express his good wishes. The table was loaded with a great variety of viands, both substantial and dainty, while the decorations were beautiful beyond compare and in perfect harmony with the occasion.

Mr. Jones is to be sincerely congratulated on the success of this post holiday celebration and is, no doubt, happy in the recollection of the many kind things said about him by [illegible] friends.

ANNUAL INSTITUTE

The annual colporteurs institute of the Seventh-day Adventist conference will be held in Clanton, Dec. 30th to Jan. 8th. The meeting will be held in their Tabernacle on 2nd Ave. and 5th Street East.

The entire day will be devoted to convention work, and there will be preaching every night at 7 o'clock. Eld. G. W. Wells of Nashville, Tenn., and Eld. W. P. McLennan of Birmingham, will do the preaching. Topics of vital importance covering present day conditions in the light of prophecy will be studies. The first preaching service will be at 7 o'clock Sunday night Dec. 30th.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

THE BELLED BUZZARD AGAIN

Some parties out near the home of Mr. Harmon Headley last week, saw the famous belled buzzard and heard his bell as he passed over going in a westerly direction.

MR. W. T. HAND SICK

It is with a great deal of regret that we learn that Mr. W. T. Hand, of Jemison, has suffered a return of his heart trouble that came so near carrying him off some 4 years ago, and his physician, Dr. Neighbors, of Birmingham, [illegible] stay there absolutely quiet for an indefinite [illegible]

We are indeed sorry for this affliction to Mr. Hand as he is one of the best and livest citizens of Chilton county and is an active man of business and this enforced idleness will go especially hard with him.

WEDDING RECEPTION

A beautiful and most enjoyable reception was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Wilson last Tuesday evening at the hospitable home of Mrs. R. E. Pill.

Mr. Wilson and Miss Evalee Cox were married that day and Mrs. Pill, being an aunt to the bride, complimented them with a reception

The house was beautifully decorated with holly, flowers and fern and made a gorgeous appearance. The table was spread with a feed fit for a king with all of the bounteous generosity that used to grace such happy occasions.

A very large crowd of guests assembled, there being no less than 46 Clantonians among the number.

Every appointment of the entire entertainment was perfect and passed off as merrily as a wedding bell. All present pronounced this reception the last word in social entertainment.

LIFE SENTENCE

Philip E. Fox, of Atlanta, who shot and killed Attorney William S. Coburn, an Atlanta attorney, in the latter's office there some time ago, drew a life sentence in the penitentiary last Friday when the jury rendered a verdict of guilty of first degree murder with a recommendation to mercy.

79 YEARS YOUNG

Rev. G. A. Hornady who is now at the Soldiers' Home, at Mt. Creek, was a most pleasant caller at our office last [illegible]

While he lived back in the days when the South was bathed in the blood of the noblest heroes that ever bared their bosoms to a leaden hail in the cause of liberty and righteousness, and did his bit as one of those brave defenders of a lost cause, he is still young in his soul, mind and strength.

A man of high moral principles and of an exceptionally classic education, as a companion he is delightful, whether on the banks of the river trying out your arts with the fishes, or seated around the fireside in conversations that are always wise, witty and worthwhile.

We were delighted to have him with us and our latch string is always on the outside for him and a warm welcome awaiting him when he comes inside.

He speaks very highly of Dr. Fowler, the commandant at the home, not only as to his official administration but as regards his skill as a physician and as a high toned Christian gentleman.

In our boyhood days we knew Dr. Fowler and can testify to all that Bro. Hornady says. He is a gentleman "to the manor born."

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Eptiomized Form.

In assigning members of the appropriations committee of the U. S. House of Representatives for service on sub-committees, Representative William B. Oliver of the Sixth Alabama district was given highly important work. He will serve on the sub-committee which will provide funds for the navy, and on the sub-committee which will pass on proposed appropriation for the departments of commerce, labor, justice and state. If the inland waterways service is transferred from the war to the commerce department as ultimately it will be, Mr. Oliver will be in position to take care of the Warrior, it is pointed out.

Hearing will be had at 10 a. m. Jan. 9 in the Chamber of Commerce building at Birmingham on the petition of the American Casting company against 21 railroad companies in Alabama, according to an order given out by the public service commission. The petition asks for "reasonable and non-discriminatory rates on cast iron culvert pipes in lengths of five feet or less, carloads, minimum weight 30,000 pounds, from Birmingham and group points to all points within the state of Alabama."

One hundred thousand dollars was paid to the state by the Alabama Power company for 106 acres of land which has constituted a part of Prison Farm No. 5 in Elmore county. An nouncement of the completion of the sale and the payment of the money into the state treasury was made by the state board of administration. The deal was made with the approval of Governor Brandon. The lands will be flooded by the Alabama Power company when the development at Lock 18 is completed.

Caveat vendor is the rule laid down by the supreme court of Alabama as regards the seller of an automobile on time payments to a person who is likely to use such a car in bootlegging operations; in other words the high court has decided that the person or firm making a conditional sale of a car must use reasonable diligence to guard against such car becoming a booze carrier, otherwise the seller will lose out completely when the state catches such car in flagrant delicto.

Proposal of a change in the location of the projected road extending out of Greensboro, Ala., to the Marengo county line, was presented to the state highway commission by a delegation of Hale county citizens, headed by J. H. James. The present route for this road, after leaving Greensboro, is via Newbern to the Marengo line, near Uniontown. Recommendation of the delegation was that the road extend to the Marengo line via Cedarville.

The University of Alabama has joined with four other universities of the Southland to form the "Pentangular League" in debating. Interest in debating has taken on some of its characteristics of the time when it was the most important student activity. The best talent at the university is being enlisted, inter-society debates are becoming more and more popular and larger crowds are attending than in a number of years.

At the request of representatives of the carriers and with the consent of shippers' representatives of the public service commission post-poned until Jan. 14, further hearings in connection with the commission's citation of all steam railroads operating in the state to show cause why they should not publish certain notes in their respective tariffs, tending to save expense to the shipper.

Secretary of State S. H. Blan is having many calls from other states for the new automobile laws passed by the recent session of the Alabama legislature. Senators and representatives of other states, officials and private citizens are interested in these laws, and the Alabama laws bid fair to be copied in many states, it is stated.

Acting on the advice of Chester E. Johnson, state fire marshal, the Huntsville board of education has placed an order for two large fire escapes for the Huntsville Grammar school. One hundred children a minute can find safe exit down each of the fire escapes and having them placed at the school will greatly minimize the danger of loss of life by fire, according to Mr. Johnson.

Southern railway rates on logs from points on the Mobile and Birmingham divisions to Aovndale are held to be discriminatory and unreasonable in formal complaint lodged with the Alabama public service commission by the Birmingham traffic association of the Chamber of Commerce. The complaint alleges that the rates are unfair as compared with rates to other sawmill points.

Baptists of Greensboro are beginning very extensive improvements on their church. They are having it veneered in brick and otherwise improving it. When completed it will be one of the handsomest in the state. This church is of particular interest to Baptists over the state, because it was in Greensboro that the first Baptist convention was founded.

Gadsden solved the jitney question, according to official belief, when the city council passed an ordinance forbidding their operation on streets occupied by street railways. The ordinance prohibits them from running on, upon or along streets where car lines run, and it also prohibits them from operating between Gadsden and towns connected with it by street railways.

Prof. Clay Curtis Matthews, principal of Coosa county high school, and Dixon King, a student, were seriously burned by explosion of a gasoline can, containing a gallon of gas. Professor Matthews was severely burned on his right hand and arm, and other burns were sustained on his face, left hand and arm and leg. Young King was not so badly injured.

Effective Jan. 1, the capacity of the Albany Broom Factory will be double what it has been in the past. J. F. Weaver, president of the company, has just returned from Memphis, where he purchased sufficient broom-making machinery to double the output of the factory. Mr. Weaver stated the new machinery would be placed and ready to start up Jan. 1.

The Huntsville Chamber of Commerce has been in correspondence with the Southern railway officials for some time past with reference to restoration of trains No. 23 and 24, which were operated on the Memphis division until the depression following the war boom caused them to be taken off.

Irene Hughes, also known as Irene Curley, thought to be the victim of Tuscaloosa's church murder mystery of Oct. 31, has been traced by a Birmingham detective to Savannah, according to F. F. Windham, attorney for Alf Winchester, who is held in jail in Tuscaloosa charged with the murder.

The pecan yield of Hale couhty has been good this year, despite the long drouth in the summer. Parties shipping their nuts to New York got as high as 70 cents per pound for them and express charges paid. Others shipping to the co-operative market in Georgia also got wonderful prices.

ENGLISH WOMEN TO LEARN HOW TO MAKE PAPER-GUMMED DRESS FORMS

Gummed-Paper Dress Forms Are Aid to Home Sewing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As a result of a recent visit to the United States Department of Agriculture, an Englishwoman has become so keenly interested in the making of gummed-paper dress forms as an aid to home sewing, that she intends to introduce this labor-saving device to English housewives as soon as she returns, through the medium of women's institutes. Miss Minnie Zimmerman, the visitor, is president of the Loughton Woman's institute in Essex, near London, which has about 370 members. As there are over 2,000 similar local women's institutes scattered throughout England, and as it is required that members "give as well as get" instruction in practical new ways of doing things, the paper dress form seems likely to be taken up widely in England as it has been in the United States. Thousands of women in this country, especially those in rural districts who cannot get help with their sewing, have made dress forms according to instructions given by extension agents so that they can fit their own clothes more easily and remodel old garments.

Exchange of Instruction.

Miss Zimmerman spent some time with extension and home economics workers in the department studying the organization of work for farm women, the methods used and subjects taught, with a view to adapting some of our ideas to English needs. An exchange of instruction was tentatively arranged for when three of our home demonstration agents on their return after completing scholarship in France will be taking special courses of training in England. These agents will go to the Loughton Woman's institute to learn glove making and other leather work, and give, in return, demonstrations in making paper dress forms, bottling pectin extracts and packing one or two attractive canned products.

Aim of English Institutes.

In describing before a group of extension specialists the plan and scope of the women's institutes in England, Miss Zimmerman explained that the aim of these organizations is social as well as educational. Women of various interests and in different walks of life are urged to join them for the sake of community solidarity. The regular meetings are social in nature, including lectures, pageants, historical, musical and dramatic entertainments, folk and period dancing and similar features in which all can participate. In addition there are a great variety of classes conducted in which any woman, who wishes to, can learn to do or make something which saves expenditure or by which she can earn money. Such work as making rush seats, gloves, bags, upholstery, umbrella covers, blouses, whitewashing or soldering is in great demand. The institutes resemble extension work in that voluntary local leaders do a great deal of the actual instruction. They attend special training classes at their own expense and must pass tests before they can qualify as instructors. One-half of the expense of conducting the institutes is raised locally, the remainder is borne by the British department of agriculture, but the state support is to be withdrawn.

Fixed Annual Charge.

The institutes differ from our extension groups in that a fixed annual charge of 2 shillings is made, and there are other small fees for class instruction and for any refreshments served at meetings. Apparently no meetings occur, either in the daytime or evening, without the customary English cup of tea, but the usual charge of 3 pence seems to be cheerfully met by all of the many members who find that both the social and educational aspects of the institutes add much to their enjoyment of life.

DIFFERENT WAYS OF USING CRANBERRIES

They Help Greatly to Replace Fruits and Berries

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Cranberries have many uses in addition to the traditional sauce or jelly that accompanies the Thanksgiving and Christmas turkeys. Coming on the market, as they do, when cold weather begins, they help to replace the fresh fruits and berries that have disappeared from the menu, and furnish fruit acids and other valuable constituents needed in the diet.

Cranberry sauce is, of course, the easiest use for these berries, because it takes but a few minutes to cook the cranberries and sugar sufficiently. When made with a small amount of water the sauce will be firm enough to turn out of molds when cold. Any good cookbook gives directions for making cranberry sauce to accompany turkey or other poultry. When cranberry jelly is preferred the sauce must be strained. Cranberry ice or sherbet, made with the juice of fresh berries, is often served with the meat course instead of the more common cranberry sauce.

Either the sauce or jelly may be stored, like any other preserves, in sterilized glasses covered with paraffin. It is then useful as a spread for bread, as a sandwich filling, in tart shells for desserts, on ice cream or plain blanc mange, on shortcake, as a sauce for hot cake-like desserts such as cottage pudding or puffs, with pancakes, in jelly rolls, layer cake or charlotte russe.

In addition to being spread on shortcake, cranberry sauce can be combined with biscuit dough in several ways. Served in a baking dish, covered with a biscuit top, it becomes "cranberry cobbler"; spread on a square of biscuit dough, such as one makes for Dutch apple cake, and then baked, it makes a cranberry cake, which many people would prefer to a tart or other pastry.

Cranberry pie may be made of cranberry sauce or cranberries, either with or without raisins. When equal parts of raisins and cranberries are used it is often called "mock cherry" pie. Cranberry pies are usually made without a top crust, although a lattice of pastry strips may be used, or a meringue may be spread over the top and delicately browned. In a variation of "mock cherry" pie, chopped, pitted, cooked prunes are substituted for raisins.

Cranberries may be introduced in many dishes where cherries would be used in the spring. A hot steamed pudding, made by a biscuit dough recipe, is excellent if one cupful of cranberries is stirred in for each pint of flour. Cranberries may be used in richer steamed puddings with more eggs and other ingredients; they may be put into baked or boiled bread puddings, "cabinet" or stale-cake pudding, or plain batter pudding. Most of these desserts require a sauce of some sort. A soft "hard" sauce is excellent with any of them, or a liquid sauce, such as foamy or lemon sauce, thickened with egg and cornstarch, or cranberry sauce itself. Cranberry souffle can be made if it is not necessary to economize on eggs. Steamed brown bread may have cranberries in it.

Candied cranberries are easy to make and have many uses. The United States Department of Agriculture has a recipe for preparing them which will be furnished to those interested. They can be put into many of the desserts mentioned instead of fresh cranberries, and used in all the ways in which glaced cherries are used. Dropped in batter and fried, candied cranberries make unusual fritters as an accompaniment to meat or for a luncheon dessert. They are good on or in ice cream, in cake icing, on cookies, in mixed fruit gelatins, in coffee rings, buns or other raised doughs; dipped in sweet chocolate, or eaten just as they are.

A very good cranberry relish or conserve can be made of cranberries, sugar, raisins, orange peel and juice, vinegar, sugar and spices. The proportions are about the same as in other fruit conserves containing oranges and raisins.

Sol Sample and His New Leaf

By CHRISTOPHER G. HAZARD

Store Clerk Became a Hero by Protecting His Employer's Safe From Robber — Drew Promotion, Admitted to the Firm—His Leaf of Gold

HE LOOKED like a farm chunk. With his red hair, growing low upon his forehead, his pale and watery eyes, his ungainly figure and awkward manner, and his slow speech, he did not seem billed for a successful life, and he caused many to wonder why the old man numbered him among the salesmen in his fashionable store. His name had shrunk from Solomon to Sol, as an indication, perhaps, that the full name was too large a program for him, while his surname suggested that he was but a small part of what he desired to be.

This suggestion was based upon fact, for there was in Sol a dissatisfaction with himself that gave promise of improvement, an ambition that set before him a goal farther on and higher up than his smarter associates had purposed. Beneath his red thatch and behind his unattractiveness Sol had a conscience, a heart and a most determined will. It was the honesty and the reliability of his character that had given him favor with his employer, and a certain considerate kindliness had made him acceptable to the customers — qualities not common enough in these days to be despised.

At this New Year time Sol Sample was particularly anxious to turn over a new leaf. He shared the desire that comes then to us all to break into a better future. It is an early stirring of life's spring season, a thought of renewing with the young year our lost youth, of possible attainments of purity and beauty, a rekindling of old enthusiasms. Let those who will, sneer at New Year resolutions; there is a reason for them and there is promise in them. They present to a plowboy something more than a mirage and they offer to a roue one more glimpse of heaven.

But Sol hardly knew what to write upon the blank page after he had turned it. There seemed to him to be no better course than to plod through another three hundred and sixty-five days as faithfully as he might know how, which was, after all, about as good a prospect as anyone could have had.

Sol's puzzle, however, was solved for him by others and in a most unexpected manner, as is the case with so many puzzles. In his makeup he had taken the first nose that turned up and now he made the best possible use of the first event that gave him opportunity. It came about in this way:

After the holiday rush he had been left one evening to close the store. He had put things to rights and closed the safe upon the proceeds of the day's business and was about to extinguish the last light when he became conscious that he was not alone in the place. The next moment he felt the pressure of a revolver barrel upon his side and heard a firm, hard voice instruct him to hold up his hands.

As his next experience he was marched into the little office and urged to open the safe. As he spun the knob that controlled the combination he made a rapid survey of his resources with his mind while he still fumbled with the numbers of the lock. He could think of nothing worth trying until there flashed upon him the memory of a certain trick by which he had once overthrown his adversary in a wrestling match. He still had the muscle of an athlete and the short stairway up to the desk favored his plan. With a lightning-like movement he displaced the weapon and sent his captor backwards down the stairs. Whirling to defend himself he was surprised to find no further attack from the robber and upon examination he found that with a broken neck the thief had lost all power to do further mischief.

Sol thus became quite the neighborhood hero. People began to put a new estimation upon him. He was promoted to a position in the factory, the output of which the store had been handling. From that, sterling business qualities carried him to a partnership. Today his name is upon the sign that advertises the business, and there in full, Solomon Sample is likely to become the whole piece. All because he discovered himself and was found in the emergency that called for a real man. So it proved that Sol's new leaf was a gold leaf.

Arrival of the New Year

The New Year

By HORATIO NELSON POWERS
in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A FLOWER unknown; a book unread;
A tree with fruit unharvested;
A path untrod; a house whose rooms
Lack yet the heart's divine perfumes;
A landscape whose wide border lies
In silent shade, 'neath silent skies;
A wondrous fountain yet unsealed;
A casket with its gifts concealed—
This is the year that for you waits
Beyond Tomorrow's mystic gates.

Oh, may this flower unfold to you
Visions of beauty sweet and new;
This book on golden pages trace
Your sacred joys and deeds of grace.
May all the fruits of this strange tree
Luscious and rosy-tinted be;
This path through fields of knowledge go;

This house with love's consent o'erflow;
This landscape glitter with the dew
Of blessed hopes and friendships true;
This fountain's living crystal cheer,
As fall the springs that once were dear;
This casket with such gems be stored
As shine in lives that love the Lord.

Turning Over the New Leaf

By REV. ALAN PRESSLEY WILSON

It Is Your Time to Take Stock as the Old Year Comes to the Close

AS THE old year slips quietly into oblivion and the new one silently takes its place we have gotten into the habit of looking backward over the past and forward into the future: we seek to learn where we have made mistakes in the months that have gone and try to correct them in those that are to come. We call this custom by many names, such as "making new resolutions," "turning over a new leaf," etc., but by whatever name we call it the principle is the same, viz.: what the business man knows as "taking account of stock."

In every business house the latter part of the month of December in each year is utilized in making an inventory of the goods that remain on hand in order that an annual trial balance may be struck that the owner or proprietor of the enterprise may know just where he stands in a financial way. He wants to learn what and how much he has made in the year that has gone; what goods have been salable and what have been on the shelves so long they have become shopworn. The latter, he knows, comprise the kind he should avoid in the year ahead of him because he recognizes that his customers do not call for them.

In like manner we strike a trial balance of our life's possessions and acquisitions; we seek out those habits we have formed in order that we may know whether they have been profitable to us through this year of our journey of life or whether they have hindered our greatest progress therein.

"I am going to turn over a new leaf," each one says to himself. This is exactly what the merchant does in his ledger. He balances each account on the old page and carries it over to a new one. In reading, when we have mastered the contents of one page we turn over and begin a new one. This one is clean and unmarked by finger prints or the much more undesirable habit some have of cleaning the finger nails on the corners or the making of dogears thereon.

In the fall and early winter the trees that have been green with foliage begin to show the turning leaf. Red, brown and yellow with tints of bronze appear and, for a time, are very beautiful to behold. Then they fall and still present a beautiful appearance on the ground. Then the leaf withers and turns into what we know as leaf-mold. Later this serves as a fertilizer and the same substance appears in the form of new leaves when gentle spring induces the trees to put on a new dress. Thus the tree provides a part of the sustenance it requires for its growth by what it discards.

New and fresh green leaves spring from old and unsightly ones. So our good deeds may be stimulated and promoted through our experiences. The mistakes of the past may be buried and from them may come the courage and ability to perform worthy acts and to order our lives aright. This is what the poet meant when he urged that "Men rise on stepping stones of their dead selves to higher things." We use our mistakes as the rounds of the ladder whereby we mount upward. It is quite possible, however, for our mistakes to keep us down. We may have hundreds of rounds of a ladder, but, if they are not in their places, they avail us nothing in climbing. Only those rounds that are fixed firmly in their proper places enable us to reach higher altitudes.

Here is a choice thought from J. G. Holland bearing upon this very matter:

Heaven is not reached at a single bound;
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit round by round.

Turn over a new leaf? By all means! But use what has gone before in order that what comes afterward may be an improvement over the old order of things. Wherever you have erred in the past, resolve to avoid such errors in the future. Make your resolutions; make many of them—that you fail to keep them all should not deter you in your ambition to make improvement. The discipline will be most helpful. The habit of trying to correct errors in our life's conduct will result finally in the fixed purpose toward an errorless life.

Aim high! Then aim higher!

Now for the Big Noise

ROAD BUILDING

Problems Face Engineer in Spending Road Money

Two distinct problems confront the highway engineer who must spend highway revenues in the best interest of the taxpayer.

One, to advance the old pavements with a view to utilizing as large a proportion of the original investment as possible; and, second, to construct new pavements at the most reasonable cost consistent with service and durability. There are in the United States nearly 400,000 miles of hard-surfaced highways, and of this total at least 100,000 miles consist of water-bound macadam pavements. It is little short of an economic crime to dig up these old macadam pavements and replace them with an entirely new pavement, thus ignoring the excellent foundation value of the old macadam. The material in these old pikes has been compacted under years of traffic to a degree of stability which could hardly be approached by entirely new construction. During the process of compacting the weak places, both in the subgrade and in the pavement, will have been shown up so that repair and replacement can be intelligently conducted without sacrifice of those portions of the old pavement which are in good condition. When it is considered that the stone or gravel constitute by far the heaviest portion of a pavement, the saving in the cost of quarrying, transporting and placing this great mass of material becomes an item well worth while. For conserving these old macadam pavements an asphaltic wearing course is ideal.

The second problem, that of providing new pavements, involves the consideration of a very wide range of highway method and design. A few years back the so-called city types of pavement were regarded as beyond the reach of the country road builder because of their great cost. That was in the days when a $5,000 to $10,000 per mile outlay was regarded as quite liberal. Today the country highway which costs less than $30,000 per mile is neither regarded as a shining example of extreme economy or is relegated to the ranks of the "cheaper types." Now when we go into cost levels such as these we are scarcely abreast of the city paving types and it is entirely practicable for the farmer to drive from the market to town on a Fifth avenue or Broad street type of pavement and pay no more for it than he is now paying for other types of country roads. As a matter of fact, the famous Lackawanna trail is mostly composed of sheet asphalt on a portland cement base and compares favorably with the best pavements in the best cities. Few state highway engineers have had any experience with city paving, as curiously enough there have been very few city engineers who have been placed at the head of state highway departments.

Guard Lincoln Highway With Surface of Asphalt

Highway engineers in charge of construction in sections of the country traversed by the Lincoln highway are paving new stretches of this great thoroughfare in accordance with the latest and most improved road building methods by protecting the concrete base with a surface of asphalt. Particularly is this true of the section which crosses New Jersey and over which tourist traffic passes into New York city.

Early construction of more than $600,000 worth of additional pavement on the highway between Trenton and Princeton, a distance of 11 miles, has just been authorized by the New Jersey state highway commission. This pavement will vary in width from 20 to 36 feet, and will be surfaced with sheet asphalt in order to give it resilience against traffic impact and make it frostproof and moisture-proof. The section which extends from News Brunswick to Metuchen, N. J., was repaved with asphalt this season, while that between Rahway and Elizabeth, N. J., was repaved with the same material last year.

Tree Tops Help Judging Road Over Hill Crest

Many motorists hesitate to pass another car when approaching the crest of a hill, fearing still another machine may be approaching from the other side, whereas the road at the top may be level. To make sure that the highway does not dip down beyond the summit it is only necessary to note whether there are any trunks of trees visible 100 feet or so away.

If these can be seen when climbing the hill, the top of an approaching car could also be seen, and it is safe to assume that the road is level at the top and that no harm can result from passing around the car ahead.

Improved Highways Will Spread Over All States

Secretary Wallace told the American Automobile association that by the end of 1923 approximately 179,000 miles of roads will have been designated as part of the federal aid highway system. Up to May 5, he said, all but three states had submitted tentative systems for approval and the systems of 33 states had been approved, comprising a total of 105,406 miles.

Mould your New Year resolutions in brass and they will not break so easily.

Short dresses are coming back in style. Look out for an epidemic of masculine sore eyes.

Whiskey this Christmas sold at $40 per gallon. At that price we could not even pay for a smell of the stopper.

Germany now has a new president with power of a dictator. What was Kaiser Bill?

Of course business is picking up. Divorce suits have increased 25 percent since Oct. 1. The lawyers are doing fine.

Henry Ford fell at last. He has gone over to Wall street and the gang of millionaire political tricksters. Good bye, Henry.

A fellow told us that a Christmas without an egg nogg was like eating the white of an egg without salt—tasteless, we suppose.

Ladies do not need a cheval mirror and a dressing case at home these days. They carry the whole works in a little hand bag.

The bed rock of all music used to be melody. Now, the more discordant the noise you can make the more classic the performance.

From the amount of Santa Claus carried out from Clanton this year one would presume that there was no panic in Chilton county at least.

Great throngs of people were here both Saturday and Monday before Christmas but old Alcho was conspicious by his absence.

It is generally conceded that the whiskey situation grows worse and worse as the years go by. Why not make the violation of the prohibition law punishable by death at the stake?

It begins to look like the bankers and city and county officials have a monopoly on the bootlegging business in Mobile. Perhaps that's the reason they got in trouble. Maybe the politotarist wanted a drink now and then.

It is claimed that Germany has more than two billion dollars in gold hid out in our country. Banker Stinnes, their money king, had paper money issued over there for the people and sent the gold away. Now, they are asking alms to support their "women and babies."

If the cotton farmers in the United States raise only 8,000,000 bales of cotton next year they will get 35 cents per pound for it. If they add on another million they will cut the price to about 20 cents. If they make 10,00,000 you will live to see some more 10 cent cotton. Put that in your hat.

GERMAN TRICKERY

Look out for another "Drive." Germany is starving and must be fed. How come? Germany was the greatest industrial country in the world when she started the world war. No battle was fought on her territory and she came out of the war industrially intact. If France and Belgium, which were ruthlessly burned up by the German armies, can manage to carry on without crying for alms, why can't Germany with none of her country injured? Money put into German charity will leave no blessing behind for the doner and feed only the greed of a scheming people who intend to make the world pay for the war they fomented even if they did lose. Lay off of the "German Drive."

THE NEGRO WON

Before the republican national committee meeting in Washington last week, the negro delegates, by a threat that the negro vote would go to McAdoo otherwise, forced the committee to reverse its former action, and add a full quota of negro delegates from the south back on the rolls of the next national convention to convene next June. They can't eliminate their colored brethren.

CAN'T MISTAKE THE ISSUE

No matter how many changes the passing years bring in the political issues that exist between the democratic and the republican parties in the United States, so far as the Senate is concerned, there is one issue that never changes and, perhaps, will not change for many years to come.

That question is inspired by a class of northern politicians who have never looked further into the conditions than their own selfish ends reached. They condescend to play up to the northern negro vote, and to an ignorant and prejudiced class of hyphenated mongrels, who have been vomited on our shores by foreign countries, by bleating and ranting about the negro suffrage in the south and pretending to believe in the social equality of the negro.

Time has proven conclusively that the South will not submit to this iniquity and that a "black and tan" republican party can not thrive, or even live down here.

In the days of the lamented Roosevelt, he had sufficient vision to see the facts and honesty enough to admit the truth, so he attempted to foster a white republican party that would have an appeal to white people north and south.

Hon. Pope Long, an Alabamian, was a leader of that "Lilly White" party in our state and through his earnest adherence to the principle of white supremacy, he built up a party strength in Alabama that totaled 70,000 votes.

Under his administration we bid fair to have a two party situation before many years went by. Then came the Harding administration, and about the first thing it did was to repudiate the "Lilly White" movement and begin to ladle out to sop the negro. Mr. Long was abandoned to his fate and one O. D. Street, a Simon pure "black and tan" adherent was given the lead of republican patronage in Alabama and is, today, sucking at the tit right along with his colored brother and the republican vote in Aalbama has fallen back to about 20,000.

The issue cannot possibly be denied nor evaded. If you are in line with the Coolidge administration you are also inevitably in line with, and giving aid and comfort to the party that would bathe your country, your society and your home in the blight of social equality.

No intelligent person, who even pretends to read the papers and keep in touch with the facts can deny the truth of this statement, then the wonder is how southern men and women can ally themselves with such a social monster as the republican party.

OUGHT TO GET IT NOW

Henry Ford made a bid to buy, or lease Muscle Shoals some two years ago. The matter was put into politics by his republican friends and was never disposed of.

Now, Henry has bowed his stiff neck and humbled his boasted independence and kissed the hand that chastised him.

He announces for Mr. Coolidge for president and surely in return for that humble surrender he will be given whatever he wants at Muscle Shoals Henry knows when to fawn and flatter.

POOR OLD MEXICO

After the days of the notorious brigand, Villa, old Mexico had almost subsided into a state of peace until a few weeks ago rebellion broke out again and the dence is still going merrily on, both the Federals and the rebels claiming all of the victories at once.

Nature seems to have become utterly disgusted with those greasers for Friday last an earthquake gave one performance and two cities, with their inhabitants, ceased to be.

Hardly before a Mexican consul could arrive in this country after amicable relations were restored, a telegram came informing him to report to a different boss at home. It requires a revolution every 60 days over there to keep the people from deciding that they have moved to some other country. No wonder the Mex don' fear death. He has nothing to lose and all to gain by any change he could make.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Next Tuesday we will welcome the year 1924 into our homes, with all of its joys and sorrows, its achievements and its disappointments, its success and its failures, and whether it brings us weal or woe, it will abide with us for 12 long months, before we can either kiss it good bye with regret or kick it out with satisfaction.

Let us hope and pray that this new year may come bringing blessings in its arms and scattering peace, plenty and prosperity in its footsteps, but in the meantime prepare to bravely meet the conditions whatever they may be.

The old year will be numbered with the things that were and let us only remember its joys and its kindness and bury in the dark grave of oblivion all of its sorrows, disappointments and hatreds.

The Chilton County News wishes to extend to its every reader the sincere hope and wish that the New Year may ever show a smiling face to you and pour out, in plentious showers, all of its very richest blessings in your behalf. May prosperity and happiness crown your every effort and aspiration.

The News hopes to still visit you all once every week and to always find you well, happy and contented and with a warm welcome for your county paper.

We thank you.

COXEY AGAIN TO SHINE

The same old Coxey who, a few years ago led his "hungry army" to Washington is planning now to lead a "Ford Army" in flivvers to Washington to boost Henry Ford for president.

All of this too, after Henry has announced his allegiance to Coolidge and declined to enter the race. Turn on the spot light and pacify old man Coxey. He wants a little more cheap notority.

VICKERS-DOWNS

Last Sunday, Dec. 23, Mr. Glen Vickers and Miss Emma Downs were united in marriage, Rev. Dock Wells officiating.

Miss Sophia Mullins is here for the Christmas days from Randolph-Macon Institute located at Danville Virginia. Miss Mullins has made an excellent record in that noted institution of learning. She is Vice-President of her class.

Prof. Cecil Harris and wife are here this week from Raymond, Mississippi.

Mrs. Evans, the vicar's wife was always interested in the well-ebeing of those under the husband's care. She knew every family in the village and most of their illnesses as well, which is saying a good deal.

One morning she met Mrs. Fogarty in the main street.

"Well, and how is your husband getting on now?" asked Mrs. Evans, with a kindly smile at the old woman.

"Well," replied Mrs. Fogarty, shaking her head, "sometimes he's better and sometimes he's worse, but from the way he growls and takes on when he's better Oi think he's better when he's worse."

Pat had got a job as steward on board a liner and on his first trip he was anxious to have everything as nice as possible so as to please the captain. Accordingly, the first thing he did was to have a good cleanout of the captain's quarters, and among other things he polished up the tea service, of which the captain was very proud.

Unfortunately, he let the teapot slip overboard and it sunk like a stone to the bottom of the sea.

He did not know what to do, but at last an idea struck him, and, approaching the captain, he said:

"Captain, can anything be lost if you know where it is?"

"No, certainly not," replied the captain rather sharply.

"Well, sir, retorted the Irishman, "your silver teapot is at the bottom of the Atlantic."

The teacher was examining her class in what she considered the rudiments of history.

"You, William," she exclaimed, pointing to a small, freckled-faced boy, 'tell me where Elizabeth was crowned queen."

"On the head, ma'am,' was the startling rejoinder.

HEADLEY-ALRED

Last Sunday, Dec. 23, Mr. Otis Headley and Miss Beatrice Alred were happily married, Rev Dock Wells officiating.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT ESSENTIAL TO AGRICULTURAL PROSPERITY

(From Manufacurers Recohrd—December 6, 1923.)

Mississippi under its present upbuilding policy exempts from state and county ad valorem taxes for a period of five years a long list of industries when newly established in that state.

This movement on the part of Mississippi is indicative of the spirit which is abroad in the South for the development of industries.

Mississippi has been largely an agricultural state but its people are fast awakening to the importance of broad industrial development; and industrial development is more important to the farming interests of the South than to any other people. Every new indusery established creates a market for diversified products.

Before the Manufacturers Record was established forty-two yeas ago the writer made a trip through some portions of the South. He had written a good many editorials for a commercial paper with which he was connected urging diversified farming at a time when the Central South was concentrating all of its agricultural work upon cotton. But on that trip of personal study he found, for instance, that in the Valley of Virginia eggs were selling at 10 cents a dozen when they could be sold at all, and the best butter at 10 to 12 cents a pound; and the reason therefore was that everybody in that section raised their own chickens and eggs and made their own butter. In the little villages and towns through that valley were practically no industries whose employes were buyers of farm products, and every farmer necessarily, therefore, had to compete with his neighbor, with no market for his output.

Even worse conditions existed through the cotton regions. The farmer could not diversify, and to some extent this is still true, because he has no adequate home market for his chickens and eggs and butter and fruits and vegetables.

In a study of this kind there came a full realization of the fact that in the industrial development of the South alone could there be found salvation for the farmers from the poverty due to the lack of a market for diversified products. For every bale of cotton they raised a market could be had, even if at an unprofitable price; but for hogs and cattle and sheep and fruits and vegetables they could find no local market. The farmers, therefore, had no stimulation whatever to change from cotton growing to diversified products. Their eggs or their butter would go a-begging for buyers, and their fruits and their vegetables would rot on the ground if in greater quantity than they themselves could consume.

It was a lamentable situation which had come largely as a result of the war, which changed the whole economic life of the South. In antebellum days every plantation, with rare exceptions, was a well-rounded institution. It raised the food-stuffs for the slaves, it raised the cotton and the wool and made the cloth for the slaves and the family. It raised the feedstuffs for the live stock. But with the ending of the Civil War and the breaking up of old plantation life, with every slave and every poor tenant farmer thrown on his own resources, unable to borrow a dollar on anything except cotton or tobacco, he was forced to raise these things to the exclusion of every form of diversified agriculture. It is under this handicap that the farmers of the South have labored. Every new industry built, every mine opened, has created employment for men who are consumers of farm products.

A few years ago a visitor to a North Carolina town, spending a few weeks with a relative, said on his return that his friends had been unable to buy any broiling chickens that spring because as the farmers brought them into town they were all grabbed up by the cotton mill people who were living on the edge of the town. Every cotton mill has been a creator of a demand for food suppiles from the local farmers. Every mine, every furnace, every industry established has been a godsend to the farmers of the surrounding territory.

The South has too large an agricultural population in proportion to the number of people engaged in industrial pursuits. Until its manufacturing interests are more largely developed, until more industrial plants are established there can be no permanent, well rounded, diversified agricultural development, except where it may be carried on in spots here and there for the shipment of fruits and vegetables to Northern and Western markets.

The ideal farm conditions of the South will only be realized when every farmer can sell in the neighboring market every line of diversified products which can be raised by him or his family. The selling of chickens and eggs, and fruits and vegetables will furnish a regular income from week to week and month to month, and bring about more prosperity and a better living condition than can possibly exist in any section which is centered wholly on cotton.

The development of manufacturing in the South is, therefore, the supreme issue without which agricultural prosperity in its broadest sense can never be attained.

It is well, therefore, that Mississippi and every other state in the South should teach its farmer population that their highest prosperity will never be realized until the industrial interests of every state are adequately developed.

Moreover, the creation of new industries furnishes an opportunity for the boys and girls of the South, the lack of which in years gone by drove millions of them out of the South into other sections. Every mill established whether it be cotton or woolen, or woodworking, or any other kind; every furnace built, or mine opened, makes a new opportunity for bookeepers and stenographers, and executive officers, as well as for the manual labor required.

The Southern farmer who does not want to see his boys and girls forced into other sections to seek employment, has this added reason why he should encourage to the utmost extent of his ability the creation of new industries not simply because they may add to the wealth and the income of the state, but because they furnish a market for the mental and physical powers of his own offspring as well as a market for the diversified products of his farm.

This is a doctrine which should be preached in every farm region of the South. The farmer should be made to realize that his best friend is industrial development; that his only hope for permanent prosperity for himself or his children if they remain in the South is through th development of industries which create employment for the people and make a market for the products of the farm.

The politicians who in times past have sought to differentiate between industrial and agricultural development, who have claimed, as some of them have done, that the South is agricultural and therefore is not vitally interested in industrial development, are false teachers. They have brought a curse upon the South. They have hindered its prosperity. They have planted falsehoods in the minds of the farmers and made them believe that industrial and railroad activities are a thing apart and separate from their own lives, and not to be favored by them. This is the falsest doctrine ever preached to a people. It has done infinite harm to the farmers themselves; and now the truth should be proclaimed in every paper in the South day in and day out, year in and year out, in every school, and in every public meeting for the discussion of political or business affairs.

Industrial pursuits and railroad progress must lead the way to larger and broader prosperity for agriculture, or agriculture will never attain its highest possibilities.

LUCKY GIRL

Little Miss Helen Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Watts Moore, was the lucky contestant in a Christmas gift enterprise put on by Alex Rice, the famous clothier of Montgomery.

She won a beautiful little Shetland pony which was forwarded to her and arrived Wednesday. We congratulate the little lady on her good luck.

Prof. Ira Pegues returned last Friday after several days absence from town owing to the illness of his brother at Scottsboro. Prof. Pegues will not return home for the Christmas days but will be here to open school on schedule time in January 1924.

Mr. Vincent Gragg, who is taking a course of medicine at Tulane University, is home for the holidays. He is some cornetist and at a prominent public function he distinguished himself by a solo rendition of taps. The New Orleans papers handed him a nice boquet of publicity on that occasion.

"I wish I could think of something to keep my husband at home in the evening," said Mrs. Johnson.

"Give him a motor car," suggested Mrs. Smithson.

"He'd be out more than ever then.'

"No, indeed. My husband bought one last week and the doctor says he won't be out for six weeks.'

THE PRIZE PASSION

(By Thomas L. Masson)

The world seems to have gone mad on prizes. There is the Nobel prize and the literary prize. There is the Bok peace prize and also the advertising prize. Several magazines offer prizes annually for the best things they publish, and several publishers offer prizes for novels. There is the O. Henry prize for the best story, and the Pulitzer prizes for history, editorials and so on. There are also prizes for poetry. I read a poem the other day which was awarded a prize by a certain fairly respectable state in our more or less respectable Union—I won't say which state it was—and it was something awful. Very soon we shall be erecting monuments to people who haven't won any prizes.

The best thing for us to do, however, is to get this passion for prizes out of our system, and to do this we ought to go right on offering prizes. Here are some suggestions:

For the American parents who will raise and offer for proof a really polite child.

For any college professor who will write an article on either science, history or psychology that will be interesting.

For any husband who, for the space of six months, can, with his wife sitting beside him, park his car anywhere without accident.

For any senator or congressman who, after making a trip to Europe, will agree on his return, not to give his opinion about "conditions" there.

For the man who has a radio set who is willing to acknowledge that it doesn't always work better than any one else's.

For any child who, in the course of a year, will read a list of the children's books provided for him or her, and remain alive.

For any small town in the United States that hasn't had a representative American novel written about it by one of its escaped natives.

Henry Ford Declares He Will Not Be a Candidate Against Calvin Coolidge.

KING OF GREECE IS OUSTED

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

IF CALVIN COOLIDGE is nominated for president by the Republican party next June, Henry Ford will not be a candidate for the office on any ticket. The automobile manufacturer has just made this flat statement. He says he believes the country is "safe with Coolidge" and that he would never for a moment think of running against him on any ticket whatever.

Just before this declaration was made, James W. Helme, a prominent Michigan Democrat, filed in Lansing petitions to put Ford's name on the Michigan presidential primary election ballots next spring. Robert R. Pointer, a leading organizer of the Ford boom, said the third party plans would go on, and that "Mr. Ford will live to change his mind in regard to supporting President Coolidge."

Mr. Coolidge's name also was entered in the Michigan primaries, by the Republicans, and the Coolidge leaders, in Washington and elsewhere, professed to be exultant over the developments. They said the Ford statement would annihilate the Hiram Johnson boom. This the Johnsonites denied, asserting the Ford strength was "nontransferrable," and in this the Democrats agreed with them. Senator King, Democrat, declared: "However great Mr. Ford might be as a manufacturer, his action would not affect 10,000 votes."

To give the reader a chance to speculate on this, part of Mr. Ford's statement should be quoted. Here it is:

"I believe it is the wise and natural thing for the people to agree on the nomination and election of Mr. Coolidge. I am satisfied that 90 per cent of the people feel perfectly safe with Coolidge, and I feel, too, that the country is perfectly safe with him. Why [illegible]?

"Mr. Coolidge has shown a great many qualities that should please his countrymen. I think they feel that Mr. Coolidge means to do right. And when a man means to do right, it is usually quite easy for him to find the way to do right.

"Some persons seem disturbed over the conditions which business will face during the presidential election year. There is no reason why business should be disturbed, if the people by common consent agree they will hold to a good man while they have him. There need be no doubt about the election."

South Dakota also was in the political limelight again last week because its primary law provides that candidates who want their names printed on the ballots must declare themselves openly. To comply with this provision [illegible] formally announced his candidacy and accepted the platform adopted by the Democratic proposal convention. Hiram Johnson announced he would contest with Mr. Coolidge for the South Dakota delegation, but his name will go on the ballot as an independent because the state Supreme court decided it could not be in the Republican column as a minority candidate. President Coolidge accepted the place in the majority column in a letter of [illegible] to the Republicans of the state.

Despite the arguments of George E. Brennan, Democratic leader in Illinois, who favored an uninstructed delegation, McAdoo's managers have decided to enter him in the primaries in that state. Announcement of this brought out the prediction that Mayor Dever of Chicago also would be entered if he would consent, and that he would sweep Cook county and carry a large part of the state.

CONGRESS has gone home for the holidays, having accomplished practically nothing. The house did succeed in organizing after the majority Republicans had given Representative Nelson of Wisconsin a place on the rules committee. But the determination of the Republican majority faction, in the senate to elect Senator Cummins chairman of the interstate commerce committee, and the equal determination of the "radical" Republicans to prevent this completely tied up the upper house. The house ways and means committee dealt a blow to the soldiers' bonus by refusing to give it precedence over the administration's tax reduction bill, which was transmitted by Secretary Mellon to Chairman Green. In a letter to Representative Andrew of Massachusetts, the secretary of the treasury said that if the compensation measure vetoed by President Harding was enacted, the direct cost would total $3,400,526,444, and would average $225,000,000 for the first four years. "If such a commitment is made," said Mr. Mellon, "any reduction of federal taxes upon a comprehensive plan will probably not be seen in this generation."

ONE more European king is out of a job, temporarily and probably permanently. This time it is George II of Greece who, with his queen, Elizabeth, has departed from the country at the urgent request of a majority of the people as represented by the leaders of the republican party. In the recent elections the republicans were victorious and the demand for the establishment of a republican form of government was so vociferous that George was told to withdraw in order that a constituent assembly might conduct a peaceful and unbiased debate of the question. The revolutionary military officials, headed by Colonel Plastiras, were especially insistent upon the forfeiture of the crown by the Glucksburg dynasty. Royalists vainly tried to persuade the American legation to interfere, but the king and queen sailed away quietly to Rumania. Admiral Coundouritis was appointed regent. Both the republican and liberal parties, which together hold 360 of the 370 seats in parliament, favor the return of Venizelos to power, but he was waiting in Paris for the approval of the British and French governments. Queen Marie of Rumania, a powerful figure in the Balkan coalition, is said to be working hard against the setting up of a republic in Greece and hopes for French support. She is the mother of Queen Elizabeth.

PRESIDENT OBREGON of Mexico last week took personal charge of the work of suppressing the rebellion against his government, and if the official reports from Mexico City and Tampico are to be relied upon, he was making a fairly good job of it. The rebel armies were still trying to reach the capital and there were numerous battles with varying results, but the government troops seemed to have the best of the contest generally. What was believed to be the decisive struggle was going on some 65 miles east of Mexico City in a triangle formed by the towns of Puebla, San Marcos and Apizaco. From headquarters of the revolutionists at Vera Cruz reports come claiming many victories. President Obregon was asked by the Associated Press to make a statement of the situation and replied:

"The military rebels, who are headed by Adolfo de la Huerta, have been issuing lies to mislead the public. Up to the present the great majority of the army remains loyal to the government and are fighting energetically against the traitors. I have reason to believe that peace will be restored very quickly, and I will continue to work for reconstruction and progress, initiated by the government over which I have the honor to preside."

APPARENTLY encouraged by a misinterpretation of a passage in President Coolidge's message, the Russian soviet government made a direct appeal to him for opening of negotiations looking toward recognition. Both the President and Secretary of State Hughes promptly denied the request. The latter, in his formal reply to Tchitcherin, said:

"There would seem to be at this time no reason for negotiations. The American government, as the President said in his message to the congress, is not proposing to barter away its principles. If the soviet authorities are ready to restore the confiscated property of American citizens or make effective compensation, they can do so. If the soviet authorities are ready to repeal their decree repudiating Russia's obligations to this country and appropriately recognize them, they can do so. It requires no conference or negotiations to accomplish these results, which can and should be achieved at Moscow as evidence of good faith.

"The American government has not incurred liabilities to Russia or repudiated obligations. Most serious is the continued propaganda to overthrow the institutions of this country. This government can enter into no negotiations until these efforts directed from Moscow are abandoned."

Mr. Hughes followed this up by making public the text of instructions by Zinoviev, president of the communist international and of the Petrograd soviet, to the Workers' Party of America, dated August 1923, telling the communist organization how to carry on the work of undermining the institutions of this country. The Department of Justice vouches for the authenticity of these instructions, which must be interesting reading for those senators and congressmen who, having visited Russia during the summer, are now clamoring for recognition of the soviet regime.

Senators Borah and Norris attacked the administration's Russian policy sharply and Senator Lodge promised the foreign relations committee would investigate the question of recognition. Secretary Ruthenberg of the Workers' Party of America says the alleged Zinoviev letter is fraudulent and was never received by the organization. He accuses the State and Justice departments of devising a "frameup."

RAMSAY MACDONALD, leader of the Labor party, is ready to undertake the government of Great Britain soon after parliament meets on Jan. 8, and it is now taken for granted that he will be given the chance. In a recent conference with Sir John Bradbury, British member of the reparations commission, he emphasized his opposition to a partial and limited inquiry into German affairs and also to an inquiry conducted solely by financial experts, who he thinks might be too much influenced by the French. What he now plans is to call a general world conference to deal with the European situation and, if necessary, to revise the Versailles treaty. However, Mr. MacDonald does not desire to antagonize France, for he aims at disarmament and knows this requires the co-operation of the French.

The Russian soviets tried to make capital out of the Laborite victory in the British elections and sent a congratulatory telegram with an offer of assistance in consolidating the power of labor in England. Mr. MacDonald replied that he would consider the message as never sent. His government when it comes into power will nor be "red" nor even strictly trades union and will be little more friendly to the soviets than was the old government.

TURKEY has finally cancelled the great Chester concessions for the development of Anatolia, and a syndicate of London bankers with a capital of $20,0000,000, has been formed which will try to have the concessions transferred to it.

SERIOUS trouble in Afghanistan threatens. The people are being stirred by Russian agents into a rage against the English and Italians there and 15,000 troops of those nations are held in readiness at Peshawar to dash to Kabul if such a move becomes necessary to save the members of the European legations and other Europeans from massacre. Several British officers and their wives have been murdered.

GREAT BRITAIN, France and Spain have signed a convention for the control of Tangier by which it becomes an open international port —the point upon which the United States was insistent. The administrator for the next six years will be French, with British and Spanish assistants. The international legislative assembly will include French, Spanish, British, Mohammedans and Jews and can veto commercial treaties contracted by the sultan. That monarch will administer the natives.

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 30

REVIEW

THE WORLD FOR CHRIST

GOLDEN TEXT—"They shall abundantly utter the memory of Thy great goodness, and shall sing of Thy righteousness."—Ps. 145:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Favorite Missionary Stories.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What We Have Learned About Missions.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Is My Missionary Duty?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Present Missionary Outlook.

Two plans for the review are suggested:

1. The Summary Method. This will be to lift out the main facts of each lesson and state the leading teaching thereof. The following brief statements are suggested:

Lesson 1. God called Abraham out from his country and kindred to make him the head of the nation through which the Redeemer was to come. The leading lesson is that God blesses men and nations in order that they may be a blessing. This is the universal law of the spiritual realm.

Lesson 2. Israel was given an exalted position in order that she might make God known to the nations. The message they were directed to proclaim was that God was the Savior of all the nations.

Lesson 3. Israel's geographical position afforded the best opportunity to carry the Gospel to the whole world. She was literally in the center of the world. Special privilege carries with it special responsibility.

Lesson 4. The burden of the message of the prophets was that God is great in mercy to all the nations when they penitently turn to Him from their sins.

Lesson 5. Strong drink works great ruin to all. The only way to escape this ruin is to totally abstain from its use.

Lesson 6. The Psalter, the hymn book of the Jewish nation, has as its central message the Spirit of God's grace to the world. Its aim is to call men back to God.

Lesson 7. Jesus Christ was the preeminent missionary. His compassion for the multitude moved Him to send forth laborers in His vineyard. The missionary message to the lost world is that through the sacrificial death of Christ salvation is offered to all.

Lesson 8. Christ saved men in order that they might go to the lost world with the message of His salvation. Those who have experienced His saving power will go forth to tell others.

Lesson 9. The Holy Spirit is the power which will enable the disciples of Christ to witness His salvation. He will not only enable them to witness, but to endure afflictions and trials.

Lesson 10. The Gospel was intended for all the world. God in His providence permits persecutions and strife to scatter the disciples in order that they might witness.

Lesson 11. In spite of opposition, Paul preached the Gospel in the capital city of Rome. He was not ashamed to proclaim it there, for it was the power of God.

Lesson 12. Christ will come and establish His kingdom over the whole earth. Peace and righteousness shall then cover the whole earth.

II. The Question Method. These questions should be assigned to the members of the class the previous week. The following samples are given in Peloubet's Select Notes:

1. What were the missionary characteristics of Abraham?
2. What was God's missionary purpose for Israel?
3. What in Israel's geographical situation made it easy to be a missionary nation?
4. What was the missionary teaching of Jonah?
5. What is the missionary teaching of Israel?
6. Quote a missionary verse of some psalm.
7. Name some particulars in which Christ was the ideal missionary.
9. Why should every Christian be a missionary?
9. Whence came the missionary power of the early church?
10. Describe the gradual outreach of the early church.
11. Why must Christian missions cover the earth?
12. What will Christ's universal reign do for mankind?

The Lord Knoweth Them.

In the lack of all human recognition, surely the Lord knoweth them that are His. His great heart of love will go out to them, till He has done for them exceedingly abundantly above all that they ask or think.—S. F. Smiley.

The Pledge to Us.

The cross of Christ is the pledge to us that the deepest suffering may be the condition of the highest blessing; the sign, not of God's displeasure, but of His widest and most compassionate love.—Dean Stanley.

Decision.

Any worth-while decision is for life, and needs a foundation that will not crumble. When we make a life-decision for God we have his grace and power for our solid foundation.—The Exposition.

MONUMENT OF OLD BRITAIN

Pile of Stones Found in Wheat Field Supposed to Be Part of Shaft Erected in 455.

In the year 1827 a citizen of London spent a holiday at Hollingsbourne in Kent, and under date of July 20 of that year he writes in his diary: "This morning about nine o'clock, in company with Mr. West and Eliza, started in Mr. West's chaise for Chatham. The principal object which arrested my attention on my way thither over Boxley hill was a large pile of stones in a wheat field by the roadside, and on inquiry found it was Kits Coty house.

"Antiquarians tell us that in the year 455 a battle took place between the Britons and Danes on the banks of the Medway at Aylesford, and the stones now remaining are supposed to be part of a monument then erected.

"Upon examination you see two immense stone slabs, each nine tons' weight, fixed on the end in the ground, and inclining toward each other. Another slab is between them for support, and one great stone, of more than twelve tons, lies as a roof transversely over all, making a kind of cell about seven feet each way and the same in height. The stones have no marks of the chisel about them."

The manner of rearing these piles was somewhat ingenious. According to antiquarians, a mound of earth was raised, ascending by a gradual slope. Up this the stones were conveyed on rollers, and dropped by the ends into holes which had been previously dug to receive them. The impost was then placed across them, and the earth removed nearly to the level of the ground; but for this device it would have been impracticable to have raised a stone (the greatest length of which, in the present instance, is twelve feet, and the thickness little less than two feet throughout) to the height of several feet, and this without any description of mechanic powers.

Today Kits Coty house stands as it did when this writer so carefully described it ninety-six years ago. In all probability, however, this cromlech had its origin long before the year 455, and it may even date back to the Stone age.

As to its name, it is possible that this monument was styled "Kits Coty house" (sometimes spelled "Kitts Coty house") during the Middle ages. A Kentish rhyme, of medieval origin, refers to "Kit" going to Canterbury, and it is not at all improbable that Kit was a popular name among the pilgrims who would travel along the Pilgrims' way (an old track running from Winchester to Canterbury), which crosses this very hillside only a few hundred yards down the hill.—Christian Science Monitor.

Nothing Else But.

Newlywed was on his honeymoon and as he had married a very pretty girl he missed no chance of telling everybody with whom he came in contact that he was a married man.

"I want rooms," he announced as he approached the hotel clerk, trying to appear as nonchalant as possible.

"Certainly, sir," said the clerk. "For how many?"

"For myself and wife," replied Newlywed.

"Yes, sir," said the clerk. "Suite, sir?"

"Sweet?" cried Newlywed. "Of course she is."—Exchange.

LEGEND OF FAMOUS STONE

Sovereign Went Wherever Coronation Stone Was Carried, Scotch Belief.

The stone which is called the Coronation stone in England, to most visitors probably the most interesting thing in Westminster abbey, has another and much more ancient name. Its true name is Gaelic—Liath Fhatail, which means in English the "Gray Stone Pillow."

Now, it is certain that Queen Victoria firmly believed that the British royal house descended from King David, and, therefore, from Jacob himself, and that the stone upon which she received her crown was the identical one upon which he rested his head at Bethel when he dreamed of ascending and descending angels and heard of the future greatness of the nation he should found.

The stone is also called the Stone of Destiny. Doubtless this name, or the tradition it enshrined, was the reason that prompted the astute Edward I to carry it from its ancient site at Scone to his own capital of London and deposit it in St. Edward the Confessor's chapel. It has remained there ever since, except for one brief ceremony—the installation of Oliver Cromwell as lord protector in Westminster hall.

But why the Stone of Destiny? Well, not only had all the ancient kings of Scotland, from the remotest dawn of Scottish history, been crowned on this stone, but it was firmly believed that wheresoever this stone went there would go the sovereignty.

That was exactly what Edward sought, so he carried off the Stone of Destiny. Doubtless, he also believed that this "disaster," as the Scots regarded it, would break the spirit of the northern kingdom. In this, of course, he was greatly mistaken, as Bannockburn abundantly proved.

There was another reading of the legend, however. It was this—that wherever the stone went there a Scot should rule. And, with the death of Elizabeth, the crown of England devolved upon a pure Scot, James VI of Scotland becoming James I of Great Britain and Ireland. It is, too, by virtue of his Stuart blood that King George sits today on the throne of Britain.

Since the day that Edward I carried the Stone of Destiny from Scone and deposited it in the abbey every English sovereign, with one exception, has been crowned upon it. That one exception was Mary, the unhappy daughter of Henry VIII and Katherine of Aragon.—London Answers.

Chivalry Has Its Limitations.

It is a difficult feat for a henpecked husband to be chivalrous, as a New Rochelle girl is willing to state. She was walking along a road in Residence park the other afternoon. It looked like rain and so she was delighted when a car drew up to the curb and a young married man of her acquaintance invited her to get in and he'd give her a lift to her house.

She accepted with alacrity; but they had gone only a few blocks when he suddenly announced that she would have to get out. Completely mystified, she complied with his strange request; and then she understood.

Advancing from a cross street, but unaware of their presence, was the jealous wife of the would-have-been gallant.—New York Sun and Globe.

CHAPTER XIV
—17—

A Flower for a Ragged Fellow.

The longboat made a shallow pass between two curving reefs of dreary sand, rising to wind-twisted mangrove clumps at the higher points, and was beached in a quiet lagoon. The red sunrise found them there marooned; silent men wandering over the waterless spaces and then coming back near to a shelter canvas which had been roped to the bushes for Mademoiselle Lestron. Then the last lieutenants of Lafitte sat apart to discuss the matter.

The Seraphine lay plainly visible west and north, her sails idle and a flat, smooth coastal tide between.

"She'll be beating off with the morning breeze," growled Bohon. "How much water did Crackley leave to us?"

"Two casks; bread and the salt horse for three days—no more. We count six muskets and twelve pistols. When the Indians put off from the woods to spy us out we can hold 'em off a bit."

"Aye, for what? Where's a river mouth to make?"

"There is none the Spaniards do not hold. There is no cove either way where you would not find the king's men. The rest is jungle. . . . What does the captain say to it?"

Old Dominique puffed his long pipe tranquilly.

"What does Captain Jean make of it?" repeated Bohon to them.

"There is nothing to make of it," returned the alderman. "Eh, bien! A little while of waiting—a day or two, old robbers, in the sun and without water. At that, something will be tried. Leave it to Jean that something will be tried for ye all. The lady is at breakfast with the captain," he muttered irrelevantly. "He has toasted the bread—he has made the coffee himself for the English lady. Name o' G—d!—I have witnessed that!"

"Captain Sazarac is calling to you," observed the count. "Now, go, all—there is a message."

They went slowly, trudging through the sands with dry muttered jests and hopeless prophecies. Men, for the most part, past the prime of life; some heavy, indeed, with years, coming before their captain with an endeavor to assume a sprightly seaman's bearing. Faithful, rugged, implacable faces—adventurers who had given their wild youth to him.

"It is in my mind to put the English lady and my friend, Monsieur de Almonaster, in the way of safety," said the chief quietly. "There is a chance for them. The rest—I, and you—" He stopped and smiled at them.

"There was a shout. "You—and you!" Jean with them? Nez Coupe came closer, tying tight the bloody silken head scarf about his seal-brown skull. His wound-wrecked face took a ghastly grin. They would then still be rid of the English woman by some miracle! Jean would shake free of his burden of the English woman . . . and be with them once again?

"It can be established that Monsieur de Almonaster is of Spanish lineage; and that Mademoiselle Lestron is of a mission that was working in the pay of the Spanish king—" went on Captain Sazarac evenly. "If, then—they could reach a ship—it is probable they would find refuge. The rest—"

And again the shout of grim humor cut him off. The rest! Why, the rest could expect the reef, the tropic sun . . . and their captain! Still their sour, hopeless humor. Certainly there was nothing for the rest of them!

But now the English woman came out of the hot little shelter. "Now, you will listen to me, also, men of the Seraphine!" she cried suddenly. "To me as well as to your captain! Surely there is a way for us after these treacherous mutineers put off with the schooner! Surely, I know your faithfulness to him and to your ship! What is there to fear for seamen who serve loyally their master and their ship?"

They listened curiously. Monsieur the captain pushed back the iron-gray hair from his temple and listened. It was as if he had heard it all and had no more answer than they.

"See, you!" The girl went on hotly. "Monsieur Sazarac, playing the part of a patriot to his adopted country! I—an English Tory—can testify to that! The attack upon the Genaron—surely I can swear to the admiralty of my country, that it was done for me—in all honor. Monsieur Sazarac's honor—"

There was a stir among them—then the silence again. Old Dominique sighed. The honor of Sazarac . . . the word of Captain Sazarac to the admiralties that his men were good and true!

"For me—in all honor. By you all—honorable men—"

Again she was puzzled by their stir and murmur. The grim Baratarians rubbed their heads in doubt themselves. Beluche walked away and began to cut at the grass with his saber, idly. Nez Coupe joined him, feeling of his wreck of a nose.

The English woman knew she was failing with them. Monsieur Sazarac was looking at her pityingly. Monsieur de Almonaster, with folded arms quietly attentive, his calm face unreadable.

And suddenly this dull impasse was cut through with a shout. Gorgio, on the highest dune, was pointing seaward. "She is coming in! She is making the inlet wi' tide and tops'l air!"

The Seraphine was moving. Then there was another shout. Above her, in the misty offing, another sail showed, dimly and slowly under way.

"The Spanish frigate, sir!" cried Bohon. "Standing in close as she dares, to look the schooner over! Crackley must ha' hammered her rudder on the bar last night—I see a false rig over her end. She's fouled, and he's laying her up in the wooded river out o' the king's big guns!"

De Almonaster shrugged; it meant the end of flight or hiding for those marooned on the open reef. "Ah, well!—" he glanced about: "Mademoiselle, our honorable gentlemen may well look aghast!" He laughed, but to the chief he muttered: "Monsieur Sazarac, we might as well build a fort in the sands and sell our lives dearly. If not the Spaniards, it will be the Campeche savages coming out upon us. If not them, starvation and the sun in a few days. There is no water on this reef, Monsieur!"

Mademoiselle had listened. De Almonaster's tone was light, as if both the gentlemen were affecting a debonair nonchalance for her sake. Monsieur Sazarac's shrug was of delicate dissent to discuss their lives' end in her presence. Then he smiled distantly:

"You will recall the instruction I once gave? You were to be my prisoner, Monsieur, in event the Seraphine

"For Me—In All Honor. By You All—Honorable Men—"

was taken on the seas? You were to be as one held to an unlawful affair against your will—"

De Almonaster flushed to his eyes: "Monsieur! Do you think that I—" he stopped. Sazarac could not offer him life lightly in her presence!

"Undoubtedly the Spaniard will accept you and Mademoiselle Lestron, Monsieur Dominique, also—a municipal officer of New Orleans . . . there is no reason why the Spaniards should not receive and protect you."

"And you?" The younger man could not help the whispered question.

"I take it that the Spaniards will attack the Seraphine in those woods and leave no soul living on her. I assume that the mouth of every scoundrel on her will be closed by death. Then you—with Mademoiselle Lestron to the frigate—and say that you were marooned by the buccaneers, and claiming protection. Why, the Spanish governor at Merida, or Vera Cruz, must know of Carr's plot! Surely he would welcome Mademoiselle Lestron and her friends!"

"Why, are you not, Monsieur, also my friend, and protected with me?" the girl cried wonderingly. "It is, indeed, a fair story—an intrigue to save us all! Why did I not think the Spaniards would protect us when they will suppose that I, am still in the plot of Carr's purpose to aid their schemes? Messieurs, I can safeguard you all to Vera Cruz with that plea!"

They all heard her. But a silence fell. The girl looked eagerly from one weathered face to another of Monsieur Sazarac's few followers. Suddenly Monsieur Sazarac laughed again. Aloud and clearly. He arose and adjusted his neckerchief. There was a gasp, a grumbling bewilderment, and then laughter from all the old buccaneers. They slapped each other on the shoulders, grinning knowingly at their chief.

"My compliments to the lady!" shouted Johanness, "but the climate o' Vera Cruz—my lungs are delicate!"

"And I mind that I might have a humor o' the blood were I there!" mocked Bohon.

"My head—" complained the sour Nez Coupe, "the rest of it might go a-twist at sight of the governor's castle!"

Mademoiselle turned to the captain hotly: "What is this jesting?"

"They mean no disrespect." He motioned to the grinning crew with a serious affection: "Now, get you gone, fellows! See that our wine and little water is stored from the sun. Work the longboat closer in on the tide."

"Sazarac!" they shouted in hoarse laughter and went to obey him.

He saw the hurt pride in her eyes, and the old wonder at his evasion.

She turned to De Almonaster with a pathetic little gesture of despair at the moods of Monsieur Sazarac. She could not understand. She sat drawing figures in the sand, and when she raised her dark eyes, to watch the tall figure out by the sun-wash on the shoals, the young man saw the great tears in them which she presently wiped away.

She dried her eyes with a final, resolute little sob. "Monsieur, do you know—well, once, he came for me . . . it was on the staircase of a court—the Hotel Orleans, and very late. He was going from me, and he had been all chivalry. He turned away, allowing Colonel Carr to boast that Sazarac would not fight, because he wished to spare my name. He said—ah, it was a silly thing for me to do!—but I dropped a flower to him as he left . . . and another man stumbled from the shadows and picked it up."

"Another man?" echoed De Almonaster.

"A ragged fellow," muttered De Almonaster.

"Like one of these old tattered followers. A ghost of a man fading into moonlight!"

A shout arose from the exiles who were dragging the longboat nearer in the shoals. Monsieur Sazarac had paused half-way to them. He saw what had hitherto been hidden by a low spit of sand.

Five armed boats had drawn inshore, coming from the distant Spanish frigate, without doubt. They had crept unnoticed by the refugees on the reef until they were fair in the break of forest wall where there had been the last glimpse of the Seraphine's snowy sail.

"Do you see, Monsieur de Almonaster?" said the chief of the exiles quietly. "It was as I reasoned. The schooner will be taken this night. It is what one would greatly desire. The dons will have no quarter for Crackley's men—there is no escape for them in the river jungle. After the affair, sir—you are to go with Mademoiselle and parley with the Spanish captain."

"And you?" mademoiselle cried again breathlessly and sprang upon the sands. "You and your men cannot stay here to die!"

Monsieur Sazarac smiled with a high serenity. "The sea is wide, Mademoiselle Lestron. Wide, and far is the way to its secret places. I have a mind I said this once to you. O little place in the sea—a secret place, where a secret may be buried, Mademoiselle." He turned to the younger man: "You will make ready to go, Monsieur, when the hour comes. There are two black men of our company who can pull the longboat for you under a flag of truce . . . two black serving men who will not find the air of Vera Cruz conducive to a fatal malady. The rest of us, I fear, must do without the ministrations of the Spanish viceroy's physician as long as we can—possibly a day or so more, ere the doctor calls for us."

His smile still lingered when De Almonaster came closer, torn by a wild bitterness which he, himself, could not fathom. "Jean," he whispered: "I have not spoken. The choice is hers between you and me—and she might save you from Murillo's men! She might plead with the viceroy that she loved you—even Lafitte of the black flag!"

"That is a jest," murmured Sazarac absently, "worthy of John Jarvis, who played the clown to betray me—a plea for Lafitte's life to Murillo!"

Proud Owner.

An Augusta (Maine) man has a shiny new car. One day the radiator overflowed and left rust all over the front of the car. Whereupon the proud owner drew a $5 bill from his pocket and wiped off the stains. Needless to say, he returned it to his pocket after the job was finished and he had shaken the dust from the bill.

Pure Bred Sires Gaining Headway

Twelve Thousand Farmers Now Pledged to Use Only Improved Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farmers who have joined the "Better Sires-Better Stock" campaign, and by so doing pledged themselves to use only pure bred sires of any kind on their farms, now number more than 12,000, according to the latest figures published by the United States Department of Agriculture. This campaign was begun by various states and the department four years ago and has been gaining headway ever since. During the sixteenth quarter of this period, the three months ending September 30, 469 persons enrolled from 11 states. Each farmer who signs the pledge lists the numbers of different kinds of live stock owned, and the records now show that those taking part in this movement for live stock improvement own nearly 500,000 animals and close to 1,000,000 head of poultry.

States With Largest Membership.

The states now having the largest membership are Ohio, with 2,758; Virginia, with 2,227; Kentucky, with 1,508; and Nebraska, with 1,439. Kentucky and Vermont made the largest gains in the last three months. The counties making the best showings in this period were Windsor county, Vermont, and Union county, Kentucky, but Pulaski county, Virginia, is still far in the lead of all counties with a membership of 578 farmers and breeders. During the last quarter 20 new members were added in this county.

The records kept by the Department of Agriculture show some interesting facts concerning the live stock owned by those who have signed the pledges. All the males kept must be pure bred, but females may be pure bred, crossbred, grade or scrub. There are more pure bred females among the swine kept than in any other kind of animals listed—62.9 per cent. Cattle come second in this respect. As high as 72 per cent of the mares are grades; sheep come next in this respect. Only 1 per cent of the swine are classed as scrubs; 1.2 per cent of the sheep; 3.3 per cent of the cattle; and 4.1 per cent of horses. These figures, it much be remembered, apply only to these farms where nothing but pure bred sires are used.

Sign of Identification.

Many of the farms of the members of the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign may be identified from the highway by a sign, supplied by the department, which bears the words "Pure Bred Sires Exclusively Used on This Farm." Each sign bears the owner's membership number.

A list of the officials in the various states who have charge of the better-sires activities has been compiled and may be obtained from the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Study Silo Question.

Study the silo question. A silo saves feed and provides succulence. Silage will carry the stock cattle through in better shape than hay alone, and for winter dairying silage is an absolute necessity.

Seed Questions Asked by Raisers of Stock

Wide Range of Problems From Many States

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The recent work of the United States Department of Agriculture and co-operating states to improve the methods of feeding live stock has stimulated interest in all parts of the country and feeding problem blanks sent to many farmers have been filled out and sent in for replies. A survey made last summer showed that a large percentage of stock raisers and feeders have many puzzling problems and that most of them are searching for better and more economical rations.

A few of the early inquiries received as a result of this new service offered to farmers show a wide range of problems from scattered states. A Maryland farmer asked for good rations for brood sows and growing pigs. Although he had been keeping hogs for eight years, ear corn was practically the only feed used. The department's reply pointed out the principles of successful swine feeding and called attention to the need for good pastures, mineral mixtures, and a well-balanced grain ration. A Kentucky cattle feeder submitted the rations he had been using for finishing for both the spring and fall markets and received suggestions which should save him money the coming year.

Among the other problems the department has helped to solve are the making of dairy rations where certain feeds commonly used are not available; the addition of more desirable crops in the farm rotation; feeding boar pigs to be sold for breeding purposes; the saving of grain by use of other roughages; and many more. Requests for assistance have come from Alabama, Colorado, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

Future of Civilization Depends Upon Highways

The future of civilization, of material, moral and educational progress in America depends upon the highways, says the Manufacturers' Record, in a recent number, which is largely devoted to a discussion of the highway question.

"Bad highways—mud or deep sand roads—spell backwardness. Good highways make certain the advancement of religion, education and wealth.

"Bad highways will drive men and women from the farms into cities, thus reducing the number of food producers and increasing the number of mouths to be fed from a steadily diminishing food supply. That road leads straight to anarchy and Bolshevism, for a decreasing food supply and increasing population congestion breeds discontent, poverty and ultimately anarchy.

"The good highway is the straight road that opens the way to better schools, better religious activities in country churches, better dwellings, and that means better homes, more contentment on the farms, larger food production, with more profit justly earned by the grower and yet a lower cost to the consumer.

"On one side—the safety of civilization, increased food supply and the rounding of the nation's life; on the other side—civilization endangered, food riots a certainty of the future, with a nation sunk in its own bottomless mudholes, sometimes called roads."

Simple Laying Rations Give Good Egg Results

Just as good results can be obtained with a simple mash containing three or four ground grains and meat scrap as from a highly complicated mash containing ten or twelve products, say government poultry feeders. Good production and profitable returns from laying hens are the result of properly balanced rations.

Some simple mixtures of home-grown grains supplemented with meat scraps or milk are: One part oats and two parts cracked corn for scratch feed; the mash to consist of three parts cornmeal and one part meat scrap. A fair amount of green feed should go with the above combinations.

About 6.7 pounds of feed are required to produce a dozen eggs with general-purpose pullets, while egg-laying breeds require about 4.8 pounds. Old hens use a much larger amount of feed to produce a dozen eggs than do pullets.

Dehorning Calves While Young Is Proper Scheme

It is probably better to dehorn the calves than to wait until maturity, but if a cow is particularly troublesome in the herd, as they are occasionally found to be, they probably will suffer less from having their horns removed than the other members of the herd will suffer from allowing them to remain.

Compactly Built Lambs Command Highest Price

A prime fat lamb weighing 85 pounds commands the highest market price. The blocky, compactly built lamb is the one that will make the most desirable finished lamb in the shortest time. Whole barley, kafir, milo, feterita, and shelled corn have practically the same feeding value pound for pound for fattening.

POULTRY

Rat Trap and Dry Mash Feeder in Combination

A combination rat trap and dry mash feeder is a rather novel addition to the poultry house. The feeder is a long box, 1 foot high and 1 foot wide, with a sloped and slatted top, through which the hens put their heads to eat during the day. To convert this into a rat trap, a 4-inch hole was bored in the end of the hopper, a short length of 4-inch stovepipe fastened in the hole, and a bag tied over the other end of the pipe and spread out on the ground. A heavy board cover was hinged to the feed box; this was kept open by means of a hook during the day, but the hook was released, and a small prop with a string attached to it used at night. The string led away to a distant window so that the poultryman could pull it without entering the poultry house and disturbing the rats. A yank at the string let the cover drop and trapped the rats inside. Then, by beating on the cover with a stick, the rats were made to run through the hole, down the pipe, and into the bag, where a few blows killed them. As long as the hens ate from the feeder the rats never seemed suspicious.—L. Harris Hitchcock, Shenateles, N. Y., in Popular Mechanics Monthly.

Pay More Attention to Feeding Poultry Flock

With the coming of cold weather and higher prices for eggs, careful poultrymen pay more attention than ever to the feeding of their flocks, so egg production may start early and be maintained as long as possible. To help meet the demand for information on feeding, the college of agriculture at Ithaca has published a bulletin containing the rations it has found by experiment to be the most efficient. Directions for the use of these feeds and for the management of flocks are also discussed, two things which, in the words of the bulletin, are "as important as the mixtures themselves."

The amount of feed depends upon the appetites of the birds, and no definite rule for feeding will apply to all conditions. Scant feeding in the morning and at noon, followed by a heavy feeding of grain in the litter of the hen house early enough so the birds will find it before dark has given best results. Green feed, oyster shell, and clean, fresh, pure water are also essential.

Equal parts by weight of mash and grain are fed; the former is made as follows for laying hens: 100 pounds each of wheat bran, wheat middlings, cornmeal, ground oats or ground barley, and meat scrap, and three pounds of salt. The grain mixture consists of 500 pounds of cracked corn, 200 pounds each of barley and wheat, and 100 pounds of heavy oats.

A copy of the bulletin will be sent to those who write to the college at Ithaca for E 45.

Important to Note Size and Shape of All Eggs

For those who are shipping eggs to special markets, it is important to watch the size and shape of the eggs, as well as to see how many the hens are laying and what color they are. Too long an egg crushes from the top in shipping, and cuts down the receipts over a period of months; too wide an egg crushes from the side. Customers demand a fair amount of uniformity in size and shape, because it makes more attractive selling. They are willing to pay more for such quality.

"The new breeder of today can make more money by breeding for egg quality than for more eggs," says an eastern authority. "Many who go in for producing more eggs overlook so many things. I recently saw a poultryman who had a number of hens with records up to 300 eggs per year each, and he had a flock of 200 average, but of nearly 100 eggs I saw, from as many different hens, not over 20 would pass for fancy eggs on the market and bring top price. Some would simply have gone as miscellaneous eggs; they were too small and tinted."

Day of Definite Methods.

The day for haphazard methods in breeding poultry has passed into the pages of history. This is the day of definite, accurate methods. The modern poultryman must know definitely the sire and dam of the birds he raises if he is to have their exact pedigree.

Pullets Lay in Winter.

Young stock that begins to lay in the fall of the year will usually lay throughout the winter, the period when eggs are highest in price.

OUR THANKS

Rev. F. A. Gibson, of Route 3, is not only one of the best preachers in the state, but he is also there with the goods as a farmer.

His heart is large and in the right place too, for last Thursday he came in our office and gave us a gallon of cane syrup that is so clear and sweet, that a sight of it would be enough to cause a honey bee to drop dead with envy.

We are indeed grateful for the syrup and are especially pleased to be reminded by it of the fact that such fine, honest, upright christian gentlemen as he is are pleased to be our friend.

Uncle Dock Wells says he married two couples last Sunday 5 minutes apart. His would be a paying job if the matrimonial timber would hold out.

CHRISTMAS VISITORS

Rev. B. C. Glenn and wife, of Greensboro, were the holiday guests of Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Wilkerson.

Mrs. Glenn is sister to Mrs. Wilkerson.

Jones had a terrible toothache and happening to run across and old friend who had just returned from his honeymoon with a young and charming wife he asked him if he knew of a cure for it.

"Look here old chap," said his friend. "I had toothache last week. When I went home my wife kissed me and, do you know, it cured me completely. Why don't you try it?"

"That's a splendid idea," said Jones. "Is your wife at home now?"

The Railroads Know No Holidays

In the factory and on the farm, in city and country, Christmas and New Year's Day are occasions for cessation from all labor. Stores and offices, banks and business houses, Post Offices and Federal Buildings, all close in observance of such holidays.

But has it ever occurred to you that the railroads never have holidays?—that while others are resting, railroads are working; while you are in your home or at the theater or out in your automobile, the railroad man is at his post of duty, giving service?

The business and the operation of the railroads are continuous. Twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, fifty-two weeks a year, the service you need from the railroads is available. Irrespective of the day or the season, there is always the certainty that your transportation requirements, business and personal, will be met.

Just as the railroad as a public utility is always at your service, the railroad man as an individual [illegible] is always at your call. While you are taking your holiday, you may enjoy it all the more in realizing that your safety and accommodation are assured by the railroad men who remain [illegible]
